Public opposition may have sunk L.B. museum plan

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

Long Beach's proposed new art museum is headed for what is certain to be its most crucial test in four years this week.

On Thursday, the council is scheduled to meet in a special budget session, and there's every reason to believe — based on conversations with a number of council members and city officials — that the museum is now doomed.

Maybe not forever. But certainly for the next two or three years — or until the city straightens out its financial affairs and puts itself on a solid economic footing.

A number of council members who appeared to be leaning toward construction of the $15 million project are now apparently inclined to vote against it.

Their turnabout is clearly the result of a series of unprecedented town hall meetings that were held in their respective districts in the past two weeks.

Although the full council could not be canvassed Saturday, five of its nine members said they were prepared to shelve the present plans, which were developed by world-famous architect I. M. Pei. The five include James Wilson, Wallace Edgerton, Eunice Sato, Ernie Kell and Wes Carroll Jr.

Both the council members and city officials were genuinely impressed by what they heard at the meetings, and the consensus in City Hall is that the sessions offered a "legitimate expression of public sentiment."

A number of the meetings had straw votes on the museum, and the project was resoundingly defeated in each instance.

Of the nearly 200 persons who attended the meeting in Edgerton's Second District, only 19 raised their hands in favor of the museum.

Edgerton, in fact, says the meeting persuaded him to change his position on the issue. Only a few days earlier, he adds, he was prepared to vote for the project.

Like many of his constituents, Edgerton now feels that the city may have set its sights too high. "The people realize we need a better museum," he says, "but they also think that maybe we ought to scale down our ambitions."

"After all," he adds, "they have to support it with their money."

Edgerton says he doesn't believe the people are against the museum in principle. They're against what they see as a "Taj Mahal — something possibly too grandiose at this time."

Mayor Tom Clark, perhaps the museum's staunchest supporter on the council, also appears to be retreating from his earlier position.

"The size and cost of the museum", says Clark, "are what

Tighter nuclear plant security urged

U.S. report asks measures against terrorists

By DAVID BURNHAM
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — After a yearlong study, the federal government has concluded that the threat of terrorist actions against the nation's 74 civilian-operated nuclear facilities mandates an immediate increase in security.

The decision of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission concerning the 14 facilities licensed to process highly enriched uranium and plutonium that could be fashioned into home-made atom bombs was explained in letters sent without public announcement on Thursday and Friday to a few key congressmen and involved corporations.

The decision requiring tight new security measures to reduce the chance of sabotage at the nation's 60 nuclear power reactors is scheduled to be announced within four days, according to Kenneth R. Chapman, director of the commission's Office of Nuclear Material Safety and Safeguards.

The NRC backed up its letters with a 57-page report on the dangers of terrorism and what steps were required to thwart these dangers.

Among the steps ordered within six months by the commission were:

—Full field background investigations and other security checks will be required "for selected licensee employees who might effectively conspire to steal or divert special nuclear materials (high-enriched uranium and plutonium)."

—To increase protective firepower, all licensee guards will be "armed with semiautomatic rifles."

—The number of guards will be increased at most facilities, and new training programs will be developed "to insure an adequate knowledge of their duties and responsibilities."

Chapman, in an interview, said the commission had decided that the risk of sabotage of nuclear reactors was somewhat less than the risk of theft of special nuclear materials. But, because of the large size of most civilian reactor sites, he said the challenge of maintaining security around them was "somewhat more difficult."

The report estimated that capital expenses for construction and equipment would be at least $20 million and operating costs for more guards would be from $10 to $15 million a year.

The report said that while there appeared to be few technological problems involved with the security requirements, "there may be some

Carter acts to freeze water work

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is asking Congress to cut off millions of dollars in funding next year for 18 dams and other water projects in 15 states until they are reviewed for economic necessity and environmental safety, it was learned Saturday.

The move brought an immediate outcry from members of Congress in states where the projects are planned or under way. Some are members of the President's party. One called it "a terrible mistake" and said he will fight anyone, including Carter, to get the money restored.

"With drought gripping the western United States, this is no time to kill water projects which are necessary to insure future water supplies, agricultural and economic growth," said Rep. Frank Evans, D-Colo.

OPPONENTS OF the projects cheered Carter's move. One, John Sieh, chairman of the Oahe Conservancy Subdistrict Board in South Dakota, declared: "I feel the President has come out on the side of the people in South Dakota."

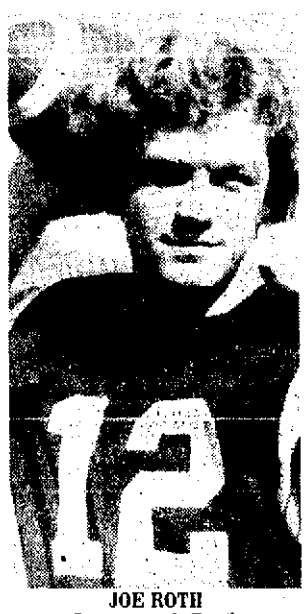

Administration sources said the President has deleted these Bureau of Reclamation projects from the government's 1978 budget:

The Central Arizona Project: Auburn-Folsom South, Central Valley Project in California; the Dolores and Fruitland Mesa Projects in Colorado; the Savery-Pot Hook Project in Colorado and Wyoming; the Garrison Diversion Unit in North Dakota and South Dakota; the Oahe Unit in South Dakota, and the Central Utah Project, Bonneville Unit in Utah.

Tons of dangerous chemical in Ohio River threaten cities

By ANDY LIPPMAN
Associated Press

Changing currents in the Ohio River pushed a 70-ton floating slug of the dangerous chemical carbon tetrachloride past Cincinnati on Saturday, but it left behind a residue which could still contaminate drinking water.

People in at least four river communities upstream from Cincinnati were told to boil their drinking water after the pollutant was discovered Friday, but the order was lifted Saturday night.

"The systems were purged out," said Joe Harrison of the U.S. Environmental Protectional Agency's regional office in Chicago. "There was no longer any concern of the chemical being in the tap water."

MEANWHILE, officials in Louisville, Ky., made hourly tests of the river as the chemical mass moved toward their city.

"There's still no sign," a Louisville Water Co. spokesman reported Saturday night.

Initially, the carbon tetrachloride — which is used in dry cleaning and has been known to cause cancer in laboratory animals — was not expected to reach Cincinnati for several days.

But EPA officials said Saturday they had miscalculated the speed with which the mass was moving.

EPA officials said up to 100 miles of the Ohio River was affected when the chemical entered the big river from a West Virginia tributary, the Kanawha River.

Carbon tetrachloride is used for fire extinguishers, varnish, rubber and solvents, as well as dry cleaning.

The source of the discharge has been traced to an industrial area on the Kanawha in South Charleston, W.Va., but the company involved was not pinpointed.

"WE JUST don't have enough evidence to point the finger at any one company," said James Manwaring, district EPA director at Philadelphia.

However, Alvin Morris, deputy EPA administrator in Philadelphia, said "the focus of our investigation" is on the FMC Corp., one of four companies with permits to discharge prescribed amounts of the chemical.

EPA officials said the reading Friday at a site 30 miles downstream from Cincinnati was over 200 parts per billion. EPA officials say 50 parts per billion is considered dangerous in drinking water.

Federal officials said they planned to monitor water taken into Cincinnati reservoirs last Wednesday and Thursday.

They said that during the normal six-day lag between the time water is taken from the Ohio River and the time it gets to taps in the home, they hoped the levels of the chemical compound could be reduced to normal through vigorous treatment with carbon.

Brown to announce water limits

By JENNIFER KERR
Associated Press

Gov. Brown said Saturday he will suggest a statewide water curtailment figure next week, but expects local districts to decide how to cut back.

"Our goal is to cut water consumption in urban areas by a significant degree," he said after meeting in his Los Angeles office with state officials about the drought.

"One suggested figure is 25 per cent, but that's a preliminary figure," he said.

After the four-hour meeting, he flew to Denver for a meeting today with governors or their representatives from 10 other Western states hard hit by the lack of water. U.S. Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus also plans to attend.

"When I come back next week, I will be prepared to make a recommendation . . . on what I consider is an appropriate amount," Brown said.

His curtailment figure will be "implemented on the local level. The actual form of the curtailment will be developed by local districts," he said, adding that he would make no actual conservation or rationing suggestions.

Brown said he would ask Andrus about federal money to assist victims of the drought, particularly farmers and cattlemen. Help could be in the form of loans or cheaper cattle feed, he said.

"Water is what we need, but when it isn't there, we need help," he said.

Brown said President Carter told him Friday that the federal government "would meet us more than halfway" in helping deal with the drought and its effects.

An aide circulated a report before the meeting showing that the drought has cost California about $4 billion, including $1.4 billion in agriculture losses.

Those attending the meeting included Clarie Dedrick, cabinet secretary for resources; Rose Bird, food and agriculture director; Charles Manfred, emergency services director; Ron Robie, water resources director, and the public utilities commissioners.

"We cannot recreate the halcyon days of 1950, 1960 when we wasted everything," Brown said.

'Modest' defense cut seen

FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration is planning to cut defense spending next year by $500 million, a senior defense official said Saturday.

The official also said President Carter plans future savings in defense spending of between $2.5 billion and $3 billion, including the $500 million, spread over the next several years.

During the election campaign, Carter stated his goal was $5 billion to $7 billion in defense budget savings over-all. Administration officials later said such a goal could not be attained in a single year.

They also have said actual defense spending might increase over the years of the Carter administration but that the savings would be reflected in a slowing in the rate of increase.

CARTER'S revisions to former President Ford's budget are to be announced Tuesday.

A $500 million drop in actual defense outlays in the next fiscal year would reduce Ford's budget for defense outlays from $112.3 billion to $111.8 billion.

Ford had requested defense spending authority of $123 billion. That figure would include outlays over the next four or five years. Carter's plan to reduce that by $2½-3 billion would lower the authorization request to $120.5 billion-$120 billion.

Other sources indicated the cut in the authorization request would total about $2.7 billion, bringing it down to $120.3 billion.

Meanwhile, the Pentagon is working on a long-range plan, including reform of military retirement, to cut heavy personnel costs, the senior defense official said.

The plan, which would test the Carter administration's clout with Congress, will take many months to prepare and probably will not be ready until Carter sends his first full budget to Capitol Hill next January.

Much of the savings in the coming year's budget will be made by slowing down the pace of some new major weapons developments and procurement and in eliminating a few types of weapons, such as the new strike cruiser the Navy had hoped for.

ACCORDING to the senior defense official, some weapons programs will be slowed down because their "military purpose is not clear," while in other cases a production bottleneck has developed because money has been made available faster than the production lines could turn out the hardware.

The hotly contested B1 bomber program and the proposed full-scale development of a new advanced mobile intercontinental ballistic missile are known to be facing a slowdown, with the future of the B1 in particular very much up in the air.

Bella Abzug says no to Carter job offer

Former Rep. Bella S. Abzug said Saturday that she would not accept what she said was an offer by President Carter of a post in his administration. The decision appeared to move her closer to a race for the Democratic nomination for mayor of New York.

Mrs. Abzug did not say what position she had turned down, but it was believed to be a seven-year term as a $50,000-a year member of the Federal Trade Commission, which regulates advertising, polices anticompetitive mergers and issues rules to protect consumers.

Mrs. Abzug spent a half-hour with the President at the White House last Monday and confirmed on Friday that they had talked about a vacancy on the FTC. But associates of Mrs. Abzug said Carter had offered another job not to her liking.

"Although I deeply appreciate President Carter's invitation to me to become part of his administration, I have decided not to accept," Mrs. Abzug said in a statement Saturday.

Secret Service role extended

President Carter has ordered Secret Service protection for former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Susan Ford extended for at least another month but is ending it for former Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller and his family.

On Jan. 18, Congress approved up to six months of protection for Kissinger, Miss Ford and former Treasury Secretary William A. Simon after then-President Gerald R. Ford requested it. Simon turned down the offer for protection before he left office.

The White House makes a monthly review to determine if protection still is needed.

A Secret Service spokesman said Rockefeller's protection would end soon, but he would not pinpoint the date for security reasons.

Black actors hall of fame honors set

For years, black actors were forced into roles that sent them shuffling and bowing across the cinema screen. Now the Black Filmmakers Hall of Fame says it's trying to set the record straight.

The fourth annual induction of new members into the Hall of Fame is scheduled today in Oakland, with an expected crowd of more than 3,000 on hand at the Paramount Theater.

"We felt there was a void as far as black films were concerned," said Don Therrence, this year's program chairman, who also helped initiate the festivities.

The star-studded event, sponsored by the Oakland Museum Cultural and Ethnic Affairs Guild, will be nationally televised on CBS later, Therrence said.

The ceremonies will feature a special tribute to the late Paul Robeson, the accomplished scholar turned actor-singer, whose radical political beliefs doomed his chance at a place in the Hollywood mainstream.

Seven black participants in the film industry will be recipients Sunday of Oscar Micheaux awards, including James Earl Jones, who starred in "Claudine" and the "Great White Hope," and Cicely Tyson, who played a leading role in "Sounder" and in the recent television production of Alex Hailey's "Roots."

Other inductees are the late Dorothy Dandridge, costumer and designer Bernard Johnson, Roscoe Lee Browne, Maidie Norman and Bee Freeman.

There have been 56 inductees in the Hall of Fame thus far.

No early peace talks, Hussein tells Vance

Combined News Services

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance met with Saudi Arabian officials Saturday after being warned by Jordan's King Hussein not to expect a quick resumption of Arab-Israeli peace talks.

Arriving from Amman after a one-day stop in Jordan, Vance went immediately into a meeting with Foreign Minister Saud Al-Faisal. He also met with Crown Prince Fahd Ibn Abdulaziz and Prince Abdullah Ibn Abdulaziz, commander of the Saudi national guard.

Vance was preceded to Riyadh by Palestinian guerrilla leader Yasir Arafat, who said Palestinians would take a position on renewed talks only when they were invtited to the negotiations.

Reporters accompanying Vance were told that Hussein had warned him other Arab nations would have to approve an Egyptian compromise proposal that Palestinians attend peace talks as part of the Jordanian delegation.

Soccer game deaths

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala — A hard-fought soccer game between soldiers and civilians in the village of Tojchiguel boiled over into a postgame battle with guns and machetes in which five persons were killed and 12 others were injured, army spokesmen said Saturday.

Archbishop buried

NAIROBI, Kenya — The body of an Anglican archbishop accused of plotting to overthrow President Idi Amin of Uganda was buried by government agents, unseen by his family, according to the All Africa Conference of Churches. The head of the British section of Amnesty International said in London the quick burial means no impartial inquiry can take place and increases the justification for the charge that Archbishop Janani Luwum and two cabinet ministers who died with him were murdered. Amin and his government said the three men were killed Wednesday in a traffic accident almost immediatley after their arrest. Church officials contend the men were murdered, victims of an Amin bloodbath which some contend has claimed hundreds of lives.

Soviets assail Sadat

MOSCOW — The Soviet Union on Saturday launched a scorching personal attack on President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt, accusing him of spreading "lies, slander and falsification" about the Soviet role in Egypt and the Middle East. A lengthy editorial in the Communist party newspaper Pravda was ostensibly directed at the Egyptian president's memoirs, which are appearing in Egypt. But Pravda charged that Sadat was exploiting them deliberately to foster a "further worsening" of Soviet-Egyptian relations, which appear to have already ebbed to an all-time low.

Town overrun

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Right-wing Christian forces overran a Moslem town in south Lebanon that once served as a base for Palestinian raids into Israel and killed many civilians, according to fleeing residents. One said at least 21 persons were killed; another put the death toll at nearly 50.

Terror bombs hit

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Terrorists bombed a crowded city bus and a downtown air force office in the aftermath of an unsuccessful assassination attempt against Gen. Jorge Videla, head of Argentina's military regime. Several persons were injured when suspected leftist guerrillas lobbed fire bombs at a bus loaded with passengers in an affluent Buenos Aires neighborhood late Friday. That attack occurred only hours after a bomb packing 50 pounds of dynamite exploded on an airport runway as President Videla's executive jet took off. No injuries were reported in the airport bombing. Early Saturday, a powerful explosion blew out windows and splintered doors at an air force office in downtown Buenos Aires. No casualties were reported.

Nigerians riot

LAGOS, Nigeria — Several hundred soldiers attacked the home of Fela Anikulepo-Kuti, Nigeria's best-known musician and most prominent dissident Friday, setting it ablaze and sparking off a five-hour disturbance in the sprawling slum section of Lagos called Surulere. The riot, in which the soldiers beat passerbys with clubs and were themselves pelted with rocks and bottles, was the latest in a series of clashes between civilians and the armed forces under Nigeria's military government.

Cyprus talks

ATHENS, Greece — Clark M. Clifford, a special envoy of President Carter, held his second round of talks on Cyprus and other issues Saturday with Greek Foreign Minister Dimitrios Bitsios. Clifford is to fly to Ankara today for a three-day stay in Turkey, then go on to Cyprus and back to Washington.

Border clash

SALISBURY, Rhodesia — Security officials confirmed Saturday that a Rhodesian patrol had clashed with armed blacks in neighboring Botswana. The government of black-ruled Botswana reported earlier that a white Rhodesian police officer was killed in a gun battle Friday. Officials of Rhodesia's white minority government confirmed this and said another white policeman was wounded. It was Salisbury's first official acknowledgement that its forces had crossed the 550-mile-long frontier in an attempt to track down black Rhodesian guerrillas based in Botswana.

Bella Abzug says no to Carter job offer

Former Rep. Bella S. Abzug said Saturday that she would not accept what she said was an offer by President Carter of a post in his administration. The decision appeared to move her closer to a race for the Democratic nomination for mayor of New York.

Mrs. Abzug did not say what position she had turned down, but it was believed to be a seven-year term as a $50,000-a year member of the Federal Trade Commission, which regulates advertising, polices anticompetitive mergers and issues rules to protect consumers.

Mrs. Abzug spent a half-hour with the President at the White House last Monday and confirmed on Friday that they had talked about a vacancy on the FTC. But associates of Mrs. Abzug said Carter had offered another job not to her liking.

"Although I deeply appreciate President Carter's invitation to me to become part of his administration, I have decided not to accept," Mrs. Abzug said in a statement Saturday.

Top Grammy awards go to Wonder, Ronstadt, Chicago

Combined News Services

After a year's absence Stevie Wonder resumed his dominance of the Grammies, winning three of them — including best male pop singer — in Saturday night's 19th annual Grammy Awards show in Los Angeles.

Wonder, who performed live from Nigeria on the televised portion of the awards show, won the top pop vocalist Grammy for his "Songs in the Key of Life." That album also brought Wonder a Grammy as best producer.

His "I Wish" single track off the album won best rhythm and blues performance by a male singer.

Linda Ronstadt was named best female pop singer for her "Hasten Down the Wind."

"It doesn't mean I'm the best," said Miss Ronstadt, for whom it was the second Grammy. "It just means I won."

The Starland Vocal Band won this year's Grammy as the best new recording act of 1976.

Natalie Cole, last year's best new artist and top R&B female singer, came back this year to win another Grammy for best R&B female singer of the year.

Gas saving?

In response to the gas shortage I have turned off the pilot lights under the top burners of my gas stove; closed the door of the bedroom not used; turned down the water heater from normal half way to warm, and I warm up the remainder of the house in the morning, then turn the thermostat to where it will not come on again. Does this really save much gas? A.T., Long Beach.

Every little bit helps, said a spokesman for the Long Beach Gas Department, and if everyone took the small gas saving measures you have described, the overall saving would be considerable. He said it is impossible to calculate exactly how much gas you are saving, but the minimum saving should be about 40 cubic feet per day. "If 117,000 customers cut back gas consumption by 40 cubic feet, the daily saving would be 4,680,000 cubic feet of natural gas," he said. "And that's a lot." He added the department is preparing a brochure describing various gas saving measures and their effectiveness, which will be enclosed in customers' bills in the next few weeks.

Less for more

Why is it that when we are all being urged to conserve natural gas, the Long Beach Gas Department charges large users of gas less per cubic foot than they do little residential users? If I can get charged less for using more, it would certainly discourage me from trying to conserve this natural resource. V.H., Long Beach.

Residential users require so much more service in proportion to their gas consumption than do commercial users, that the small users are charged a higher base rate, said a spokesman for the Long Beach Gas Department. He said it would be virtually impossible for you to use enough gas to get into a commercial rate category. Commercial customers use tens of thousands of cubic feet of gas per month, but require nearly the same service in terms of pipelines and meter boxes as do residential customers, whose monthly gas consumption averages little more than 6,000 cubic feet. All customers are charged on a sliding scale, he said. Residents pay a base rate of $2.90 for the first 200 cubic feet, then the scale starts sliding downward with a charge of $1.82 for the next 1,800 cubic feet. The base rate for commercial users starts at $50 for the use of 30,000 cubic feet, which works out to about 33 cents for their first 200 cubic feet.

Park pass

In March, my wife and I are going to drive across the United States pulling a camping trailer. Where can we get a sticker for our car which will enable us to pay only $1 or so to park in campgrounds? My friends say it is called a Golden Eagle Seal. F.M., Long Beach.

We know of no such sticker, but we suspect your friends were referring to the Golden Eagle Passport, for persons through age 61, or a Golden Age Passport, for those 62 and older. With either, you can enter any national park, monument or recreational area without having to pay entry fees. With a Golden Age Passport, you also get a 50 per cent discount on facility fees, including those for campgrounds, boat-launching docks and ramps and parking. Fees charged by private concessionaires are not discounted. You can get a Golden Eagle Passport, which costs $10 and is good for one calendar year, at parks, or you can write for or pick up one from the National Park Service, Room 1013, 300 N. Los Angeles St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90012. Payment must be made with a cashier's check or money order. To get a Golden Age Passport, which is free and good for a lifetime, you must appear in person at a park, or a National Park or Forest Service office, and present proof of age, such as a driver's license giving your age or a birth certificate. Medicare cards will not be accepted. Use of both passports is limited to noncommercial, family vehicles, including those with campers and trailers.

Remembered verse

In grammar school a number of years ago I learned a stanza which begins: "So live, that when thy summons comes . . ." Can Action Line locate the poem for me? E.B., Long Beach.

It's from William Cullen Bryant's best known poem, "Thanatopsis," written in 1817. The poem, with death as its theme, was considered by some critics to be the first great poem written by an American. It reads, in part: "So live, that when thy summons comes to join — The innumerable caravan which moves — To that mysterious realm, where each shall take — His chamber in the silent halls of death,— Thou go not, like the quarry-slave at night, — Scourged to his dungeon, but, sustained and soothed — By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave, — Like one that wraps the drapery of his couch — About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams." Bryant's other well-known single poems include "To a Waterfowl," "To a Fringed Gentian" and "A Forest Hymn." Bryant lived from 1794 to 1878.

New case for Secret Witness

At 11 p.m. on Jan. 1, a 24-year-old Paramount woman was attacked as she was walking in the 1000 block on Walnut Avenue, then dragged into an alley where she was raped, pistol-whipped, and shot in the face.

SECRET WITNESS

The victim miraculously escaped death when the bullet passed through her cheek, and is recovering at a Long Beach hospital.

Her attacker was described as a black man 5 feet 7 inches tall, thin, and wearing glasses, a white T-shirt, brown leather jacket and beige pants.

Secret Witness will pay $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and assault/rape conviction of the woman's attacker.

If you have such information, call Secret Witness at (213) 436-2526 between 8 a.m. and midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

Four-murder suspect dead

SANTA CRUZ (AP) — Robert L. Hill, the jail escapee sought in the murder of his wife and three children, was found shot to death late Saturday, the Santa Cruz County Sheriff's office reported.

Sgt. James Bonars said Hill, who had eluded authorities for more than a week, apparently shot himself.

Hill's body was discovered by hikers in a hilly area behind a church summer camp, about 10 miles from here.

On Feb. 11, Hill, 34, was discovered missing from an honor farm at Watsonville, where he was serving a sentence for assault with intent to commit rape. The bloodied bodies of his family were discovered later that day in their modest San Jose home.

The sheriff's office said a single .22-caliber bullet had been fired into Hill's heart and a rifle was found near the body.

Hill's body was found in a clump of trees in a sitting position, and his left forearm was bandaged, a spokesman said.

San Jose police issued a warrant for Hill's arrest last Monday in connection with the fatal stabbing of his wife Susan, 30; their children Florence, 13, and Robert, 11, and a stepdaughter, Debra, 15.

Hill was in telephone contact last Wednesday with his brother Bert Hill, 37, who told police the fugitive had offered to surrender. Bert Hill also said his brother wanted to attend the family funeral Friday in San Jose.

Hill failed to turn himself in and was not seen at the funeral.

Ocean yields bodies of L.A. man and boy

County lifeguards Saturday recovered the bodies of a Los Angeles man and boy who drowned on Southland beaches.

On the Palos Verdes Peninsula, lifeguards assisted by Coast Guard and sheriff's helicopters recovered the body of Gene Cammon, 34, who apparently drowned after he was swept into the water while climbing rocks at 12:15 p.m. near Resort Point.

In El Segundo, lifeguards found the body of 13-year-old Leon Gardner, also of Los Angeles, washed up on Dockweiler State Beach. The youngster disappeared last Sunday near the same spot while trying to rescue a a girl he thought was drowning.

Witnesses said the boy was apparently caught in a riptide as the girl returned safely to shore.

Gas saving?

In response to the gas shortage I have turned off the pilot lights under the top burners of my gas stove; closed the door of the bedroom not used; turned down the water heater from normal half way to warm, and I warm up the remainder of the house in the morning, then turn the thermostat to where it will not come on again. Does this really save much gas? A.T., Long Beach.

Every little bit helps, said a spokesman for the Long Beach Gas Department, and if everyone took the small gas saving measures you have described, the overall saving would be considerable. He said it is impossible to calculate exactly how much gas you are saving, but the minimum saving should be about 40 cubic feet per day. "If 117,000 customers cut back gas consumption by 40 cubic feet, the daily saving would be 4,680,000 cubic feet of natural gas," he said. "And that's a lot." He added the department is preparing a brochure describing various gas saving measures and their effectiveness, which will be enclosed in customers' bills in the next few weeks.

Less for more

Why is it that when we are all being urged to conserve natural gas, the Long Beach Gas Department charges large users of gas less per cubic foot than they do little residential users? If I can get charged less for using more, it would certainly discourage me from trying to conserve this natural resource. V.H., Long Beach.

Residential users require so much more service in proportion to their gas consumption than do commercial users, that the small users are charged a higher base rate, said a spokesman for the Long Beach Gas Department. He said it would be virtually impossible for you to use enough gas to get into a commercial rate category. Commercial customers use tens of thousands of cubic feet of gas per month, but require nearly the same service in terms of pipelines and meter boxes as do residential customers, whose monthly gas consumption averages little more than 6,000 cubic feet. All customers are charged on a sliding scale, he said. Residents pay a base rate of $2.90 for the first 200 cubic feet, then the scale starts sliding downward with a charge of $1.82 for the next 1,800 cubic feet. The base rate for commercial users starts at $50 for the use of 30,000 cubic feet, which works out to about 33 cents for their first 200 cubic feet.

We know of no such sticker, but we suspect your friends were referring to the Golden Eagle Passport, for persons through age 61, or a Golden Age Passport, for those 62 and older. With either, you can enter any national park, monument or recreational area without having to pay entry fees. With a Golden Age Passport, you also get a 50 per cent discount on facility fees, including those for campgrounds, boat-launching docks and ramps and parking. Fees charged by private concessionaires are not discounted. You can get a Golden Eagle Passport, which costs $10 and is good for one calendar year, at parks, or you can write for or pick up one from the National Park Service, Room 1013, 300 N. Los Angeles St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90012. Payment must be made with a cashier's check or money order. To get a Golden Age Passport, which is free and good for a lifetime, you must appear in person at a park, or a National Park or Forest Service office, and present proof of age, such as a driver's license giving your age or a birth certificate. Medicare cards will not be accepted. Use of both passports is limited to noncommercial, family vehicles, including those with campers and trailers.

Ex-patients rally at Norwalk hospital

Protest 'psychiatric inquisition'

By JANICE NELSON
Staff Writer

A coalition of former mental patients rallied in the street in front of scandal-plagued Metropolitan State Hospital in Norwalk Saturday, calling for an end to the "psychiatric inquisition."

The nearly 100 marchers, mostly young, long-haired and a few apparently mentally disabled, accused the hospital system of incarcerating and torturing them for being different, all under the guise of "treatment."

Spokespersons for the coalition — Network Against Psychiatric Assault (NAPA) — protested primarily against involuntary commitment to mental institutions and forced drugging of inmates, once there, to keep them docile.

NAPA spokespersons, whose members have testified before the Little Hoover Commission investigating mysterious deaths at Metropolitan and other state mental hospitals, made no mention of the Metropolitan deaths specifically in the rally. (The as-yet unexplained deaths of three Norwalk patients were ruled "death at the hands of another, other than by accident" last fall by coroner's juries).

Instead, they castigated the mental health establishment as a whole for incarcerating persons — many of whom have done no harm to themselves or others — in mental institutions for indefinite terms without benefit of due process.

While demonstrators-turned-speakers told horror stories of psychiatric incarceration, overdrugging and some resultant deaths, a frail-looking elderly woman carrying a placard wandered about, telling her story to anyone who would listen.

"My son was murdered," said Alice ("Alice means truth" she informed reporters) Smed, shielding herself with the sign from the hot afternoon sun.

"He had been in Korea, and when he came back, he was having flashbacks, so they (the psychiatrists) gave him Mellaril, and a few other drugs.

"He had pneumonia for six months, but the doctors wouldn't take him off the drugs. Last December I found him dead, and the coroner's report said he died from an embolism and bronchial pneumonia, caused from the drugs," she said.

She bit her lip, shaking her head to fight back tears. "Those drugs made him sick for over six months, throwing up all the time. But the doctors wouldn't take him off." Pete Smed was 33, she said.

Current inmates with ground passes at the Norwalk institution gathered inside the hospital's fence, and jeered at the protesters in the street.

"You look crazy!" called one inmate. "Whaddya doin' out there?"

"Protecting your rights!" shouted a young woman, holding tightly to her son's hand, supporting her placard with the other.

"You oughta be in here," he called back. "You're nuts."

But the demonstrators remained undaunted, and chanted "Hugs, not drugs," "1,2,3,4, we won't take your drugs no more" and sang original protest songs through one of several bullhorns used during the half-mile march from the Norwalk Civic Center to the hospital.

The NAPA march was endorsed by some 27 local organizations, the most notable of which were the Southern California American Civil Liberties Union, Los Angeles County National Organization for Women and the Libertarian Party, which is including a mental patients' rights plank in its party platform.

Dr. Isidore Ziferstein, an associate clinical professor of psychiatry at UCLA who serves on the ACLU Mental Services and Mental Health Committee, told the group that mental hospitals are part of the broader problem: total institutions.

He described total institutions as places where people are completely controlled by others with no recourse, such as mental hospitals, board and care homes, prisons and others.

"I deliberately included prisoners and mental patients because society has been doing this to them since time immemorial."

Demonstrators stood up and applauded when Ziferstein denounced his colleagues who use institutions to control patients as a means of "social control."

"When a doctor begins to function like policemen," he quoted another psychiatrist as saying, "he should take off his white coat, put on a blue one and become a policeman."

Libertarian Party spokesperson Sally O'Connor explained how mental institutions are used in the Soviet Union to remove "unwanteds" from society and discredit them, and told of mass extermination of mental patients in Nazi Germany.

"That's a nice plan," she shouted into the bullhorn, "you round up all the people who aren't perfect and kill them off!"

In this country, Ms. O'Connor continued, "the issue is not whether or not patients need help — it's whether or not they want it." She said the state should concern itself with criminal actions.

If a person is convicted of a crime, she said, that is the state's responsibility — and if the person, while in jail, wants to seek psychiatric help, that is the individual's choice.

NAPA member Judy Trasker told the group how she was institutionalized for seven days for being "role deviant" — a lesbian.

"In order to get out, I had to agree to six months of therapy. You know what that consisted of? My therapist dug up dates for me, and when that didn't work, he offered himself!

"And you know what? I'm still a lesbian!" she announced before the cheering crowd.

Allan Brill from the Medical Committee for Human Rights summed up the situation for the crowd. "It's important to take a look at society in general ... unemployment, anger, confusion, alienation on jobs, loss of identity — these are all factors that cause people to get in a place society calls crazy.

"But I'm not mad (crazy) — I'm angry!"

Brill described the government's composite of the violence-prone individual: "He's young, male, urban, poor and black.

"What does that say about the people who are angry?"

L.B. health facility chief calls Cal. suit 'harassment'

By DICK HOWLAND
Staff Writer

The executive director of the Long Beach-based Family Health Program responded Saturday to the state attorney general's accusations that his health organization has defrauded the state of $1.7 million in Medi-Cal payments.

"The attorney general is subjecting us to harassment and has irresponsibly exceeded his authority," said Dr. Robert Gumbiner.

Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger's office filed a civil suit Friday in Los Angeles Superior Court against the Family Health Program (FHP), of 2925 Palo Verde Drive.

The suit says the directors of FHP have illegally spent Medi-Cal funds over the last five years to invest in other corporations they control, to develop land and to finance personal ventures such as renting recreational cabins and boats.

THE SUIT names as defendants FHP, its directors and several private development companies. It seeks full accounting of FHP's business affairs, removal of its directors and injunctions to stop its activities.

Dr. Gumbiner said FHP serves close to 50,000 clients in the Long Beach area and Orange County. Only 15,000 of these clients are subsidized with matching state and federal funds through Medi-Cal on a fixed monthly rate per recipient. The others recieve care for an annual fee, often paid by employers or unions.

Gumbiner said Younger's suit is a "punitive and vindictive" response to Gumbiner's refusal to allow the attorney general to audit FHP.

"One of Younger's representatives told me about two weeks ago his office wanted to audit our organization," Gumbiner said. "The state Corporate Commissioner is already auditing us at the attorney general's request, and I couldn't understand why the attorney general had to do an additional audit.

"IT'S A WASTE of taxpayers' money to have both audits. The Corporate Commissioner is entitled to audit us under the Knox-Keene Act. But the attorney general has no right to audit us.

"We've been audited countless times and I was tired of being harassed. So I was hard-nosed and refused to cooperate with the attorney general's request for an audit.

"Then the attorney general comes back in a punitive and vindictive way with this suit," Gumbiner said.

He said Younger's office deliberately filed and announced the suit late Friday before a three-day weekend so the press would be unable to reach FHP during regular business hours for a response to the suit.

He also said the attorney general was trying to influence the state Department of Health, which is reviewing a renewal of FHP's Medi-Cal contract. The contract expires March 1 and Gumbiner says the health department had informed him it would decide by Tuesday whether or not to approve the renewal.

"IT'S A VERY unusual, manipulative procedure to file the suit right before the health department makes its decision," Gumbiner said. "I would hope the attorney general's accusations will not influence the health department's decision, which should be an independent judgment based on the principle that you're innocent until proven guilty."

He said FHP meets all the requirements for approval to participate in Medi-Cal as a qualified health maintenance organization. "If there's one qualified pre-paid health plan in the country, we're it."

A report by the federal General Accounting Office concluded last December that FHP spent public money through loopholes in the law or shrewd business practices that were questionable but not necessarily illegal.

Gumbiner acknowledged that he is a major stockholder in ten profit-making subsidiaries of the non-profit FHP, but denied that there was anything sinister or improper about it.

"I FOUNDED FHP in 1960 and it has succeeded because I was willing to invest my own capital. We're one of the few prepaid health plans not built with government grants.

"I'm a stockholder in the subsidiaries because I had the resources to put up the first capital for them. Now we're being persecuted for following the American spirit of entrepreneurship.

"It's a crazy suit," he said of the attorney general's action. "If we were guilty of all these terrible things the suit says, why didn't they take us to criminal court instead of suing in civil court?"

He said the people who will suffer the most if the suit persuades the health department not to renew FHP's Medi-Cal contract will be the 15,000 Medi-Cal recipients served by FHP.

FHP last week mailed notices to these Medi-Cal recipients warning them they may have to look elsewhere for medical care if FHP's contract is not renewed. Gumbiner said the notices were sent because the health department appeared to be dragging its feet on the renewal.

4,000 opera lovers driven out of Met by 'tear gas'

NEW YORK (AP) — An aerosol can filled with a substance like tear gas exploded Saturday night on an escalator at the Metropolitan Opera in Lincoln Center, driving 4,000 persons from the theater.

The fumes filled the lobby and drifted into the main theater just before the curtain rose on the 8 p.m. performance of "Dialogues of he Carmelites" by Poulenc. The performance was delayed an hour.

Several persons were reported taken to Roosevelt Hospital to be treated for minor irritation of the eyes and throat, an opera spokesman said.

Francis Byrnes, Fire Department battalion chief, said the can spewed its contents throughout the lobby as it rode the escalator to the upper levels of the massive theater.

Several thousand persons in evening dress milled about in the plaza outside the opera as police and fire officials worked to clear the building of people and smoke.

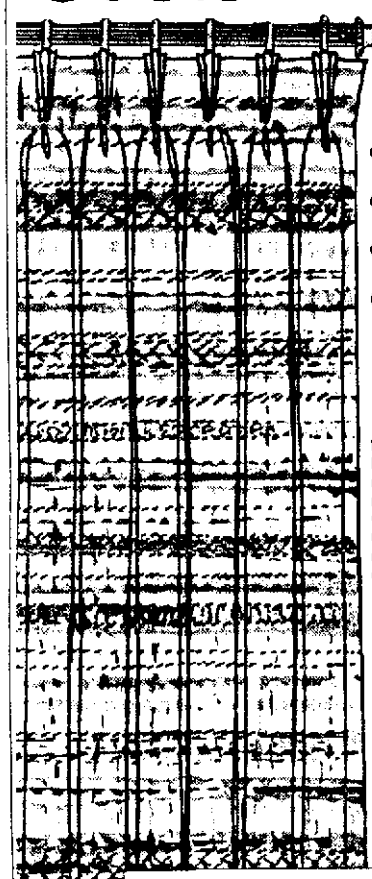

Rose Aconsky, 65, said she was in the lobby when the device exploded. "The fumes choked me and I couldn't see. There was a lot of pushing on our way out, and when I got out to the street I fainted," she said.

Mrs. Aconsky said she declined medical attention and returned to the opera.

A member of the audience said guards began shepherding people out the exits just as the opera was scheduled to begin.

Wendy Hanson, a spokeswoman for the opera, said she had no idea why someone would release tear gas as the performance opened. "I can't see any political reason for it. Maybe they just don't like opera," she said.

Ex-patients rally at Norwalk hospital

Protest 'psychiatric inquisition'

By JANICE NELSON
Staff Writer

A coalition of former mental patients rallied in the street in front of scandal-plagued Metropolitan State Hospital in Norwalk Saturday, calling for an end to the "psychiatric inquisition."

The nearly 100 marchers, mostly young, long-haired and a few apparently mentally disabled, accused the hospital system of incarcerating and torturing them for being different, all under the guise of "treatment."

Spokespersons for the coalition — Network Against Psychiatric Assault (NAPA) — protested primarily against involuntary commitment to mental institutions and forced drugging of inmates, once there, to keep them docile.

NAPA spokespersons, whose members have testified before the Little Hoover Commission investigating mysterious deaths at Metropolitan and other state mental hospitals, made no mention of the Metropolitan deaths specifically in the rally. (The as-yet unexplained deaths of three Norwalk patients were ruled "death at the hands of another, other than by accident" last fall by coroner's juries).

Instead, they castigated the mental health establishment as a whole for incarcerating persons — many of whom have done no harm to themselves or others — in mental institutions for indefinite terms without benefit of due process.

While demonstrators-turned-speakers told horror stories of psychiatric incarceration, overdrugging and some resultant deaths, a frail-looking elderly woman carrying a placard wandered about, telling her story to anyone who would listen.

"My son was murdered," said Alice ("Alice means truth" she informed reporters) Smed, shielding herself with the sign from the hot afternoon sun.

"He had been in Korea, and when he came back, he was having flashbacks, so they (the psychiatrists) gave him Mellaril, and a few other drugs.

"He had pneumonia for six months, but the doctors wouldn't take him off the drugs. Last December I found him dead, and the coroner's report said he died from an embolism and bronchial pneumonia, caused from the drugs," she said.

She bit her lip, shaking her head to fight back tears. "Those drugs made him sick for over six months, throwing up all the time. But the doctors wouldn't take him off." Pete Smed was 33, she said.

Current inmates with ground passes at the Norwalk institution gathered inside the hospital's fence, and jeered at the protesters in the street.

"You look crazy!" called one inmate. "Whaddya doin' out there?"

"Protecting your rights!" shouted a young woman, holding tightly to her son's hand, supporting her placard with the other.

"You oughta be in here," he called back. "You're nuts."

But the demonstrators remained undaunted, and chanted "Hugs, not drugs," "1,2,3,4, we won't take your drugs no more" and sang original protest songs through one of several bullhorns used during the half-mile march from the Norwalk Civic Center to the hospital.

The NAPA march was endorsed by some 27 local organizations, the most notable of which were the Southern California American Civil Liberties Union, Los Angeles County National Organization for Women and the Libertarian Party, which is including a mental patients' rights plank in its party platform.

Dr. Isidore Ziferstein, an associate clinical professor of psychiatry at UCLA who serves on the ACLU Mental Services and Mental Health Committee, told the group that mental hospitals are part of the broader problem: total institutions.

He described total institutions as places where people are completely controlled by others with no recourse, such as mental hospitals, board and care homes, prisons and others.

"I deliberately included prisoners and mental patients because society has been doing this to them since time immemorial."

Demonstrators stood up and applauded when Ziferstein denounced his colleagues who use institutions to control patients as a means of "social control."

"When a doctor begins to function like policemen," he quoted another psychiatrist as saying, "he should take off his white coat, put on a blue one and become a policeman."

Libertarian Party spokesperson Sally O'Connor explained how mental institutions are used in the Soviet Union to remove "unwanteds" from society and discredit them, and told of mass extermination of mental patients in Nazi Germany.

"That's a nice plan," she shouted into the bullhorn, "you round up all the people who aren't perfect and kill them off!"

In this country, Ms. O'Connor continued, "the issue is not whether or not patients need help — it's whether or not they want it." She said the state should concern itself with criminal actions.

If a person is convicted of a crime, she said, that is the state's responsibility — and if the person, while in jail, wants to seek psychiatric help, that is the individual's choice.

NAPA member Judy Trasker told the group how she was institutionalized for seven days for being "role deviant" — a lesbian.

"In order to get out, I had to agree to six months of therapy. You know what that consisted of? My therapist dug up dates for me, and when that didn't work, he offered himself!

"And you know what? I'm still a lesbian!" she announced before the cheering crowd.

Allan Brill from the Medical Committee for Human Rights summed up the situation for the crowd. "It's important to take a look at society in general ... unemployment, anger, confusion, alienation on jobs, loss of identity — these are all factors that cause people to get in a place society calls crazy.

"But I'm not mad (crazy) — I'm angry!"

Brill described the government's composite of the violence-prone individual: "He's young, male, urban, poor and black.

"What does that say about the people who are angry?"

L.B. health facility chief calls Cal. suit 'harassment'

By DICK HOWLAND
Staff Writer

The executive director of the Long Beach-based Family Health Program responded Saturday to the state attorney general's accusations that his health organization has defrauded the state of $1.7 million in Medi-Cal payments.

"The attorney general is subjecting us to harassment and has irresponsibly exceeded his authority," said Dr. Robert Gumbiner.

Atty. Gen. Evelle Younger's office filed a civil suit Friday in Los Angeles Superior Court against the Family Health Program (FHP), of 2925 Palo Verde Drive.

The suit says the directors of FHP have illegally spent Medi-Cal funds over the last five years to invest in other corporations they control, to develop land and to finance personal ventures such as renting recreational cabins and boats.

THE SUIT names as defendants FHP, its directors and several private development companies. It seeks full accounting of FHP's business affairs, removal of its directors and injunctions to stop its activities.

Dr. Gumbiner said FHP serves close to 50,000 clients in the Long Beach area and Orange County. Only 15,000 of these clients are subsidized with matching state and federal funds through Medi-Cal on a fixed monthly rate per recipient. The others recieve care for an annual fee, often paid by employers or unions.

Gumbiner said Younger's suit is a "punitive and vindictive" response to Gumbiner's refusal to allow the attorney general to audit FHP.

"One of Younger's representatives told me about two weeks ago his office wanted to audit our organization," Gumbiner said. "The state Corporate Commissioner is already auditing us at the attorney general's request, and I couldn't understand why the attorney general had to do an additional audit.

"IT'S A WASTE of taxpayers' money to have both audits. The Corporate Commissioner is entitled to audit us under the Knox-Keene Act. But the attorney general has no right to audit us.

"We've been audited countless times and I was tired of being harassed. So I was hard-nosed and refused to cooperate with the attorney general's request for an audit.

"Then the attorney general comes back in a punitive and vindictive way with this suit," Gumbiner said.

He said Younger's office deliberately filed and announced the suit late Friday before a three-day weekend so the press would be unable to reach FHP during regular business hours for a response to the suit.

He also said the attorney general was trying to influence the state Department of Health, which is reviewing a renewal of FHP's Medi-Cal contract. The contract expires March 1 and Gumbiner says the health department had informed him it would decide by Tuesday whether or not to approve the renewal.

"IT'S A VERY unusual, manipulative procedure to file the suit right before the health department makes its decision," Gumbiner said. Coachella '50 years ahead' in saving water COACHELLA (AP) — It's not that the Coachella Valley doesn't want to conserve water. But water officials say they were 50 years ahead of their time.

"We just wish our brothers to the north had shown as much foresight and planning," says Keith Ainsworth, assistant general manager for the Coachella Valley Water District. "We think we might have some ideas for Northern California on conservation."

The district's board of directors had some curt answers, in the form of a resolution, last week to questions from Gov. Brown's office about what they are doing to save water.

Asked how much the district expected to cut water use in 1977, the board replied "No reduction." To an inquiry about any curtailments now, the board answered "None."

The board had a longer answer to the question about what measures should be taken to mitigate the effects of the drought. But the recommendations concerned Northern California, particularly the Sacramento River Delta.

"This district believes the present drought proves the need for water conservation and water storage facilities on the northern coastal rivers," the resolution said.

The board suggested repealing wild river legislation, building a peripheral canal to get water directly through the delta and halting use of water for fish and wildlife in the delta.

"When you have to make a decision for fish and wildlife or human beings, we think human beings have a little higher priority," Ainsworth said. "We think that water is wasted."

The Riverside County district gets its water from two sources. Irrigation water is imported from the Colorado River and serves 88,000 acres, Ainsworth said. Domestic water comes from deep wells and serves about 50,000 persons.

"We feel that if we cut back on irrigation water it will put farmers out of work, and there's no way to move it north. If we could conserve water and send it to Northern California we would," he said.

His ideas for conservation include stopping open drainage of waste irrigation water. In the Coachella Valley, all irrigation water is reclaimed.

"In the '30s, our board of directors would not provide for the design of anything that would induce the waste of water," he said. "Our board said water was too valuable to bring it across the desert and then waste it."

He also suggests that meters be put on houses. He said a friend in Sacramento pays $3 a month for all the water he wants to use, while Coachella houses and farms are metered and pay by the amount of water used. Also, Coachella has had a reverse rate system for four or five years; the greater the use, the higher the rates.

Arrest in threat to bomb pipeline

ANCHORAGE (AP) — FBI agents have arrested an Anchorage man on charges he threatened to blow up portions of the trans-Alaska pipeline if a $225,000 ransom was not paid.

Mount C. Dulinsky, chief FBI agent here, said the man, Ralph Leroy Peters, 42, was arrested in an alley when he went to pick up the money late Friday night.

Dulinsky said the arrest ended nearly two weeks of tense bargaining by letter and phone between Peters, British Petroleum and Standard Oil Co. of Ohio.

The companies, which own a major share of the $8 bilion pipeline, were told that bombs were placed along the line in sites that would take a year to repair, authorities said.

West's governors meet on drought

DENVER (AP) — Governors from 11 western states, faced with a drought that has forced water rationing in portions of California, meet at the governor's mansion in Colorado today to discuss solutions to their common water problems.

Gov. Richard Lamm called the meeting, saying he felt an exchange of information among the states and between the states and the federal government would be very helpful.

"The drought problem is of significant concern to the western portion of the United States, and the anticipated severity grows every day," Lamm said.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus heads the list of officials expected to be on hand. Governors who have said they will attend are Robert Straub of Oregon, Jerry Brown of California, Dixy Lee Ray of Washington, Thomas Judge of Montana, Richard Kneip of South Dakota, James Exon of Nebraska, Scott Matheson of Utah, David Boren of Oklahoma, John Evans of Idaho and Arthur Link of North Dakota.

The governors of Texas, New Mexico, Kansas, Arizona, Nevada and Wyoming sent their representatives.

Jim Monaghan, Lamm's chief environmental aide, said the meeting is Andrus' first with western governors since he was named Interior Secretary.

"IT WILL BE A loose working session," Monaghan said. "We'll be trying to get opinions out on what should be done about western water problems. It will be a sharing of experience and expertise."

Monaghan said Lamm hoped the meeting would be as productive as a Western Governors Conference last December.

"Gov. Lamm has been keenly interested in what we can do on the regional level, not just as a group of states," he said. "We're trying to provide a climate to discuss and probe the regional impact of the drought."

Roy Romer, Lamm's chief aide, said providing that climate could be difficult. Television crews and reporters were expected to jam the governor's mansion, and Romer said special arrangements were being made to accommodate them.

"We don't want this to turn into a circus," he said.

Monaghan said Jack Barnett, executive director of the Western States Water Council, would open the session by briefing the governors. Andrus also was expected to speak on the significance of a federal drought council established last October.

Gal. gas prices creep upward

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gasoline prices crept upward through the first half of February across Northern and Central California with some costs up about half a cent a gallon, the California State Automobile Association said.

The AAA's price survey, released just before the three-day Washington's birthday weekend, shows regular gasoline now selling for an average price of 66 cents a gallon at full-service stations. That's an increase of four-tenths of a cent over January prices.

The same grade, when purchased at self-service outlets, increased less than two-tenths of a cent and now averages 60.4 cents a gallon.

Premium gasoline at full-service stations currently averages about 69.8 cents a gallon, with 65 cents the average at self-service stations.

Bradley will convene panel

Associated Press

A panel will be convened to draw up plans to cut water use if stricter conservation efforts become necessary here, Mayor Tom Bradley said Saturday in Los Angeles.

He said the committee will be modeled after the panel which put together the city's energy curtailment program during the height of the 1973-74 energy crisis.

The mayor said the panel would draw up both voluntary and mandatory water use plans.

"The drought problem is of significant concern to the western portion of the United States, and the anticipated severity grows every day," Lamm said.

Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus heads the list of officials expected to be on hand. Governors who have said they will attend are Robert Straub of Oregon, Jerry Brown of California, Dixy Lee Ray of Washington, Thomas Judge of Montana, Richard Kneip of South Dakota, James Exon of Nebraska, Scott Matheson of Utah, David Boren of Oklahoma, John Evans of Idaho and Arthur Link of North Dakota.

The governors of Texas, New Mexico, Kansas, Arizona, Nevada and Wyoming sent their representatives.

Jim Monaghan, Lamm's chief environmental aide, said the meeting is Andrus' first with western governors since he was named Interior Secretary.

"IT WILL BE A loose working session," Monaghan said. "We'll be trying to get opinions out on what should be done about western water problems. It will be a sharing of experience and expertise."

Monaghan said Lamm hoped the meeting would be as productive as a Western Governors Conference last December.

"Gov. Lamm has been keenly interested in what we can do on the regional level, not just as a group of states," he said. "We're trying to provide a climate to discuss and probe the regional impact of the drought."

Roy Romer, Lamm's chief aide, said providing that climate could be difficult. Television crews and reporters were expected to jam the governor's mansion, and Romer said special arrangements were being made to accommodate them.

"We don't want this to turn into a circus," he said.

Monaghan said Jack Barnett, executive director of the Western States Water Council, would open the session by briefing the governors. Andrus also was expected to speak on the significance of a federal drought council established last October.

...al. gas prices creep upward

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Gasoline prices crept upward through the first half of February across Northern and Central California with some costs up about half a cent a gallon, the California State Automobile Association said.

The AAA's price survey, released just before the three-day Washington's Birthday weekend, shows regular gasoline now selling for an average price of 66 cents a gallon at full-service stations. That's an increase of four-tenths of a cent over January prices.

The same grade, when purchased at self-service outlets, increased less than two-tenths of a cent and now averages 60.4 cents a gallon.

Premium gasoline at full-service stations currently averages about 69.8 cents a gallon, with 65 cents the average at self-service stations.

Bradley will convene panel

Associated Press

A panel will be convened to draw up plans to cut water use if stricter conservation efforts become necessary here, Mayor Tom Bradley said Saturday in Los Angeles.

He said the committee will be modeled after the panel which put together the city's energy curtailment program during the height of the 1973-74 energy crisis.

The mayor said the panel would draw up both voluntary and mandatory water use plans.

Girl who had everything—and nothing

By DON HARRISON
Associated Press

DALLAS — The house in Dallas' most exclusive suburb is dark now. Inside, time has stopped — since nine days before Christmas.

Presents, wrapped and unwrapped, lie scattered about the expensively appointed living room. A $1,200 Persian rug is an island of blue on a large expanse of burnished hardwood.

In the kitchen, a box of cereal is on the counter. Glasses stand beside the sink. The cabinets hide $100 place settings of china. Several copper ornaments adorn one wall. Their $200 price tags were never removed.

The over-all impression is that someone will be back momentarily. As one neighbor put it: "She left it just like I would leave mine if I were going to the grocery store."

BUT the bedroom tells a different story.

Mail is beginning to stack up on the bed. Most of the envelopes appear to be bills, past due notices from nearly every fashionable store in Dallas.

Among the bills are invitations to boutique openings, tennis matches, opera functions — and a reply from the Australian consul in San Francisco to a visa inquiry.

A photograph shows a blonde woman with a prominent nose and a sprinkling of freckles across high cheekbones. It's the face of an independent woman, strong, but friendly. It is also the face of a fugitive.

ON the morning of Dec. 16 — a Thursday — Kay Ann Munch had wheeled her new Buick through North Dallas traffic. She parked in front of Concrete Construction Supply Inc. in nearby Garland, where she was a stockholder and company treasurer.

She had been with the firm since July 1974.

"She came in and stayed about 20 minutes and said she had an errand to run," said CCS president Larry Smith. "I understand she went home, packed her bags and left."

Smith said her disappearance was prompted by an outside audit of CCS books that was to start the same day. The following Tuesday, 13 months of checks and financial statements were discovered missing.

On Jan. 27, she was indicted on a charge of theft over $10,000.

JON Sparling, head of the district attorney's special crimes section, said investigators have substantiated losses totaling $120,000 so far.

"It looks like she hit 'em for about $20,000 the last week," said Sparling.

A note found by bankers in the Lakewood Bank & Trust night depository Monday morning said the gold Buick was in the Delta Airlines parking lot at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport.

There were other notes, all written, strangely enough, on cheap tablet paper and signed simply "Kay." They went to friends and her brother in Murdock, Neb., explaining cryptically that she had deep personal and psychological problems and was leaving.

Two of her friends, Ted and Suzanne Terry, received their note in Saturday's mail: Kay was the legal guardian of their two small children if they both died.

"She's not their guardian anymore, and that's official," said Terry, a Braniff co-pilot.

TERRY had known Kay about nine years, his wife, about four.

"She was supposed to spend Christmas with us," said Mrs. Terry. "She always did . . . When she left, we were told she took her furs and all her jewelry, even her costume jewelry. And she remembered to take some pictures of the kids. I feel sure we'll hear from her. I looked for something around Christmas and then around Valentine's Day but . . ."

The Terrys were fooled. Both said they had wondered where Kay got her money and assumed it came from an inheritance.

Rex and Sharon Jobe were fooled, too.

"She told me the money was from farm income," said Mrs. Jobe, vice president and legal officer of the Republic of Texas Corp. "I come from the same background. So, it was natural for me to believe it."

Saturday, following their friend's disappearance, the Jobes met with mutual friends. Everyone in the group had long before exchanged house keys, so when one went on vacation, others could take in the mail and such.

They decided to go to Kay's to look for some clue as to what made their friend leave.

"There were several deposit slips for $5,000 apiece from CCS," said Mrs. Jobe.

A second trip produced the missing socialite's personal check register dating back to June 1975.

"THERE were $108,000 worth of deposits from CCS in her account at First National," Mrs. Jobe said.

The two women knew each other about four years.

"Kay had no money back then. She drove a VW. Like all of us, she wanted it . . . Kay wanted to keep up. The clothes, the friends she selected . . . We all live in nice houses, have nice jobs . . . I think Kay had a hard time keeping up. I think she wanted us to like her for what she had, not who she was."

If the Jobes and the Terrys were fooled, they weren't alone.

Kay's neighbors say they were delighted when the bright, vivacious blonde moved in next door.

"This lovely, charming young woman moved into our neighborhood, our lives and our hearts," said a neighbor. "She, well, she had class. Sometimes, she would walk with us in the evenings. But around the end of October, that stopped. I sort of got the feeling, 'Don't call me, I'll call you.' I never talked to her after that."

HER friends, and her boss, believe the house and its furnishings led to the alleged embezzlement. That, and the need to keep pace in circles in which furs, diamonds, and expensive cars are required passports.

Kay Munch's Buick has been repossessed and sold. Her home, in the $100,000 range, is in the hands of a court. CCS hopes to recoup some of its losses by selling the house and its furnishings.

No one knows where Kay, a onetime farm girl from Pratt, Kan., has gone.

"Wherever she is, she's riding first class," said Mrs. Jobe.

Editor's Note — Kay Munch had it all: the right clothes, the right friends, the right address. She hosted the right number of black-tie parties in her Highland Park home during the opera season. For at least a year, the money flowed like good wine. And then on Jan. 27, the 34-year-old Miss Munch was indicted by a grand jury. Authorities say she embezzled at least $100,000 from her employer. But Kay didn't wait around for the law. She vanished, leaving her expensive friends wondering who she really was — or is.

Four men driven to grab hostages and headlines

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press

Anthony Kiritsis. Stephen Gregory. Jesse Coulter. Frederick Cowan. Two weeks ago, nobody knew their names — until they drew their guns.

In just seven days, in separate acts in separate cities, the four men were driven to seize guns and hostages and headlines.

—From Feb. 8 to 10, Kiritsis, 44, held a loan company executive hostage in an apartment in Indianapolis. He feared he would default on a $130,000 loan and said he was swindled by the company.

—On Feb. 9, Gregory, 27, held seven hostages in a Silver Spring, Md., bank. He had just had a fight with his girl friend. He didn't say what he wanted. He said he was "trying to make a point."

—On Feb. 11, Coulter, 42, and his former wife, Rita, held eight hostages in a home for unwed mothers in Cincinnati. He wanted to find the son he gave up for adoption 20 years ago. He said he was inspired by the television epic "Roots."

—On Monday Cowan, 33, killed five men, held two hostages and finally killed himself in a moving company warehouse in New Rochelle, N.Y. He was angry because he had been suspended from work.

THEY CAME from different places with different personalities and problems, and their violence was triggered by different things: Business problem, love problem, family problem, job problem.

In common they had their desperation and their similar solutions.

They didn't know each other. But perhaps, one after the other, they became aware through the media that other desperate men chose desperate paths.

Perhaps, although no one can say for sure, Anthony Kiritsis was their mentor.

"There is suggestive evidence that violence is contagious and that the media does influence the person," said Dr. Bernard Diamond, psychiatrist and law professor at the University of California at Berkeley. "Every time one case gets wide publicity, there are apt to be other cases following shortly. We don't know why.

"JUST because several cases occur in succession does not mean they influence each other," he cautioned. "Statistically, there might be a clustering. But there is a suggestion that people do get ideas from each other."

Diamond said: "There is no one type of person. The common denominator in such cases is that they are all very desperate people and emotionally unstable.

"They commit these terminal acts because they believe they have reached the end of the line and have no recourse. They are not afraid of consequences. They are not deterred by punishment."

Prof. Daniel X. Freedman, chairman of the department of psychiatry at the University of Chicago Medical School, agrees on the contagious quality of violence. "When there is a crowd and someone starts to yell, someone else feels free to yell," he said.

"IN RARE, outrageous cases that catch public attention, someone has tilted the balance for people who feel unloved, unwanted, unattended to and aggrieved.

"There gets to be a kind of prototype. When someone shows the way, it is easier to follow. In terms of hostage taking, the mode of violence is related."

The four men who made headlines last week had different personalities. But a common thread of violence and frustration ran through their lives.

Kiritsis, a former car dealer and small business developer, is the son of Greek immigrants. Driven to work and succeed, the short, stocky man even chopped down trees and dynamited the stumps on his own property.

"All he knows is work," said his brother James. "He's no crazy, but there's a point where a guy breaks. He's just a businessman fighting for his damned life."

OUTGOING and volatile, Kiritsis was quick to like and to dislike. He also received demolition training in the Army.

Court records show that years ago he once held a hatchet over his sister's head and demanded $50,000 from the family. Another time he fired a gun at his brother. Charges were dismissed in both cases.

He never married and said he wouldn't even own a dog because he didn't want to get attached.

Before his drama ended, the short, stocky Kiritsis told a television audience: "I'm a goddamn national hero, and don't you forget it."

Gregory, a highly decorated Vietnam veteran, went from job to job, variously working as a bill collector and employment counselor. Thin and unimposing, he was described as effective and personable, but an undependable worker.

Some days, he just wouldn't show up.

"HE JUST seemed to have problems— wife problems, girl friend problems, family problems, problems and more problems," a former employer said.

Gregory had received a four-month prison term and various fines for offenses ranging from destruction of property to assault and battery. Last June he was arrested for loitering and trying to start a fight.

One hostage, Jennie Libbee, said he told her he had tried to get psychiatric counseling but was turned down.

"He wasn't nasty or malicious. He was just messed up," she said. "I think the main reason he did it was to get attention. It was like he was saying, 'Hey, look at me. I need help.'"

COULTER says he spent most of his adult life making a living in big city streets, according to a copyrighted article in the Cincinnati Post.

"I've been a hustler, a pimp, a dealer, a con man. You name it. I learned it all from the white man," said Coulter, a black who lives in Utica, Mich. "That gun—I got that from the white man."

He apparently had a simmering dislike for whites and was especially abusive to white hostages, telling one pregnant 15-year-old girl that he didn't like white babies, an employe at the home said.

His attorney said Coulter brooded for years about the son he gave up for adoption. He was bitter that his family had been split up during slavery, the attorney said, and identified strongly with "Roots."

He served three years in Michigan State Prison for a shootout with police in Flint.

COWAN, a laborer and bodybuilder, was a Nazi worshipper. He was obsessed with his hatred for blacks and Jews and his love for guns of all kinds.

On his last day he went gunning for the Jewish dispatcher who had suspended him for rudeness. Four of the men he killed were dark-skinned.

Frustrated in pursuit of the tall blondes he adored, Cowan never married and lived with his parents in an upstairs arsenal behind lacy curtains.

He had few close friends and was rather serious and quiet. Still, co-workers who drank beer with him described him as a nice guy.

Four men driven to grab hostages and headlines

By VICTORIA GRAHAM

In just seven days, in separate acts in separate cities, the four men were driven to seize guns and hostages and headlines.

—From Feb. 8 to 10, Kiritsis, 44, held a loan company executive hostage in an apartment in Indianapolis. He feared he would default on a $130,000 loan and said he was swindled by the company.

—On Feb. 9, Gregory, 27, held seven hostages in a Silver Spring, Md., bank. He had just had a fight with his girl friend. He didn't say what he wanted. He said he was "trying to make a point."

—On Feb. 11, Coulter, 42, and his former wife, Rita, held eight hostages in a home for unwed mothers in Cincinnati. He wanted to find the son he gave up for adoption 20 years ago. He said he was inspired by the television epic "Roots."

—On Monday Cowan, 33, killed five men, held two hostages and finally killed himself in a moving company warehouse in New Rochelle, N.Y. He was angry because he had been suspended from work.

THEY CAME from different places with different personalities and problems, and their violence was triggered by different things: Business problem, love problem, family problem, job problem.

In common they had their desperation and their similar solutions.

They didn't know each other. But perhaps, one after the other, they became aware through the media that other desperate men chose desperate paths.

Perhaps, although no one can say for sure, Anthony Kiritsis was their mentor.

"There is suggestive evidence that violence is contagious and that the media does influence the person," said Dr. Bernard Diamond, psychiatrist and law professor at the University of California at Berkeley. "Every time one case gets wide publicity, there are apt to be other cases following shortly. We don't know why.

"JUST because several cases occur in succession does not mean they influence each other," he cautioned. "Statistically, there might be a clustering. But there is a suggestion that people do get ideas from each other."

Diamond said: "There is no one type of person. The common denominator in such cases is that they are all very desperate people and emotionally unstable.

"They commit these terminal acts because they believe they have reached the end of the line and have no recourse. They are not afraid of consequences. They are not deterred by punishment."

Prof. Daniel X. Freedman, chairman of the department of psychiatry at the University of Chicago Medical School, agrees on the contagious quality of violence. "When there is a crowd and someone starts to yell, someone else feels free to yell," he said.

"IN RARE, outrageous cases that catch public attention, someone has tilted the balance for people who feel unloved, unwanted, unattended to and aggrieved.

"There gets to be a kind of prototype. When someone shows the way, it is easier to follow. In terms of hostage taking, the mode of violence is related."

The four men who made headlines last week had different personalities. But a common thread of violence and frustration ran through their lives.

Kiritsis, a former car dealer and small business developer, is the son of Greek immigrants. Driven to work and succeed, the short, stocky man even chopped down trees and dynamited the stumps on his own property.

"All he knows is work," said his brother James. "He's no crazy, but there's a point where a guy breaks. He's just a businessman fighting for his damned life."

OUTGOING and volatile, Kiritsis was quick to like and to dislike. He also received demolition training in the Army.

Court records show that years ago he once held a hatchet over his sister's head and demanded $50,000 from the family. Another time he fired a gun at his brother. Charges were dismissed in both cases.

He never married and said he wouldn't even own a dog because he didn't want to get attached.

Before his drama ended, the short, stocky Kiritsis told a television audience: "I'm a goddamn national hero, and don't you forget it."

Gregory, a highly decorated Vietnam veteran, went from job to job, variously working as a bill collector and employment counselor. Thin and unimposing, he was described as effective and personable, but an undependable worker.

Some days, he just wouldn't show up.

"HE JUST seemed to have problems— wife problems, girl friend problems, family problems, problems and more problems," a former employer said.

Gregory had received a four-month prison term and various fines for offenses ranging from destruction of property to assault and battery. Last June he was arrested for loitering and trying to start a fight.

One hostage, Jennie Libbee, said he told her he had tried to get psychiatric counseling but was turned down.

"He wasn't nasty or malicious. He was just messed up," she said. "I think the main reason he did it was to get attention. It was like he was saying, 'Hey, look at me. I need help.'"

COULTER says he spent most of his adult life making a living in big city streets, according to a copyrighted article in the Cincinnati Post.

"I've been a hustler, a pimp, a dealer, a con man. You name it. I learned it all from the white man," said Coulter, a black who lives in Utica, Mich. "That gun—I got that from the white man."

He apparently had a simmering dislike for whites and was especially abusive to white hostages, telling one pregnant 15-year-old girl that he didn't like white babies, an employe at the home said.

His attorney said Coulter brooded for years about the son he gave up for adoption. He was bitter that his family had been split up during slavery, the attorney said, and identified strongly with "Roots."

He served three years in Michigan State Prison for a shootout with police in Flint.

COWAN, a laborer and bodybuilder, was a Nazi worshipper. He was obsessed with his hatred for blacks and Jews and his love for guns of all kinds.

On his last day he went gunning for the Jewish dispatcher who had suspended him for rudeness. Four of the men he killed were dark-skinned.

Frustrated in pursuit of the tall blondes he adored, Cowan never married and lived with his parents in an upstairs arsenal behind lacy curtains.

He had few close friends and was rather serious and quiet. Still, co-workers who drank beer with him described him as a nice guy.

Winds fan fire out of control at Stanislaus

SONORA (AP) — A fire driven by 20 mph winds roared out of control over 250 acres of brush Saturday along the south fork of the Stanislaus River in Stanislaus National Forest.

More than 250 fire fighters from the U.S. Forest Service and the California Division of Forestry were rushed to the fast-moving fire.

A Forest Service spokesman said it was the largest California fire this year.

The fire started shortly before 11 a.m. on Grant Ridge about five miles north of Columbia and was reported by a private pilot, officials said.

The CDF said no aircraft were available for aerial chemical drops at this time of year, when fire danger normally is minimal.

The blaze topped Grant Ridge, which is honeycombed by old mine shafts and in a rugged area difficult for fire crews to reach.

No cause for the fire had been determined.

Carter acts to put brake on water projects

Missouri, and Lukfata Lake in Oklahoma.

The sources said the projects are being reviewed for environmental safety and economic necessity. They said Carter is asking Congress not to fund the projects for fiscal 1978 until the review is completed.

The sources said Carter will announce his move Monday or Tuesday.

There were indications, however, that some Bureau of Reclamation officials were not aware the move was coming. Jerry King, special assistant to the bureau's regional director in Sacramento, said he does not know what the move means.

Colorado's Rep. Evans said he was told "the acting director of the Bureau of Reclamation — which builds the dams — did not know the cuts were coming until the day before it happened."

"THE CARTER people have made a terrible mistake," said Evans, referring to the Colorado projects.

"Last year, the House Public Works Appropriations subcommittee approved $800,000 in construction funds for the Dolores Project after the Ford people had failed to include it in the budget," he said.

"About 20 interested persons from southwestern Colorado came to help testify about the importance of these projects and it worked, so I am confident the subcommittee will be responsive again."

King said the main contract for the Auburn Dam, on the American River in the foothills east of Sacramento, was to have been awarded this fall, although there is a new study of earthquake faults under way near the site.

Work on the Folsom-South Canal, to divert water from the Auburn Dam and the already existing Folsom Dam into another canal running south to the San Joaquin Valley, already had been suspended pending study of American River flow.

Conservationists say the diversions would harm fish.

THE AUBURN-Folsom South development was budgeted for $480 million. It was scheduled for completion in 1981. The project's budget for the next year was about $40 million.

Rep. Carl Perkins, D-Ky., said he disagreed with Carter's action.

"A new administration usually has to go through a shakedown over its priorities and we have had setbacks before," Perkins said.

"The great need for these projects and programs has been proven over and over again, so cutting them out of the budget won't make the need for them go away."

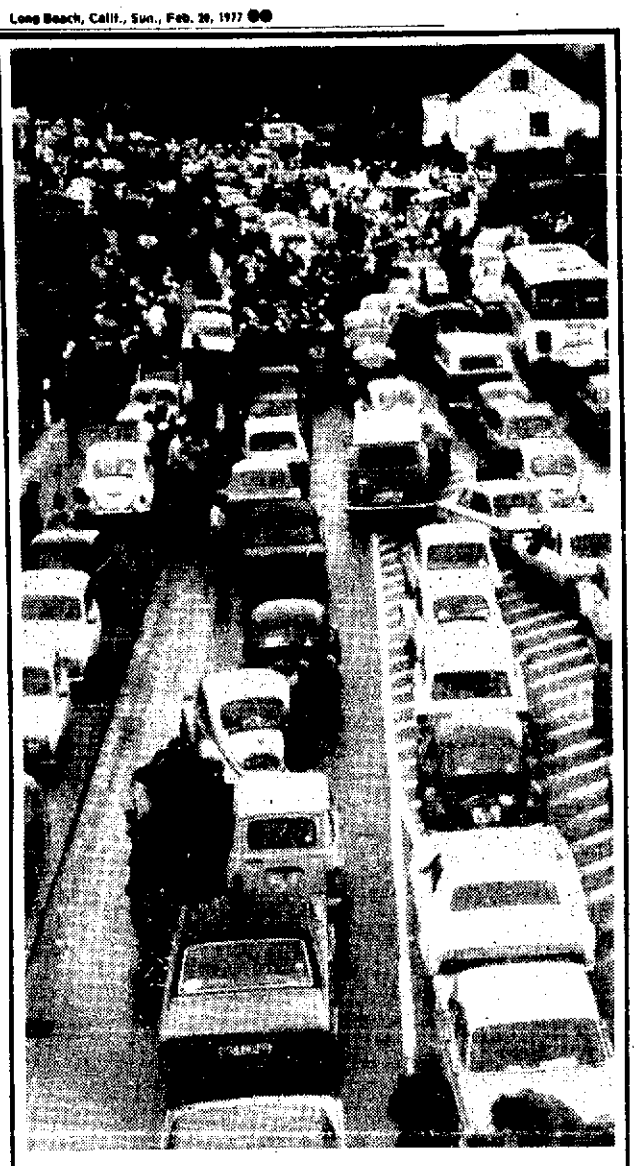

The Lukfata Dam project near Broken Bow, Okla., is opposed by the Oklahoma Wildlife Federation. It was planned as a flood control measure and supported by former House Speaker Carl Albert.

The $30 million project is on the Glover River, described as the last free-flowing river in Oklahoma.

THE OAHE project is a canal to carry water fom the Oahe Reservoir on the Missouri River near Pierre, S.D., into north-central South Dakota. Work has begun on a pumping plant to lift water from the reservoir into the canal.

The project would cost an estimated $362 million over several years.

The Corps of Engineers estimated last December that the cost of building the proposed Dickey-Lincoln hydro-electric project in Maine had risen 15 per cent to $533 million.

Massive protest shuts down traffic

Roads around the small West German town of Brokdorf, 50 miles north of Hamburg, were jammed Saturday by vehicles bringing in some 30,000 protesters against a nuclear power plant. bother citizens. I certainly feel we need the facility, but maybe we have to reevaluate our position and see if we can reduce the museum's costs."

Clark also cites what, for the council, has become a sensitive issue in recent months: the credibility of city government. "It would be difficult for the council to maintain its credibility if we were to get a negative feeling and then turn around and endorse the project," he explains.

For that reason, he indicates, the council is not likely to vote for construction of the museum at this time.

Until last month, when City Manager John Dever told the council that Long Beach could have the museum if the council was prepared to support a number of belt-tightening measures, the museum's prospects appeared to have reached their nadir.

In large part, the dismal outlook was the product of a gloomy fiscal report from then Acting City Manager Robert Creighton, who warned the council that the city faced a possible financial crisis in the immediate years ahead.

Creighton also told the panel that upland oil money, which the city had once counted on as a possible means of financing the museum, could no longer support the $15 million project, and that the money would have to come from tax revenues.

However, when Dever assured the council on Jan. 18 that the city could have the museum without a tax hike, the museum's hopes were suddenly regenerated.

But it was a short-lived regeneration, for once the Town Hall meetings were held, it became apparent to city officials that public sentiment simply didn't support the project.

"Maybe when Long Beach is thriving again, we can have a big museum," says Councilwoman Eunice Sato.

Right now, she's convinced that the city must look for alternatives — a view shared by some of the other council members.

Councilman Wes Carroll Jr. says the council will probably send the entire matter back to the manager for a study of less costly alternatives — including the possibility that the museum might be housed in the new Pacific Terrace Convention Center, the Queen Mary or perhaps some existing building.

"I think we'll have to put the museum on the back burner and look at the financial situation down the line," says Councilman James Wilson.

IF THE Town Hall meetings proved anything, they proved that Long Beach citizens are concerned with keeping property taxes in line, improving police protection and maintaining or improving basic municipal services, including recreation, according to James Phelps, the city's director of budget and research.

Roth dies of cancer

early this year that Roth was fighting cancer a second time, he said: "It didn't come as any great shock. You always know once you have it that there's a chance it may crop up again.

"If everyone starts coming up and feeling sorry for me, I'm afraid it will start making me feel that same way. I mean, I fear I won't be the same Joe Roth anymore. Instead, I'll be Joe Roth underdog, the guy everybody feels sorry for. I don't want that.

"Really, just figure I'm a normal guy. What if some guy sitting down there on the street corner got cancer? Would everybody make a big fuss?"

Three years ago, when he was a freshman football player at Grossmont College near San Diego, Roth noticed a bleeding scar on the left side of his face. He thought it was caused by his football helmet rubbing against the skin.

It was cancer, a biopsy revealed, and Roth underwent an operation, which left a four-inch scar on his neck.

Late in the 1976 football season, a disappointing one for Roth after his sensational year as a junior, he noticed a lump on his chest. An examination revealed it was a recurrence of the cancer, malignant melanoma, and he began receiving chemotherapy treatment under the care of Dr. Friedman of the UCSF California Medical Center.

Nuclear power end asked

Ex-EPA head Train says nations can't cope

WASHINGTON (AP) — The former head of the Environmental Protection Agency says U.S. energy policy should aim for "the phasing out and eventual elimination of all nuclear power."

Russell E. Train, who first headed the President's Council on Environmental Quality and then the EPA under former Presidents Nixon and Ford, expressed concern about nuclear waste and the security of dangerous nuclear materials. Train indicated his skepticism about the ability of governments to cope with these problems.

Train resigned as EPA head last month when President Carter took office.

Train's antinuclear views, which had not been expressed while he was in office, were published in a newsletter of the Conservation Foundation, the environmental organization he directed before assuming his government posts. He is rejoining the foundation on a part-time basis.

The foundation quoted Train as saying he is "most bothered by the (nuclear) waste management and plutonium safeguard problems, both nationally and internationally, and . . . the proliferation of nuclear weapons capabilities around the world.

"I just don't see how it can be managed," Train added. "I don't see the international institutions to manage these matters effectively at this stage of the world.

"What I have come to see more and more is a technology increasingly out of control in terms of the ability of human society to manage it."

Train said he would not expect the nation to eliminate nuclear power "overnight."

But he said, "It seems to me we need to develop a very firm commitment to the elimination of nuclear power as a source of energy on the earth."

The Nixon and Ford administrations supported the expansion of nuclear energy. Carter and his top energy officials have taken the position that nuclear energy is a "last resort" but will be needed in substantial quantities.

formidable psychological obstacles."

"There is considerable reluctance expressed by industry to accept responsibility for protecting special nuclear materials against determined violent assaults," the report said. It added:

"This reluctance stems from industry beliefs that (1) this level of threat should be a federal responsibility, (2) the necessary levels of defense would be damaging to company images, (3) the government should first resolve several issues seen as impediments and (4) the future of safeguard requirements offers too many uncertainties."

The report added that several licensees had said they were sufficiently concerned to consider withdrawing from activities involving highly enriched uranium and plutonium.

But Chapman said industry uneasiness about the new requirements had considerably lessened since the investigative work for the report was completed last July.

The key security decision was the commission's judgment that facilities handling special nuclear material must be safeguarded against possible threats involving a conspiracy of two or more persons inside the facility, combined with an outside group of terrorists armed with automatic rifles, recoilless cannons and plastic explosives.

Up until now, the commission had believed the maximum credible threat was one employe and three outsiders armd with pistols and rifles that could be obtained legally.

This change led to the decision to require the major stiffening in security.

The report said the change was not based "upon a perception of imminence of threat to the nuclear fuel industry; rather, it is based upon the judgment of the task force as to what constitutes a prudent level of protection."

While urging that the new safeguards be installed as rapidly as possible, it said that in the absence of specific serious threats, emergency measures "such as a shutdown of the industry or the immediate use of federal forces is unwarranted."

The 14 facilities handling special nuclear materials — mostly for use in the reactors powering Navy ships—are in California, Tennessee, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Virginia, Washington and Ohio and on the average have 300 to 400 employes, according to Chapman.

But if President Carter's administration embraces the plans of former President Ford's administration to embark on the use of plutonium in the present generation of reactors and the development of the controversial fast breeder reactor, the various required security measures will directly affect a far larger part of the population.

Quake jolts Aleutian Islands

HONOLULU (AP) — An earthquake measuring 6.9 on the Richter scale was reported Saturday in the vicinity of the Near Islands in the North Pacific Aleutian chain.

The Honolulu Observatory said there were no immediate reports of damage.

The U.S. Geological Survey said the tremor in the Bering Sea was centered about 170 miles west of Attu Island, westernmost of Alaska's Aleutian chain, and about 100 miles south of the Komandorskie Islands, part of the Soviet Union.

The earthquake occurred at 2:34 p.m. PST.

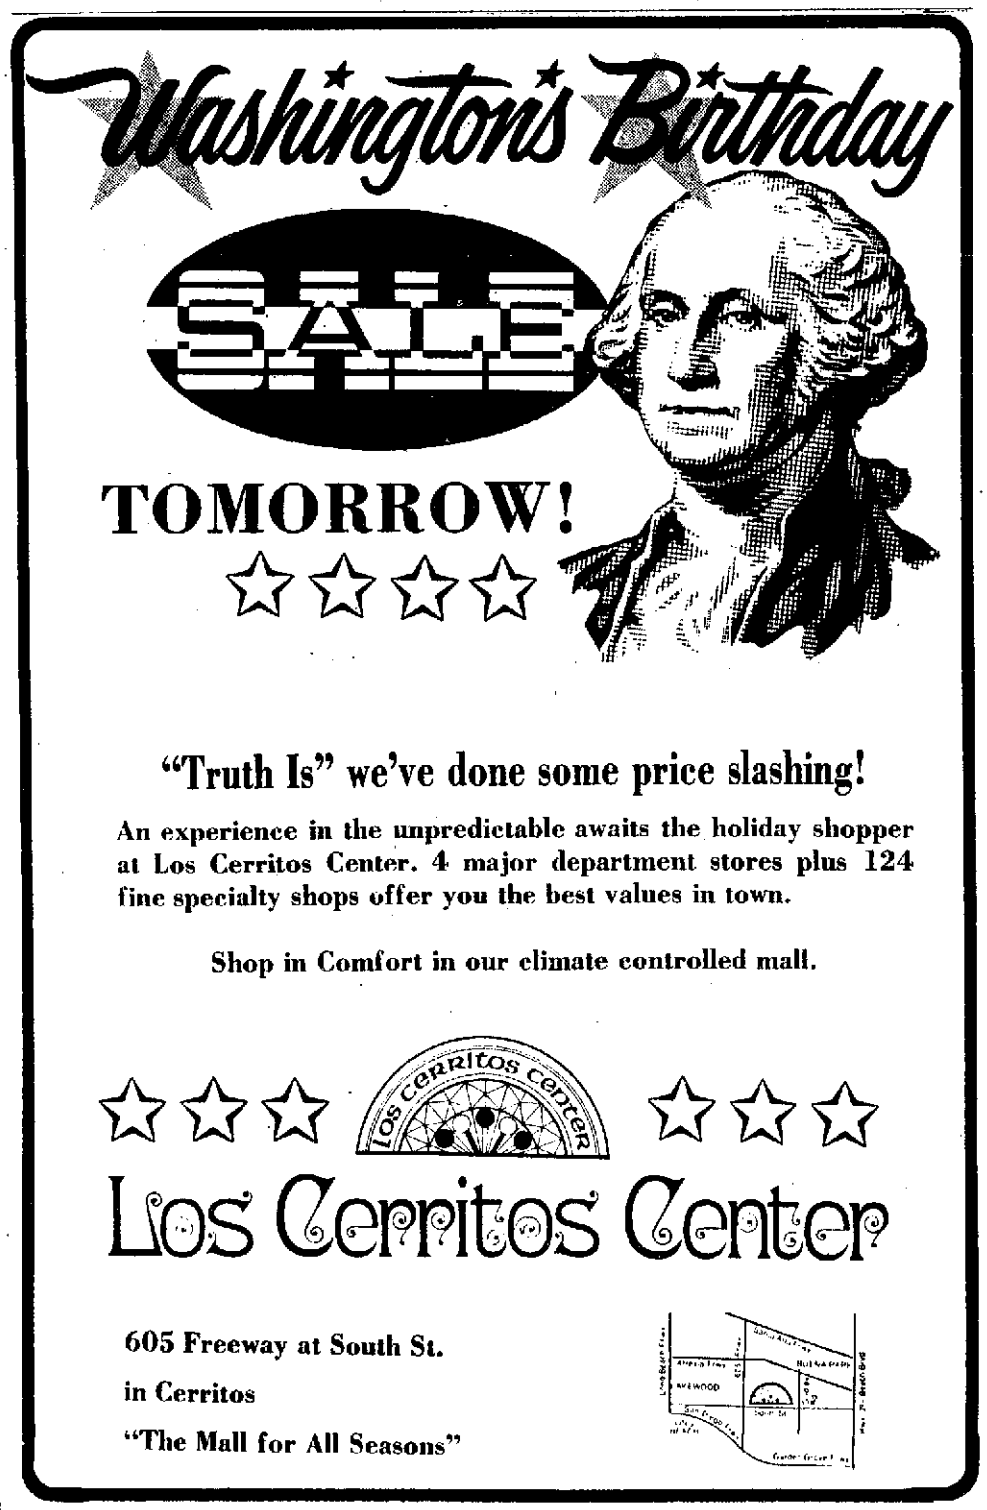

The magnitude was not sufficient to generate a Pacific-wide tsunami, or tidal wave, the observatory spokesman said.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Each increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude.

Man kills girl, 17, and then himself

A 17-year-old Carson girl was shot and killed Saturday by her 21-year-old boyfriend, who then killed himself, sheriff's deputies said.

Deputies said the girl, Twila Lugo, of 18616 S. Figueroa St., was shot once in the stomach at 7:30 p.m. during a quarrel with Benjamin Garcia, whose address was not known. Garcia then fired a small caliber handgun into his own head, deputies said.

HONOLULU (AP) — An earthquake measuring 6.9 on the Richter scale was reported Saturday in the vicinity of the Near Islands in the North Pacific Aleutian chain.

The Honolulu Observatory said there were no immediate reports of damage.

The U.S. Geological Survey said the tremor in the Bering Sea was centered about 170 miles west of Attu Island, westernmost of Alaska's Aleutian chain, and about 100 miles south of the Komandorskie Islands, part of the Soviet Union.

The earthquake occurred at 2:34 p.m. PST.

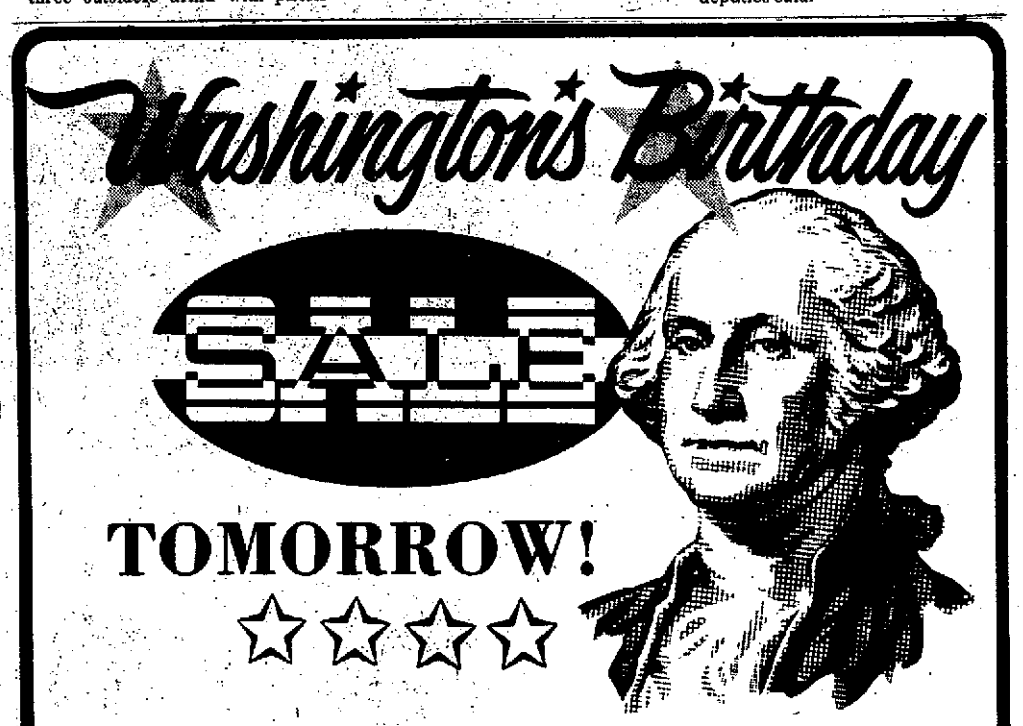

The magnitude was not sufficient to generate a Pacific-wide tsunami, or tidal wave, the observatory spokesman said.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Each increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude.

Man kills girl, 17, and then himself

A 17-year-old Carson girl was shot and killed Saturday by her 21-year-old boyfriend, who then killed himself, sheriff's deputies said.

Deputies said the girl, Twila Lugo, of 18616 S. Figueroa St., was shot once in the stomach at 7:30 p.m. during a quarrel with Benjamin Garcia, whose address was not known. Garcia then fired a small caliber handgun into his own head, deputies said.

Highways wearing out, report claims

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — America's federal highways are wearing out faster than they are being repaired, in part because federal overseers have not enforced rules which require states to fix the roads, the General Accounting Office charges.

The GAO, the accounting branch of Congress, also said the problem might become worse because heavier trucks are being allowed on the roads and because funds for repair are becoming less available.

The GAO urged the Federal Highway Administration to get tough with state officials responsible for road maintenance.

The GAO's comments came in a report last week to Transportation Secretary Brock Adams.

"SEGMENTS OF the interstate highway system appear to have been inadequately maintained, and the highways are now deteriorating 50 per center faster than they are being replaced," the report said.

It said the Highway Administration, which is part of the Transportation Department, has been lax in setting maintenance guidelines and in penalizing states that do not repair the roads. It urged the agency to make a "substantial effort" to correct this.

The GAO report noted the United States has 3.8 million miles of highways, of which 929,000 miles are on federal-aid systems. Latest available figures show that 1.29 trillion vehicle-miles were traveled in 1974 on the highways, three-fourths on the federal network.

"The states are required by law to provide adequate maintenance to the federal-aid highways," GAO said. "However, the Highway Administration has not prescribed any maintenance standards or guides for the states to use."

AS A RESULT, it said the states do not know what is required to comply with federal highway maintenance legislation.

The report also said there is little uniformity in the procedures that federal field engineers use to appraise state maintenance efforts.

For example, in South Carolina, design features and construction were inspected to reduce future maintenance costs; in Ohio, an engineer conducted a maintenance inspection of selected high-accident locations; and in South Dakota, an engineer conducted a maintenance review by merely driving over various highways.

The GAO said the law requires that the secretary of transportation notify a state highway department of any federal-aid highway project which has not been properly maintained. If the project is not repaired within 90 days, the secretary is required to withhold approval of all federal highway projects in the state.

"Although Highway Administration officials acknowledge the deteriorating condition of the nation's highways, federal funds have never been withheld from a state for inadequate or improper maintenance," the report stated.

THE GAO SAID highway repairs, especially resurfacing, are becoming more important because of the anticipated completion of the interstate system and rising traffic volumes.

It said the Highway Administration has estimated an annual maintenance increase of $100 million for all federal highways because of recent legislation increasing the maximum allowable weight for trucks.

Another problem, the GAO said, is that the highway financial picture of many states also is deteriorating because highway revenues are lower than had been projected.

Energy conservation efforts have resulted in fewer than expected fuel tax dollars, and, while highway tax revenues have increased, they have not kept pace with inflation.

WHILE NATIONWIDE highway maintenance expenditures rose from $3.06 billion in 1964 to $6.36 billion in 1974, the value of the dollar in that decade decreased 50 per cent, the report said.

"Thus, only about 4 per cent more maintenance work was purchased in 1974 than in 1964, even though the number of registered vehicles increased by 51 per cent, vehicle miles traveled increased 52 per cent, and the number of miles of highway increased by 172,000," the report said.

To compensate for a reduction in federal funds, many states have cut back on highway budgets, the GAO reported.

FCC hammering down on illegal CB radio amplifiers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission is proposing to crack down on illegal use by citizen-band radio operators of high-powered amplifiers which are creating interference with other CBers and with TV receivers.

But in doing so the commission would make it more difficult for legitimate users of the high-powered amplifiers, amateur radio operators, to get them.

The amateurs are expected to oppose the proposal.

The commission would change its rules to prohibit the marketing of external radio frequency amplifiers capable of operating from 24 to 35 megahertz. CB frequencies are all in the 27 megahertz range.

THE commission approved the action 7-0 Friday, but Chairman Richard E. Wiley expressed in a separate statement his concern for the amateur operators who, unlike CBers, must pass strict examinations on communications, FCC rules and international Morse code. They communicate internationally rather than locally, as do CBers.

CB operators are licensed merely by filling out a form.

Wiley said, "One of the most 'professional' and self-regulated services within the commission's jurisdiction" is being penalized because the FCC wants to clean up "the rapidly proliferating and sometimes troublesome CB service."

The CB craze of the past two years has brought an increase of up to a million new operators a month.

The proposed changes were opened up for comment due by May 25.

AMATEUR operators have been the one class of radio operators whose equipment has not had to pass tight acceptance procedures by the FCC because of their expertise.

The commission said that as fewer and fewer amateurs have come to build their own equipment, there has been a proliferation of commercially made equipment, and that some of this can operate on both amateur and CB frequencies.

The amplifiers produce up to 2,000 watts, while CBers are not allowed to use more than 5 watts.

Childhood disease epidemics feared

By JUDITH RANDAL
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — Now that the government has permitted a limited resumption of flu shots, it has a new worry on its hands: That the crisis of confidence in vaccines created by the ill-fated swine flu immunization drive will lead to epidemics of disabling childhood diseases which many Americans assume to be ancient history.

Joseph A. Califano, Health Education and Welfare secretary, is so concerned by the problem that when he announced the partial lifting of the flu shot moratorium he went on to say that "serious childhood diseases . . . can be prevented with a minimum risk of adverse reactions" and that "levels of immunization among our young are too low. For example, 16 million children under the age of 14 have not been vaccinated against polio."

Immunization falls in crisis of confidence

Except for a 1972 outbreak at a Greenwich, Conn., Christian Science private school, where religious convictions had made the children ineligible for vaccines, there has been virtually no polio in this country for more than 15 years. This does not mean, however, that what used to be called "infantile paralysis" could not make a comeback.

NOR IS POLIO the only — or even necessarily, the most likely — potential threat. The federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta reports that immunization levels against most of the childhood diseases have been slipping for several years, both because of public indifference and because of drastic cuts in federal spending for the purchase of vaccines for administration to the poor.

Although diphtheria immunization, for example, is hardly new, there were quite a few cases in San Antonio, Tex., in 1971 because of the opposition of the local medical society to giving free shots to children whose parents could not pay.

Among the school-age population under 14, according to government figures, only 71 per cent are protected against diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus (generally given in a combined vaccine) and only 66 per cent have been vaccinated against red or common measles. At the same time 38 per cent of those youngsters have not had shots against rubella (German measles) and a whopping 52 per cent are needlesssly vulnerable to mumps.

A LACK OF SHOTS is, of course, a possible danger to the individual child. Although most children recover fully from measles, for example, the high fever that sometimes accompanies the disease can cause convulsions and brain damage. And one child in 12 who gets the measles comes out of the experience with infected ears that can impair his hearing for life.

"Right now," says Mrs. Martha Rick, president of the school nurses arm of the National Education Association, "we're concentrating on measles because there's a lot of it around. It's not only that many of the younger children have never had the immunization, but also that older children who were vaccinated before 1966, when they were giving gamma globulin with the vaccine, need a booster shot." (It has since been discovered that the co-administration of gamma globulin shortens the effective life span of the measles vaccine.)

IN 1969, A RUBELLA vaccine became available and in 1970 the government invested $25.6 million in an immunization drive aimed at children with the thought that this would avert the epidemic that was expected to hit in 1973. Based on the experience of the previous 1963-64 epidemic, those shots not only headed off the transient illness of some 12.5 million people, most of them children, but also prevented:

—6,250 miscarriages and 5,000 therapeutic abortions.

—2,100 infant deaths in the first few days of life and 2,984 cases of serious brain inflammation among newborns.

—The birth of 10,500 prenatally infected children whose serious handicaps would have ranged from damaged hearts, liver disease, cataracts and other eye disorders to mental retardation and a crippling nervous system deformity known as spina bifida.

Money well spent? Obviously. Indeed, when it comes to health bargains, immunizations against communicable childhood diseases probably head the list. For less money than the $135 million Congress appropriated for the purchase of swine flu vaccine, for example, the government could buy enough vaccine to immunize every baby born in the next 15 years against all these disorders.

And unless the birth rate should soar unexpectedly, which is thought to be unlikely, there would be enough dollars left over to bring all the children whose immunizations are incomplete up to date in their shots.

MONEY, HOWEVER, is the least of the problems. For unlike the Nixon-Ford administrations, which repeatedly vetoed Congressional efforts to beef up juvenile immunization programs, the Carter administration is committed to seeking better funding for them, if that proves necessary.

Instead, the stumbling block is a dual one that Califano has promised to address with leadership from Washington: Laxness on the parts of many state and local health departments and parents who should know better, but don't.

"It isn't that vaccines aren't available," Mrs. Rich said. "It's that this year, particularly, health departments have been preoccupied with swine flu and that too many people believe mistakenly that these diseases have been wiped out."

U.S. curbs urged on gene research

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — Federal lawyers studying ways to control a controversial kind of genetic research believe existing laws probably would not be effective and that new legislation is needed, officials said Saturday.

At a meeting held at the National Institutes of Health, members of an interagency government committee looking into what federal action is needed said lawyers found inadequacies in all existing law that might apply to so-called recombinant DNA research.

Dr. Donald S. Fredrickson, NIH director and chairman of the committee, noted that drug firms interested in doing the research and environmental groups concerned about possible dangers cite different existing laws that might be used to regulate genetic research.

Those laws cover protection of the public health and the environment, among other considerations.

"If the legislative approach is the desirable way to regulate this research, then the committee's informal deliberation to the present time doesn't think existing laws are adequate," Fredrickson said in an interview.

The committee, which includes representatives of departments that may sponsor, conduct or regulate genetic research, is to issue a report in March. The group is looking into the nature and scope of the research and will recommend executive or legislative actions for regulation.

Recombinant DNA research involves splitting and transferring genetic material from one species of organism to another, thereby creating life forms not found in nature.

The research promises such benefits as possibly creating plants that do not need fertilizer or creating bacteria "factories" to make large quantities of drugs and enzymes.

HOWEVER, a side-effect of the research causing concern is the possibility of creating a virulent strain of disease organism against which there would be no defense if it escaped.

Last year, the NIH drew up safety guidelines, and they now are mandatory for all federally funded research.

Fredrickson said most industries engaged in or interested in the research have adopted most of the guidelines voluntarily.

Based on the experience of the previous 1963-64 epidemic, those shots not only headed off the transient illness of some 12.5 million people, most of them children, but also prevented:

—6,250 miscarriages and 5,000 therapeutic abortions.

—2,100 infant deaths in the first few days of life and 2,984 cases of serious brain inflammation among newborns.

—The birth of 10,500 prenatally infected children whose serious handicaps would have ranged from damaged hearts, liver disease, cataracts and other eye disorders to mental retardation and a crippling nervous system deformity known as spina bifida.

Money well spent? Obviously. Indeed, when it comes to health bargains, immunizations against communicable childhood diseases probably head the list. For less money than the $135 million Congress appropriated for the purchase of swine flu vaccine, for example, the government could buy enough vaccine to immunize every baby born in the next 15 years against all these disorders.

And unless the birth rate should soar unexpectedly, which is thought to be unlikely, there would be enough dollars left over to bring all the children whose immunizations are incomplete up to date in their shots.

MONEY, HOWEVER, is the least of the problems. For unlike the Nixon-Ford administrations, which repeatedly vetoed Congressional efforts to beef up juvenile immunization programs, the Carter administration is committed to seeking better funding for them, if that proves necessary.

Instead, the stumbling block is a dual one that Califano has promised to address with leadership from Washington: Laxness on the parts of many state and local health departments and parents who should know better, but don't.

"It isn't that vaccines aren't available," Mrs. Rick said. "It's that this year, particularly, health departments have been preoccupied with swine flu and that too many people believe mistakenly that these diseases have been wiped out."

Immunization falls in crisis of confidence

U.S. curbs urged on gene research

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON — Federal lawyers studying ways to control a controversial kind of genetic research believe existing laws probably would not be effective and that new legislation is needed, officials said Saturday.

At a meeting held at the National Institutes of Health, members of an interagency government committee looking into what federal action is needed said lawyers found inadequacies in all existing law that might apply to so-called recombinant DNA research.

Dr. Donald S. Fredrickson, NIH director and chairman of the committee, noted that drug firms interested in doing the research and environmental groups concerned about possible dangers cite different existing laws that might be used to regulate genetic research.

Those laws cover protection of the public health and the environment, among other considerations.

"If the legislative approach is the desirable way to regulate this research, then the committee's informal deliberation to the present time doesn't think existing laws are adequate," Fredrickson said in an interview.

The committee, which includes representatives of departments that may sponsor, conduct or regulate genetic research, is to issue a report in March. The group is looking into the nature and scope of the research and will recommend executive or legislative actions for regulation.

Recombinant DNA research involves splitting and transferring genetic material from one species of organism to another, thereby creating life forms not found in nature.

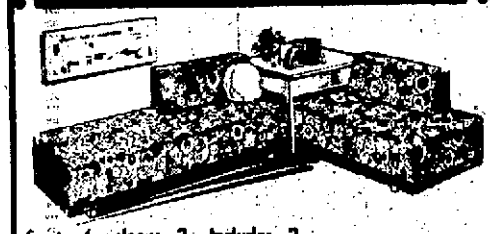

The research promises such benefits as possibly creating plants that do not need fertilizer or creating bacteria "factories" to make large quantities of drugs and enzymes.

HOWEVER, a side-effect of the research causing concern is the possibility of creating a virulent strain of disease organism against which there would be no defense if it escaped.

Last year, the NIH drew up safety guidelines, and they now are mandatory for all federally funded research.

Fredrickson said most industries engaged in or interested in the research have adopted most of the guidelines voluntarily.

Cubans want U.S. ties, if they can keep 'principles'

By CLAUDE ERBSEN
Associated Press

HAVANA — The Cuban press is maintaining total silence on recent United States-Cuban developments, but the Cuban government clearly hopes they signal a chance to improve relations with its big northern neighbor.

Cuban news media completely ignored a visit this past week by New York Democratic congressman Jonathan B. Bingham.

The Foreign Ministry has declined to comment on President Carter's statement Wednesday that he "would be willing to move toward normal relations with Cuba" if it showed restraint abroad and respect for human rights at home.

Still, these and other recent developments appeared to be common knowledge among Cuban citizens — many of whom listen to the Voice of America and to Florida commercial radio stations.

Foreigners living here say their Cuban neighbors are freely discussing Bingham's visit and Carter's comments about Cuba. A visiting American engaging Cubans in casual conversation is repeatedly told of their hope for a resumption of normal relations "provided we can stick with our principles."

That's also the government view.

Translated, it means Cuba is unlikely to accept tough American political terms as a price for resumption of normal relations, broken since the last days of the Eisenhower administration in January 1961.

U.S. demands include a complete Cuban pullout from Angola, an end to Cuban support for Puerto Rican independence and release of political prisoners from Cuban jails.

While the Cubans are ready to proceed on some specific issues of common interest with the United States — such as fishery negotiations and a joint effort to fight a northward-spreading sugar blight — they don't seem ready to move further unless the United States lifts its trade embargo against them.

Bingham, who spoke to Prime Minister Fidel Castro for almost nine hours, said he felt the Cubans were "not anxious" to resume relations with the United States if the political price was too high. He said that to pave the way for negotiations, the embargo would probably have to be lifted.

They say the Cubans want trade with the United States, especially in foodstuffs, medicines and spare parts, but they feel so strongly about the embargo that it must end before they begin to negotiate on other issues.

Double agent's widow sues brass for $22.5 million

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — Acting on his written instructions, the widow of a double agent for U.S. Army intelligence has filed a $22.5-million suit.

Defendants are eight Army officers, an FBI agent and "party or parties unknown" in the Army, FBI and CIA.

Military and state investigators said Warrant Officer Ralph J. Sigler killed himself in a motel room near Ft. Meade, Md., in April 1976 by wrapping the ends of a stripped electrical cord around his arms, plugging the cord into a wall socket and turning on a wall switch.

Ilse Sigler said the Army told her that her husband killed himself because he was despondent over the collapse of his career as a double agent.

She said she received a letter from her husband saying in part: "Should anything happen to me, suicide, death or accident, sue the U.S. Army for being the cause."

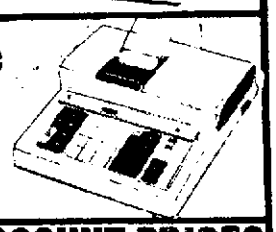

Named in the letter and included in the suit were Lt. Gen. C.J. LeVan, former commander of Ft. Bliss, Tex., now assigned to the Pentagon; Maj. Gen. H.R. Aarons, identified as Army assistant chief of staff for intelligence; Col. Donald B. Grimes of Ft. Meade; Warrant Officer John Schaafstahl; Warrant Officer Carlos Zapata, and FBI agent Francis Prasek, formerly of El Paso, now assigned to Phoenix.

CIA men cite benefits from Hussein pay

By JOSEPH VOLZ
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — Present and former high Central Intelligence Agency officials contended privately Saturday that payoffs of millions of dollars to Jordan's King Hussein resulted in one of the most successful CIA operations in the 30-year history of the agency.

But they argued now that the payoffs of up to $2 million a year to Hussein over the last 20 years have been revealed and the program stopped, the king's future in the volatile Mideast is shaky. They added that the value of the program, which provided "high grade" intelligence from the tinderbox area, has been all but nullified. Hussein was originally given money directly in 1957 on orders from the late CIA Director Allen Dulles "to provide some stability in the Mideast," one official said.

HE ADDED: "We got as much for our dollars from Hussein as from anything we did in the Mideast."

Hussein took moderate stances during frequent Arab-Israeli disputes, allowed the CIA to set up radio transmitters and listening posts in Jordan and booted out the terrorist-oriented Palestinian Liberation Organization in 1970.

CIA analysts were less enthusiastic about the results from other payoff programs, although contending that none of them broke any U.S. laws.

Payments to the late Nationalist Chinese President Chiang Kai-shek did nothing to free the mainland from the Communists during the Cold War period of the 1950s when Chiang was threatening to invade. Instead, there is ample evidence that U.S. dollars only succeeded in corrupting the Chiang government on Taiwan.

The CIA also poured money into former South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu's pockets making Thieu a millionaire but not preventing the takeover of South Vietnam by the Communists.

OTHER RECIPIENTS of direct CIA payments, mainly in the 1950s and 1960s, were said to be Cypriot President Archbishop Makarios, former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, the Dalai Lama of Tibet and two African leaders, Jomo Kenyatta of Kenya and Mobuto Sese Seko of Zaire.

A former high CIA official objected to newspaper accounts describing the payments as "bribes." He said: "They were payments for services rendered and there was nothing wrong with it. The programs had the enthusiastic support of higher authority."

It could not be determined if any chief executive other than President Ford knew details of any of the payments to foreign leaders. But another former CIA official said that the high-level "Forty Committee," at one time headed by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, did give continuing approval to the Hussein program. The official said that President Johnson's national security affairs adviser, Walt Rostow, also gave the impression in committee meetings that he discussed Hussein with Johnson.

Brandt and Makarios deny receiving secret CIA cash

Associated Press

Former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt and Cyprus President Archbishop Makarios denied on Saturday that they had received secret payments from the Central Intelligence Agency.

Brandt, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, issued a statement through a spokesman in Bonn calling the Washington reports "libelous insinuation." He said he was sending a letter to President Carter to "energetically protest lies about me that have been circulated in the world."

Archbishop Makarios, in a statement issued in Nicosia, Cyprus, called the allegation "unfounded and malicious."

Washington sources who have read a court-censored manuscript of a book on the CIA said it identified the following prominent foreigners as recipients of CIA funds: King Hussein of Jordan, Brandt, Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam, Jomo Kenyatta of Kenya, Sese Seko Mobutu of Zaire and Forbes Burnham of Guyana.

The Washington Post additionally reported that secret payments also went to Makarios and to the Tibetan Dalai Lama.

"I consider the report unworthy of denial," Makarios said in his statement. "However, I challenge those responsible to publish any evidence they have in support of such an unfounded and malicious allegation.

Rights move seen doomed

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A U.S. move to have the U.N. Human Rights Commission express concern at the situation of dissidents in the Soviet Union is virtually sure to fail, diplomatic sources said Saturday.

The draft of a note that would have the commission seek information on "recent reports of the arrest and detention of persons connected with the cause of human rights" was circulated by the U.S. delegation Friday among members of the 32-nation commission.

The chief U.S. delegate, Allard K. Lowenstein, told the commission last week he hoped for a consensus on the question "in the spirit of fraternity and shared concern for human rights which brings us together."

Double agent's widow sues brass for $22.5 million

EL PASO, Tex. (AP) — Acting on his written instructions, the widow of a double agent for U.S. Army intelligence has filed a $22.5-million suit.

Defendants are eight Army officers, an FBI agent and "party or parties unknown" in the Army, FBI and CIA.

Military and state investigators said Warrant Officer Ralph J. Sigler killed himself in a motel room near Ft. Meade, Md., in April 1976 by wrapping the ends of a stripped electrical cord around his arms, plugging the cord into a wall socket and turning on a wall switch.

Ilse Sigler said the Army told her that her husband killed himself because he was despondent over the collapse of his career as a double agent.

She said she received a letter from her husband saying in part: "Should anything happen to me, suicide, death or accident, sue the U.S. Army for being the cause."

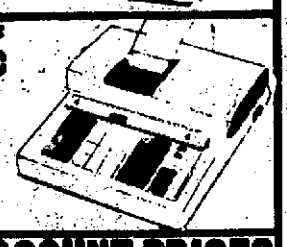

Named in the letter and included in the suit were Lt. Gen. C.J. LeVan, former commander of Ft. Bliss, Tex., now assigned to the Pentagon; Maj. Gen. H.R. Aarons, identified as Army assistant chief of staff for intelligence; Col. Donald B. Grimes of Ft. Meade; Warrant Officer John Schaafstahl; Warrant Officer Carlos Zapata, and FBI agent Francis Prasek, formerly of El Paso, now assigned to Phoenix.

CIA men cite benefits from Hussein pay

By JOSEPH VOLZ
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — Present and former high Central Intelligence Agency officials contended privately Saturday that payoffs of millions of dollars to Jordan's King Hussein resulted in one of the most successful CIA operations in the 30-year history of the agency.

But they argued now that the payoffs of up to $2 million a year to Hussein over the last 20 years have been revealed and the program stopped, the king's future in the volatile Mideast is shaky. They added that the value of the program, which provided "high grade" intelligence from the tinderbox area, has been all but nullified. Hussein was originally given money directly in 1957 on orders from the late CIA Director Allen Dulles "to provide some stability in the Mideast," one official said.

HE ADDED: "We got as much for our dollars from Hussein as from anything we did in the Mideast."

Hussein took moderate stances during frequent Arab-Israeli disputes, allowed the CIA to set up radio transmitters and listening posts in Jordan and booted out the terrorist-oriented Palestinian Liberation Organization in 1970.

CIA analysts were less enthusiastic about the results from other payoff programs, although contending that none of them broke any U.S. laws.

Payments to the late Nationalist Chinese President Chiang Kai-shek did nothing to free the mainland from the Communists during the Cold War period of the 1950s when Chiang was threatening to invade. Instead, there is ample evidence that U.S. dollars only succeeded in corrupting the Chiang government on Taiwan.

The CIA also poured money into former South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu's pockets making Thieu a millionaire but not preventing the takeover of South Vietnam by the Communists.

OTHER RECIPIENTS of direct CIA payments, mainly in the 1950s and 1960s, were said to be Cypriot President Archbishop Makarios, former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, the Dalai Lama of Tibet and two African leaders, Jomo Kenyatta of Kenya and Mobuto Sese Seko of Zaire.

A former high CIA official objected to newspaper accounts describing the payments as "bribes." He said: "They were payments for services rendered, and there was nothing wrong with it. The programs had the enthusiastic support of higher authority."

It could not be determined if any chief executive other than President Ford knew details of any of the payments to foreign leaders. But another former CIA official said that the high-level "Forty Committee," at one time headed by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, did give continuing approval to the Hussein program. The official said that President Johnson's national security affairs adviser, Walt Rostow, also gave the impression in committee meetings that he discussed Hussein with Johnson.

Brandt and Makarios deny receiving secret CIA cash

Associated Press

Former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt and Cyprus President Archbishop Makarios denied on Saturday that they had received secret payments from the Central Intelligence Agency.

Brandt, a Nobel Peace Prize winner, issued a statement through a spokesman in Bonn calling the Washington reports "libelous insinuation." He said he was sending a letter to President Carter to "energetically protest lies about me that have been circulated in the world."

Archbishop Makarios, in a statement issued in Nicosia, Cyprus, called the allegation "unfounded and malicious."

Washington sources who have read a court-censored manuscript of a book on the CIA said it identified the following prominent foreigners as recipients of CIA funds: King Hussein of Jordan, Brandt, Nguyen Van Thieu of South Vietnam, Jomo Kenyatta of Kenya, Sese Seko Mobutu of Zaire and Forbes Burnham of Guyana.

The Washington Post additionally reported that secret payments also went to Makarios and to the Tibetan Dalai Lama.

"I consider the report unworthy of denial," Makarios said in his statement. "However, I challenge those responsible to publish any evidence they have in support of such an unfounded and malicious allegation.

$10-million bank heist no surprise to French cops

They knew something was cooking, but couldn't stop it

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press

NICE, France — It came as no surprise to French police when a gang of "sewer rats" tunneled into the safety deposit vault of a Nice bank last July and got away with an estimated $10 million in jewelry, cash and gold bars.

The police had known for more than a month that something big like that would happen.

"Unfortunately we couldn't find out where and when it would come," said Police Commissioner Albert Mourey.

Six men and two women are in jail in connection with what police have described as the biggest bank burglary in French history. They include the confessed mastermind, 45-year-old one-time paratroop sergeant Albert Spaggiari. At least 15 members of the gang are still on the run. Three alleged minor participants are free on bail, pending the trial, not expected to begin before 1979.

MASTER CRIMINAL Albert Spaggiari, center, told police how he organized $10-million bank job, but he wouldn't implicate others or say what he did with his share of the money. —AP Wirephoto

IF SPAGGIARI, a rightwing activist and former member of the illegal Secret Army Organization, had known how close the police came to his tracks during the two-month, pre-operational stage of the heist, he would probably have given up the whole idea.

It was not the planning that was at fault, it was the execution. Spaggiari's attorney, Jacques Peyrat, described him as "a great general who put too much faith in poorly disciplined troops."

Peyrat said Spaggiari accepts full responsibility for conceiving, planning and leading the break-in and is prepared to pay the penalty.

No one has yet located any part of his huge share of the loot. Peyrat said Spaggiari handed over "every last cent" to a previously unheard-of rightwing underground movement named "La Catena" (The Chain). Police Commissioner Mourey said he is convinced Spaggiari stashed away millions of dollars in secret bank accounts or safe deposits anywhere between the Bahamas and Hong Kong.

SPAGGIARI faces a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison — substantially less if Peyrat can influence the jury with his plea of "political idealism." Spaggiari can expect to be released for good conduct after serving one third of his sentence.

The burglary was carried out with what Mourey called "the most extraordinary audacity and military precision." From the sewer system, where they moved about in cross-country vehicles and rubber boats, the thieves tunneled 30 feet through earth, rock, concrete and steel into the vaults of the Societe Generale branch bank in Nice. Operating undisturbed throughout the weekend of last July 16-17, they opened some 350 deposit boxes and got away with at least 50 million francs ($10 million) worth of loot.

WHILE IN the vault, they rigged up their own electric power supply, air conditioning and a "field kitchen." Police later found more than two tons of equipment scattered about the vault and the sewers. Pornographic photographs from one of the deposit boxes were pinned on the walls. Before leaving, the burglars scrawled a message to the police: "Without hatred, without arms and without violence."

Peyrat said he intends to use this message at the trial to plead extenuating circumstances.

Before dawn on Oct. 26, police swooped on scores of suspects throughout France and Corsica. Most of them were soon released. Spaggiari was quietly picked up in cafe in Nice 24 hours later. Police officers claim he quickly gave them a full account of the operation "with a smile and a certain pride" but refused to name the members of his specially recruited gang or the leaders of "La Catena."

MOUREY, who heads the Nice branch of the Police Judiciaire — France's equivalent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said Spaggiari figured high on his list of suspects the very morning the burglary was discovered. But there was no proof.

The first item of concrete evidence in the file is dated June 11, 1976, more than a month before the Nice operation.

A police patrol in Nice's fashionable California district observed two men carrying heavy suitcases through the streets shortly after midnight.

The men were taken to the police station where it was determined that both were ex-convicts specializing in burglaries. Their suitcases contained heavy drilling equipment. The men had no satisfactory explanation, but since there was no crime to charge them with, they were released the same day — with their equipment. But their names stayed in the police files.

ON JULY 9, residents in Plan du Var, a village in the hills 20 miles north of Nice, telephoned the local police station to report that a group of strangers seemed to have occupied a neighbor's villa.

The gendarmes found five men, all with criminal records, living it up in the villa belonging to a Lyon industrialist.

"Like seasoned small-time crooks, they all put their hands up when they saw us coming," Gendarme Pierre Doufour reported later. But the gendarmes had no search warrant, and could do nothing but verify that the men were in the villa.

One of the men, Dominique Poggi, a Corsican member of the Marseilles underworld, was quoted as saying "We're expecting some girls for a sex party." The owner of a nearby restaurant had lent him the key of the villa for that purpose, Poggi said.

The restaurant owner, guardian of the villa in the proprietors' absence, confirmed the story, police said, and the gendarmes went home. The next morning, the house was empty.

"WE KNOW that it was originally intended as the operations headquarters" for the burglary, Mourey said.

At the time, the gendarmes noted all the names — and the registration number of a car parked outside.

The car belonged to a girl jailed in Avignon for fraud. Before going to prison, she had left the car with her sister.

The police followed that trail after the burglary. The sister then said she had lent the car to a friend, Henri Michellucci.

Henri's elder brother Daniel, 34, was one of the gangsters in the industrialist's Plan du Var villa on July 9. He had a long police record and an even longer string of girl friends. One of them was Marie-Francoise Astolfi, 26, an attractive law school graduate and daughter of a retired policeman.

SOON AFTER the burglary, police interviewed Marie-Francoise. She refused to talk. But a detective leafed through her diary and found entries showing that she had went bitter tears because Daniel Michellucci had taken another girl on a "business trip" to Brussels, Belgium.

With that information, Belgian police set a trap for Michellucci at the Brussels bank where, according to the diary, he had stashed away about $160,000 worth of cash and gold in a safe deposit box. The contents of Daniel's box remains the only substantial part of the loot recovered thus far, according to police. Daniel was arrested and extradited to France, together with his new girl friend, blonde Michele Ceaglio.

Now Marie-Francoise and Michele are in the same jail, both charged with indirect involvement in the conspiracy.

ALSO awaiting trial but free on bail since Feb. 8 is Helene Cruchendeau, the girl friend of one of the men still missing. She is charged with receiving stolen goods. Poggi, who told police of the "sex party," is in jail. So is Gerard Vigier, 34, arrested in Paris Feb. 9 with what police described as a small part of the loot after investigators trailed his girl friend for four months. Police said some of the lesser accused still held would be released on bail soon.

But not likely to be freed before trial are two other ex-convicts, Francis Pellegrin and Alain Bournat, who gave police the first direct evidence that Spaggiari was the ringleader.

"I would not want to be in their shoes," lawyer Peyrat said. "They probably hope for the longest possible prison sentence for fear being found floating face down in some river after they are freed."

Henri Michelucci has been released. The girl with the car confessed that she had lent it, in fact, to Daniel but lied to protect him.

ALL THE prisoners with the exception of Daniel Michelucci seemed to be minor figures in the conspiracy beside the astonishing personality of Spaggiari, described as the ringleader — a tall, wiry man with a high forehead, deep-set eyes and a perpetual, mocking smile. His wife, Marcelle, is a professional nurse.

Marcelle told police she knew nothing of her hus-

$10-million bank heist no surprise to French cops

They knew something was cooking, but couldn't stop it

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH
Associated Press

NICE, France — It came as no surprise to French police when a gang of "sewer rats" tunneled into the safety deposit vault of a Nice bank last July and got away with an estimated $10 million in jewelry, cash and gold bars.

The police had known for more than a month that something big like that would happen.

"Unfortunately we couldn't find out where and when it would come," said Police Commissioner Albert Mourey.

Six men and two women are in jail in connection with what police have described as the biggest bank burglary in French history. They include the confessed mastermind, 45-year-old one-time paratroop sergeant Albert Spaggiari. At least 15 members of the gang are still on the run. Three alleged minor participants are free on bail, pending the trial, not expected to begin before 1979.

IF SPAGGIARI, a right-wing activist and former member of the illegal Secret Army Organization, had known how close the police came to his tracks during the two-month, pre-operational stage of the heist, he would probably have given up the whole idea.

It was not the planning that was at fault, it was the execution, Spaggiari's attorney, Jacques Peyrat, described him as "a great general who put too much faith in poorly disciplined troops."

Peyrat said Spaggiari accepts full responsibility for conceiving, planning and leading the break-in and is prepared to pay the penalty.

No one has yet located any part of his huge share of the loot. Peyrat said Spaggiari handed over "every last cent" to a previously unheard-of rightwing underground movement named "La Catena" (The Chain). Police Commissioner Mourey said he is convinced Spaggiari stashed away millions of dollars in secret bank accounts or safe deposits anywhere between the Bahamas and Hong Kong.

SPAGGIARI faces a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison — substantially less if Peyrat can influence the jury with his plea of "political idealism." Spaggiari can expect to be released for good conduct after serving one third of his sentence.

The burglary was carried out with what Mourey called "the most extraordinary audacity and military precision." From the sewer system, where they moved about in cross-country vehicles and rubber boats, the thieves tunneled 30 feet through earth, rock, concrete and steel into the vaults of the Societe Generale branch bank in Nice. Operating undisturbed throughout the weekend of last July 16-17, they opened some 350 deposit boxes and got away with at least 50 million francs ($10 million) worth of loot.

WHILE IN the vault, they rigged up their own electric power supply, air conditioning and a "field kitchen." Police later found more than two tons of equipment scattered about the vault and the sewers. Pornographic photographs from one of the deposit boxes were pinned on the walls. Before leaving, the burglars scrawled a message to the police: "Without hatred, without arms and without violence."

Peyrat said he intends to use this message at the trial to plead extenuating circumstances.

Before dawn on Oct. 26, police swooped on scores of suspects throughout France and Corsica. Most of them were soon released. Spaggiari was quietly picked up in cafe in Nice 24 hours later. Police officers claim he quickly gave them a full account of the operation "with a smile and a certain pride" but refused to name the members of his specially recruited gang or the leaders of "La Catena."

MOUREY, who heads the Nice branch of the Police Judiciaire — France's equivalent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said Spaggiari figured high on his list of suspects the very morning the burglary was discovered. But there was no proof.

The first item of concrete evidence in the file is dated June 11, 1976, more than a month before the Nice operation.

A police patrol in Nice's fashionable California district observed two men carrying heavy suitcases through the streets shortly after midnight.

The men were taken to the police station where it was determined that both were ex-convicts specializing in burglaries. Their suitcases contained heavy drilling equipment. The men had no satisfactory explanation, but since there was no crime to charge them with, they were released the same day — with their equipment. But their names stayed in the police files.

ON JULY 9, residents in Plan du Var, a village in the hills 20 miles north of Nice, telephoned the local police station to report that a group of strangers seemed to have occupied a neighbor's villa.

MASTER CRIMINAL Albert Spaggiari, center, told police how he organized $10-million bank job, but he wouldn't implicate others or say what he did with his share of the money. —AP Wirephoto

The gendarmes found five men, all with criminal records, living it up in the villa belonging to a Lyon industrialist.

"Like seasoned small-time crooks, they all put their hands up when they saw us coming," Gendarme Pierre Doufour reported later. But the gendarmes had no search warrant, and could do nothing but verify that the men were in the villa.

One of the men, Dominique Poggi, a Corsican member of the Marseilles underworld, was quoted as saying "We're expecting some girls for a sex party." The owner of a nearby restaurant had lent him the key of the villa for that purpose, Poggi said.

The restaurant owner, guardian of the villa in the proprietors' absence, confirmed the story, police said, and the gendarmes went home. The next morning, the house was empty.

"WE KNOW that it was originally intended as the operations headquarters" for the burglary, Mourey said.

At the time, the gendarmes noted all the names — and the registration number of a car parked outside.

The car belonged to a girl jailed in Avignon for fraud. Before going to prison, she had left the car with her sister.

The police followed that trail after the burglary. The sister then said she had lent the car to a friend, Henri Michellucci.

Henri's elder brother Daniel, 34, was one of the gangsters in the industrialist's Plan du Var villa on July 9. He had a long police record and an even longer string of girl friends. One of them was Marie-Francoise Astolfi, 26, an attractive law school graduate and daughter of a retired policeman.

SOON AFTER the burglary, police interviewed Marie-Francoise. She refused to talk. But a detective leafed through her diary and found entries showing that she had wept bitter tears because Daniel Michellucci had taken another girl on a "business trip" to Brussels, Belgium.

With that information, Belgian police set a trap for Michellucci at the Brussels bank where, according to the diary, he had stashed away about $160,000 worth of cash and gold in a safe deposit box. The contents of Daniel's box remains the only substantial part of the loot recovered thus far, according to police. Daniel was arrested and extradited to France, together with his new girl friend, blonde Michele Ceaglio.

Now Marie-Francoise and Michele are in the same jail, both charged with indirect involvement in the conspiracy.

ALSO awaiting trial but free on bail since Feb. 8 is Helene Cruchendeau, the girl friend of one of the men still missing. She is charged with receiving stolen goods. Poggi, who told police of the "sex party," is in jail. So is Gerard Vigier, 34, arrested in Paris Feb. 9 with what police described as a small part of the loot after investigators trailed his girl friend for four months. Police said some of the lesser accused still held would be released on bail soon.

But not likely to be freed before trial are two other ex-convicts, Francis Pellegrin and Alain Bournat, who gave police the first direct evidence that Spaggiari was the ringleader.

"I would not want to be in their shoes," lawyer Peyrat said. "They probably hope for the longest possible prison sentence for fear being found floating face down in some river after they are freed."

Henri Michelucci has been released. The girl with the car confessed that she had lent it, in fact, to Daniel but lied to protect him.

ALL THE prisoners with the exception of Daniel Michelucci seemed to be minor figures in the conspiracy beside the astonishing personality of Spaggiari, described, as the ringleader — a tall, wiry man with a high forehead, deep-set eyes and a perpetual, mocking smile. His wife, Marcelle, is a professional nurse.

Marcelle told police she knew nothing of her bus-

Insults, rocks greet Klan's Florida parade

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — About 110 white-robed Ku Klux Klan members marched past the State Capitol on Saturday in a parade jeered by hundreds of young hecklers and marred by several rock-throwing incidents.

A middle-aged Klansman who declined to give his name was hit in the face by a brick chunk moments after the parade began. He continued the march with blood on the left side of his neck.

Another Klansman, who also declined to give his name, told reporters he was struck on the leg by a rock.

Police reported no arrests, however, and Tallahassee Mayor James Ford said he considered the scattered violence minor.

"In relation to what it could have been, it went off peacefully," said Ford, a black. "I regret that anybody was injured in the process, but with the number of people we're dealing with here that's minor."

Klansmen from all over Florida gathered in a parking lot before starting their march.

"We're coming up here to show people that the Klan is just an an ordinary, everyday organization," said John Paul Rogers of Lake Wales, 36, the Florida grand dragon. "It's been years since the Klan paraded in Tallahassee, and we figured the folks were just dying to see us."

The parade route was lined by a mostly hostile crowd, estimated by Leon County Sheriff Ken Katsaris at 1,500 persons. Young demonstraters, mostly students from Florida State University and Florida A&M University, ran alongside the marchers chanting "KKK go away."

Youth saves man asking to die in fire

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A 78-year-old man who told a rescuer he wanted to be left to die with his wife in a blazing house was dragged to safety by a teen-ager Saturday.

James Gillies, 18, said he smelled smoke as he passed by the house, approached and heard someone calling for help.

"I couldn't open the door, so I kicked it in," Gillies said.

"I said, 'Is there anyone else in there?' He said, 'My wife, but she's dead. Just let me stay here and die.'" Gillies said.

band's role in the burglary. In October, she accompanied Spaggiari on a trip to Japan, Hong Kong and Thailand. Inquiries are continuing through Interpol, the international police organization, into Spaggiari's financial activities during that trip.

Spaggiari first came to police attention in 1949 when, at the age of 17, he went to Sicily to try to join the bandit outlaws led by the glamorous Salvatore Giuliano. Italian police picked him up and sent him back to France.

SOON afterward, he volunteered for paratroop service in the French Indochina war. He rose to the rank of sergeant, but in 1954, shortly after the battle of Dien Bien Phu, he led his entire platoon in a raid on a Saigon brothel whose prostitutes had allegedly robbed some of his men.

Spaggiarai made off with the brothel's cash box and got four years in a military detention barracks. Ten years later, he was sentenced to another 18 months in prison for "activities threatening state security" as a member of the Secret Army Organization (OAS), formed in Algeria when it was a French colony. He had worked out the battle plan for an OAS attempt to assassinate the late President Charles de Gaulle during his visit to Hyeres in southern France, police charged. The plan was never carried out.

WHEN HE came out of jail, Spaggiari went to West Africa where he met and married Marcelle. The couple returned to France in the early 1970s and settled in Nice where Spaggiari began a career as a street photographer. His usual beat in those early days was on Massena Square in the heart of the city, near the Nice branch of the Societe Generale.

A block away is the Nice branch of the Banque de Paris et des Pays Bas, a major Dutch-French bank. On July 31, 1974, two men who had rented a safe deposit box there overpowered a girl attendant and calmly walked out with $360,000 in cash and gold.

"We had solid evidence linking Spaggiari with that audacious holdup — but no proof," Mourey said. No one was ever charged with the robbery. Peyrat denied that Spaggiari had anything to do with it.

But when Mourey saw the elaborate sewer break-in at the Societe Generale around the corner, he immediately thought of Spaggiari.

"I SAID TO myself there was nobody in Nice capable of organizing such a superb job other than Spaggiari," Mourey said. "And here again the problem was finding proof."

Spaggiari was kept under surveillance and knew he was being followed. Mourey said. But he showed no concern, looked after his photo business and his chicken farm in the mountains behind Nice, and in August went on a trip to the United States.

Spaggiari is quoted by police as saying he first got the idea for the break-in more than two years ago when he came across a plan of the Nice sewer system.

Asked how Spaggiari recruited the squad of 20 or so professionals for the job, Peyrat said: "When you need bread, you go to a baker's shop. When you need a burglar, you go where you know you'll find one."

MOUREY FEARS some members of the gang still free may try to kidnap Marcelle to force her to reveal Spaggiari's cache. She claims she knows nothing.

"It was understood between us that I would ask no questions," she said. "He didn't want to compromise me."

"His tragedy is that I was never able to give him the children he wanted with all his heart."

band's role in the burglary. In October, she accompanied Spaggiari on a trip to Japan, Hong Kong and Thailand. Inquiries are continuing through Interpol, the international police organization, into Spaggiari's financial activities during that trip.

Spaggiari first came to police attention in 1949 when, at the age of 17, he went to Sicily to try to join the bandit outlaws led by the glamorous Salvatore Giuliano. Italian police picked him up and sent him back to France.

SOON afterward, he volunteered for paratroop service in the French Indochina war. He rose to the rank of sergeant, but in 1954, shortly after the battle of Dien Bien Phu, he led his entire platoon in a raid on a Saigon brothel whose prostitutes had allegedly robbed some of his men.

Spaggiarai made off with the brothel's cash box and got four years in a military detention barracks. Ten years later, he was sentenced to another 18 months in prison for "activities threatening state security" as a member of the Secret Army Organization (OAS), formed in Algeria when it was a French colony. He had worked out the battle plan for an OAS attempt to assassinate the late President Charles de Gaulle during his visit to Hyères in southern France, police charged. The plan was never carried out.

WHEN HE came out of jail, Spaggiari went to West Africa where he met and married Marcelle. The couple returned to France in the early 1970s and settled in Nice where Spaggiari began a career as a street photographer. His usual beat in those early days was on Massena Square in the heart of the city, near the Nice branch of the Societe Generale.

A block away is the Nice branch of the Banque de Paris et des Pays Bas, a major Dutch-French bank. On July 31, 1974, two men who had rented a safe deposit box there overpowered a girl attendant and calmly walked out with $360,000 in cash and gold.

"We had solid evidence linking Spaggiari with that audacious holdup — but no proof," Mourey said. No one was ever charged with the robbery. Peyrat denied that Spaggiari had anything to do with it.

But when Mourey saw the elaborate sewer break-in at the Societe Generale around the corner, he immediately thought of Spaggiari.

"I SAID TO myself there was nobody in Nice capable of organizing such a superb job other than Spaggiari," Mourey said. "And here again the problem was finding proof."

Spaggiari was kept under surveillance and knew he was being followed. Mourey said. But he showed no concern, looked after his photo business and his chicken farm in the mountains behind Nice, and in August went on a trip to the United States.

Spaggiari is quoted by police as saying he first got the idea for the break-in more than two years ago when he came across a plan of the Nice sewer system.

Asked how Spaggiari recruited the squad of 20 or so professionals for the job, Peyrat said: "When you need bread, you go to a baker's shop. When you need a burglar, you go where you know you'll find one."

MOUREY FEARS some members of the gang still free may try to kidnap Marcelle to force her to reveal Spaggiari's cache. She claims she knows nothing.

"It was understood between us that I would ask no questions," she said. "He didn't want to compromise me."

"His tragedy is that I was never able to give him the children he wanted with all his heart."

MARLO THOMAS
Multi-media Star

'Our Town' due as TV production

Another version of Thornton Wilder's "Our Town" is coming to television.

Emmy winning producer George Schaefer promises "a fresh approach" to the American classic play, using the language of the television world instead of the theater. It will appear on NBC May 30.

Earl Wilson

Marlo won't talk about private life

NEW YORK — Marlo Thomas is such a brilliant performer at times that she just might become a superstar in the movies — at least, that's what the optimists at Paramount are saying.

Yet, Danny Thomas' grown up daughter stuck out her tongue, just like a child, at a reporter the other day.

The reporter was inquiring about her personal life, about possible marriage, about her apparent breakup with Herb Gardner, who wrote "Thieves," her starring movie in which she's in and out of love with Charles Grodin.

THE MOVIE is a comedy love story about two people who don't put enough time into their relationship to keep it strong. They steal time from each other. That's where the title comes from.

Well, Miss Thomas, who is the new guy going to be? Are you going to get married some time? How do your dad and mother feel about you avoiding the altar this long? What's new on the romance front?

Miss Thomas tossed back her long black hair and looked grimly at the reporter with her wide eyes. She shook her head disappointedly.

"There's just no way for you to get away from that subject, is there?" she asked, weary from having had it brought up so many times before. "You're just going to hang in there with it, aren't you?"

THAT'S WHEN Marlo Thomas stuck out her tongue at the reporter. Fortunately, she laughed at the same time.

"I just never, never talk about my private life," she reiterated. "It's the one thing I can hang on to."

Her public life increased with the release of the movie. It sent her into 15 cities, touring and telling and selling in a way that was never necessary when she starred in "That Girl" on TV.

She's hopping from city to city with about eight bags and a secretary-hairdresser, Lynn Masters. She's made as many as five changes in one day going from one TV interview to another.

"I've changed in powder rooms and on airplanes," she said. "That's like changing in a cigar box. I was in Atlanta, where it was freezing. There's no place where you can hide from this winter."

MARLO AND HERB Gardner devoted three years to bringing the idea into a story, then on to the Broadway stage and finally on to the screen. "The story came out of Herb Gardner's head," she said.

"It was a happy ending," Marlo continued. "I always cry at happy endings. My mother cried. My father, who is a very supportive parent, thought it was the best picture he ever saw."

Marlo made a lot of money on TV — "not enough to buy out Barbara Hutton" — but this picture gives her another leg on the success she wants — being able to move back and forth between the entertainment mediums. . .with another movie coming up, "Million Dollar Baby," which she'll do with Elaine May, a TV special for next Christmas. . .and the thought of another Broadway play.

Before TV, Marlo acted in national companies of stage shows, including "Sunday in New York" and "Two for the Seesaw."

" 'Thieves' was my first stage show on on Broadway and I loved that instant gratification. Your senses are all tensed up like a violin."

For professional reasons, Marlo doesn't go around blabbing about her age. "When is your next birthday?" the reporter asked her. "Not for a long, long time. Not for YEARS!" she said.

THE WEEKEND WINDUP . . .

Ben Vereen, dancing at the Chez disco, described Alex Haley, author of "Roots": "He's such a brilliant man that I never heard him say the same word twice". . .For Frank Milton (Jimmy Nederlander's co-producer on "Otherwise Engaged"), the comedy is his fourth consecutive Broadway hit. . .Ed Marinaro of the N.Y. Jets will be in the film "Fingers."

Mae West's crack to Ringo Starr in the film "Sextette": "You can pick flowers in my garden anytime!" . . . Veteran comic George DeWitt's producing the shows at Mordi's Place in Miami. . .Gag on the set of "Fun with Dick & Jane" was that one of the stars got the job by sleeping with the co-producer. (George Segal's wife Marion is co-producer.)

TODAY'S BEST laugh: Bob Melvin, back from the West Coast, claims New Yorkers are more news conscious: "Out there if you mention the Middle East situation, they ask, 'Oh, did something happen in Pittsburgh?' "

WISH I'D said that: Indebtedness is contagious. You can get it at any IRS office.

REMEMBERED quote: "A good education is important. It enables you to pick out the important things to worry about." Franklin P. Jones.

EARL'S PEARLS: A recent survey reports that one out of three women has wrinkled pantyhose. This finding is being checked by three out of four men.

Three prominent jockeys were at the Rainbow Grill and applauded the show. "The se guys gave the singer a standing ovation," said a waiter," but nobody knew it." That's Earl, brother.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Successful revisions to meet acutely changing conditions are followed by more than a year of refinement, day-to-day experiments to get the most out of your evolving way of life. The main idea is to keep your efforts in harmony with natural cause and effect. Today's natives prize what most people reject or reject what others think valuable. Those born this year will be brilliant in finding ways to get around obstacles, persuading others to join them.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Do what is important early; afternoon energy runs down sharply. Avoid speculative purchases, gambling. Romantic urges are strong, likewise wishful thinking.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Today's first few hours determine the week's outcome. Morning favors fresh starts, new jobs. After lunch, troubleshoot. Evening romance is for the eligible.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Borrowing, lending are out; renegotiating existing loans is difficult. Don't discuss specifics of plans with business contacts. Great changes are in motion.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Distracted by personal or family interests, you hear of events too late to get in on them. Don't worry. Current situations are mainly transitional phases.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): No amount of last-minute rush is going to make up for what you should have done ages ago. Stay within safety limits, good sense. Find time for emotional concerns.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Early decisions are swift. Resist pressures to unmake them late day. You have extra resources, but no reason to go beyond budgets despite sales pitches.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't force issues trying for perfection. Settle for the immediate, practical, in hopes of improving details later. Emotional ties are tested, strengthened.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Putting in a good appearance isn't sufficient. Come to terms with crucial factors at work. Then let well enough alone, regroup for renewed effort in a few days.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A strange slacking off follows early hubbub. Take a break from noon until intuition nudges you. Experiment with old but little-known methods on the job.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Expect no co-operation. Explaining your program only adds to confusion. Later you have a different approach; leave the way open, no commitment yet.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Through a busy day to a delicately balanced evening, talk is easy, too fluent. Promises are something else! Keep in mind that you're very much on your own.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Nothing goes as planned. A sense of humor, proportion, helps make the best of existing conditions. Sharing responsibility builds stronger relationships.

Shakespeare visits LBSU

By BOB SANDERS
Staff Writer

Four members of the Royal Shakespeare Company from Stratford-on-Avon presented a program of various readings from a variety of authors at Long Beach State University, and the result was amazing.

Two hundred and fifty people, mostly students, filled the Studio Theater to capacity Friday night and responded enthusiastically to almost everything the group did during the 2½-hour program.

Entitled "Groupings/Gropings," the program featured more or less simple readings from almost two-score authors ranging from John Donne to Jules Feiffer and featuring ribald comedy interspersed with heavy drama.

Aptly punctuated with song and guitar accompaniment, the presentation featured most of the modern authors anyone has ever heard of and some very few had.

It was a moving and fast-moving program, and one of the problems the audience had was trying to check the printed program to find out exactly where the actors were at any given time.

Of course if the audience ignored the program and just sat back and listened, they were entertained far beyond any expectations they should have had.

The actors—Sheila Allen, Patrick Stewart, Richard Pasco and Ben Kingsley, who played the guitar and did most of the heavy singing—were excellent.

The quick transitions, from studiously hilarious comedy to sometimes horribly pathetic tragedy, were carried off with eclat and aplomb.

Dressed very casually in ordinary streetwear, the actors managed to establish, at the outset, a solid rapport with the audience that never faltered throughout the complicated program.

There seemed to be no highlights in the presentation, since each number seemed to top the previous one.

"Groupings/Gropings" was first presented at the Royal Shakespeare Company's second theater, called the Other Place, where things other than Shakespeare are allowed.

Marlo won't talk about private life

NEW YORK — Marlo Thomas is such a brilliant performer at times that she just might become a superstar in the movies — at least, that's what the optimists at Paramount are saying.

Yet, Danny Thomas' grown up daughter stuck out her tongue, just like a child, at a reporter the other day.

The reporter was inquiring about her personal life, about possible marriage, about her apparent breakup with Herb Gardner, who wrote "Thieves," her starring movie in which she's in and out of love with Charles Grodin.

THE MOVIE is a comedy love story about two people who don't put enough time into their relationship to keep it strong. They steal time from each other. That's where the title comes from.

Well, Miss Thomas, who is the new guy going to be? Are you going to get married some time? How do your dad and mother feel about you avoiding the altar this long? What's new on the romance front?

Miss Thomas tossed back her long black hair and looked grimly at the reporter with her wide eyes. She shook her head disappointedly.

"There's just no way for you to get away from that subject, is there?" she asked, weary from having had it brought up so many times before. "You're just going to hang in there with it, aren't you?"

THAT'S WHEN Marlo Thomas stuck out her tongue at the reporter. Fortunately, she laughed at the same time.

"I just never, never talk about my private life," she reiterated. "It's the one thing I can hang on to."

Her public life increased with the release of the movie. It sent her into 15 cities, touring and telling and selling in a way that was never necessary when she starred in "That Girl" on TV.

MARLO AND HERB Gardner devoted three years to bringing the idea into a story, then on to the Broadway stage and finally on to the screen. "The story came out of Herb Gardner's head," she said.

"It was a happy ending," Marlo continued. "I always cry at happy endings. My mother cried. My father, who is a very supportive parent, thought it was the best picture he ever saw."

Marlo made a lot of money on TV — "not enough to buy out Barbara Hutton" — but this picture gives her another leg on the success she wants — being able to move back and forth between the entertainment mediums. . .with another movie coming up, "Million Dollar Baby," which she'll do with Elaine May, a TV special for next Christmas. . .and the thought of another Broadway play.

Before TV, Marlo acted in national companies of stage shows, including "Sunday in New York" and "Two for the Seesaw."

" 'Thieves' was my first stage show on on Broadway and I loved that instant gratification. Your senses are all tensed up like a violin."

For professional reasons, Marlo doesn't go around blabbing about her age. "When is your next birthday?" the reporter asked her. "Not for a long, long time. Not for YEARS!" she said.

THE WEEKEND WINDUP . . .

Ben Vereen, dancing at the Chez disco, described Alex Haley, author of "Roots": "He's such a brilliant man that I never heard him say the same word twice". . .For Frank Milton (Jimmy Nederlander's co-producer on "Otherwise Engaged"), the comedy is his fourth consecutive Broadway hit. . .Ed Marinaro of the N.Y. Jets will be in the film "Fingers."

Mae West's crack to Ringo Starr in the film "Sextette": "You can pick flowers in my garden anytime!" . . . Veteran comic George DeWitt's producing the shows at Mordi's Place in Miami. . .Gag on the set of "Fun with Dick & Jane" was that one of the stars got the job by sleeping with the co-producer. (George Segal's wife Marion is co-producer.)

TODAY'S BEST laugh: Bob Melvin, back from the West Coast, claims New Yorkers are more news conscious: "Out there if you mention the Middle East situation, they ask, 'Oh, did something happen in Pittsburgh?' "

WISH I'D said that: Indebtedness is contagious. You can get it at any IRS office.

REMEMBERED quote: "A good education is important. It enables you to pick out the important things to worry about." Franklin P. Jones.

EARL'S PEARLS: A recent survey reports that one out of three women has wrinkled pantyhose. This finding is being checked by three out of four men.

Three prominent jockeys were at the Rainbow Grill and applauded the show. "The se guys gave the singer a standing ovation," said a waiter," but nobody knew it." That's Earl, brother.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Successful revisions to meet acutely changing conditions are followed by more than a year of refinement, day-to-day experiments to get the most out of your evolving way of life. The main idea is to keep your efforts in harmony with natural cause and effect. Today's natives prize what most people reject or reject what others think valuable. Those born this year will be brilliant in finding ways to get around obstacles, persuading others to join them.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Do what is important early; afternoon energy runs down sharply. Avoid speculative purchases, gambling. Romantic urges are strong, likewise wishful thinking.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Today's first few hours determine the week's outcome. Morning favors fresh starts, new jobs. After lunch, troubleshoot. Evening romance is for the eligible.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Borrowing, lending are out; renegotiating existing loans is difficult. Don't discuss specifics of plans with business contacts. Great changes are in motion.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Distracted by personal or family interests, you hear of events too late to get in on them. Don't worry. Current situations are mainly transitional phases.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): No amount of last-minute rush is going to make up for what you should have done ages ago. Stay within safety limits, good sense. Find time for emotional concerns.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Early decisions are swift. Resist pressures to unmake them late day. You have extra resources, but no reason to go beyond budgets despite sales pitches.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't force issues trying for perfection. Settle for the immediate, practical, in hopes of improving details later. Emotional ties are tested, strengthened.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Putting in a good appearance isn't sufficient. Come to terms with crucial factors at work. Then let well enough alone, regroup for renewed effort in a few days.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A strange slacking off follows early hubbub. Take a break from noon until intuition nudges you. Experiment with old but little-known methods on the job.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Expect no co-operation. Explaining your program only adds to confusion. Later you have a different approach; leave the way open, no commitment yet.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Through a busy day to a delicately balanced evening, talk is easy, too fluent. Promises are something else! Keep in mind that you're very much on your own.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Nothing goes as planned. A sense of humor, proportion, helps make the best of existing conditions. Sharing responsibility builds stronger relationships.

Shakespeare visits LBSU

By BOB SANDERS
Staff Writer

Four members of the Royal Shakespeare Company from Stratford-on-Avon presented a program of various readings from a variety of authors at Long Beach State University, and the result was amazing.

Two hundred and fifty people, mostly students, filled the Studio Theater to capacity Friday night and responded enthusiastically to almost everything the group did during the 2½-hour program.

Entitled "Groupings/Gropings," the program featured more or less simple readings from almost two-score authors ranging from John Donne to Jules Feiffer and featuring ribald comedy interspersed with heavy drama.

Aptly punctuated with song and guitar accompaniment, the presentation featured most of the modern authors anyone has ever heard of and some very few had.

It was a moving and fast-moving program, and one of the problems the audience had was trying to check the printed program to find out exactly where the actors were at any given time.

Of course if the audience ignored the program and just sat back and listened, they were entertained far beyond any expectations they should have had.

The actors—Sheila Allen, Patrick Stewart, Richard Pasco and Ben Kingsley, who played the guitar and did most of the heavy singing—were excellent.

The quick transitions, from studiously hilarious comedy to sometimes horribly pathetic tragedy, were carried off with eclat and aplomb.

Dressed very casually in ordinary streetwear, the actors managed to establish, at the outset, a solid rapport with the audience that never faltered throughout the complicated program.

There seemed to be no highlights in the presentation, since each number seemed to top the previous one.

"Groupings/Gropings" was first presented at the Royal Shakespeare Company's second theater, called the Other Place, where things other than Shakespeare are allowed.

Colorful Las Vegas show

'Guys, Dolls' back and black

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

They colored "Guys and Dolls" black at the Aladdin Theater in Las Vegas last week, and they came out beautiful.

Damon Runyon would dig it. His antic fictional characters make the transition from Broadway to Garish City without a hitch. In fact, they emerge with new elan, style and energy all their own: The production moves. It also sparkles, swings and rocks.

It's as though the energy transfer from white to black got hyped along the way and the result is supercharged. And the original material — Runyon's short story characters and Frank Loesser's music — improves with cultural transplant. It stands up well, too: "Guys and Dolls" opened on Broadway Nov. 24, 1950, and the 1977 production at the Aladdin looks as contemporary as the genre can allow. There's no nudity or homosexuality, but there's a lot of good jivin' and street phrases, and the choreography is strictly current.

Of course the material is a natural. When Nathan Detroit and Nicely Nicely and Big Jule get to talkin' to those cubes, the folks identify in Vegas.

And the minute Clifton Davis (who plays Sky Masterson) broke into "Luck, Be A Lady Tonight," first nighters clapped.

There were a couple of opening night missed cues and a few microphone goofs, but the show emerged basically black and beautiful fun.

Leslie Uggams is in beautiful voice as Sister Sarah. And, although she's encased in a prim, 1977 missionary uniform, she still comes across as a very warm, sexy lady. Not as foxy as Miss Adelaide (Judy Pace Mitchell), who almost steals the show.

Jimmy Spinks, who plays a big, fat Nicely, does his scene stealing in a frenetic episode inside the mission when he and the company rock out on "Sit Down, You're Rockin' the Boat —" with many reprises.

Adam Wade plays a cool, hip Nathan Detroit in an electric blue suit, and Big Jule rolls his unmarked black dice wearing a maroon, pink and purple mismatch that makes your eyeballs tingle.

The whole name of the show is color, actually. The settings vibrate: strong lavender, orange, poison green and neon pink mix in Fauvist fantasy. The same is true of costuming.

In the final analysis, however, the finest color is the great choreography, a tribute to director-choreographer Billy Wilson. He's fresh from the Broadway production of "Bubbling Brown Sugar," now showing in Los Angeles, and his credentials are tops — from New York to London to Harlem, Holland and Harvard.

The dancers don't appear to have any bones at all; they are sheer fluid grace. Everything they do looks fresh and fast moving.

That's more than I can say about the clanking, neon-hued catacombs where the slot freaks stay mesmerized for hours.

Maybe that's why so many guys and dolls pack into the huge, semicircular Aladdin Theater each night.

Mickey Gilley wins country music honor

Associated Press

Mickey Gilley has sung and played his way to top honors in five categories of the 2th annual Academy of Country Music Awards.

Gilley won prizes for entertainer of the year, top male vocalist, best single record, album of the year and song of the year.

Crystal Gale was named top female vocalist. Conway Twitty and Loretta Lynn combined for top vocal group honors, Billie Jo Spears was the most promising female singer and Moe Bandy got the same award in the men's department.

Roy Clark received the Jim Reeves Memorial Award, and the Pioneer award went to record producer Owen Bradley.

Jim Ed finds a good new partner

NASHVILLE (AP) — "Jim Ed Brown, meet Helen Cornelius."

Three hours after that recent introduction, the veteran country music star and his new singing partner recorded his first hit in three years and propelled her from obscurity to stardom.

The two had never met before recording "I Don't Want to Have to Marry You." She was a little-known singer and songwriter, living quietly in Hannibal, Mo., raising three children between 12 and 15.

Helen Cornelius signed an RCA recording contract in 1975 but had no hits. Nevertheless, a year later producer Bob Ferguson picked her as a perfect partner for Brown.

After the success of "I Don't Want to Have to Marry You," she joined Brown's road show and became a regular on his syndicated television show, "Nashville on the Road." She moved to Nashville in December.

She and Brown have become one of the most successful country duos, and their recent release "Saying Hello, Saying I Love You, Saying Goodbye" made the top 10.

"She's been able to step in, and, boy, have we carried her high," said Brown, who at 6-foot-2 towers over his singing partner by more than a foot. "She's taken control, is settled and has goals. I think she's on her way."

There have been humbling experiences. She once noticed "I Don't Want to Have to Marry You" on a jukebox with her name omitted. At a fair, she overheard someone refer to "Jim Ed Brown and the girl he sings with."

Her background is very similar to Loretta Lynn's. Both are from rural backgrounds with large families, both married while teen-agers and both had children shortly after marriage.

"I was born and raised on a farm in the sticks," she said. "The boys used to say we lived at 40th and Plum — 40 miles plum out in the sticks. I drove the tractor, put up hay and did everything you do on a farm except help with the animals.

"I was the next to youngest in a family of eight. We didn't have much, and I grew up on hand-me-downs. I learned so much about appreciating life that I wouldn't trade my childhood for anything. My desire to chieve came out of this."

Her husband, Lewis, has provided constant encouragement.

"You've heard the phrase about there being a woman behind every successful man," she said. "In this case the reverse is true."

'Slipper, Rose'

"THE SLIPPER AND THE ROSE" raises the question: Does the world need another version of Cinderella? The answer is a qualified "yes."

Colorful Las Vegas show

'Guys, Dolls' back and black

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

They colored "Guys and Dolls" black at the Aladdin Theater in Las Vegas last week, and they came out beautiful.

Damon Runyon would dig it. His antic fictional characters make the transition from Broadway to Garish City without a hitch. In fact, they emerge with new elan, style and energy all their own: The production moves. It also sparkles, swings and rocks.

It's as though the energy transfer from white to black got hyped along the way and the result is supercharged. And the original material — Runyon's short story characters and Frank Loesser's music — improves with cultural transplant. It stands up well, too: "Guys and Dolls" opened on Broadway Nov. 24, 1950, and the 1977 production at the Aladdin looks as contemporary as the genre can allow. There's no nudity or homosexuality, but there's a lot of good jivin' and street phrases, and the choreography is strictly current.

Of course the material is a natural. When Nathan Detroit and Nicely Nicely and Big Jule get to talkin' to those cubes, the folks identify in Vegas.

And the minute Clifton Davis (who plays Sky Masterson) broke into "Luck, Be A Lady Tonight," first nighters clapped.

There were a couple of opening night missed cues and a few microphone goofs, but the show emerged basically black and beautiful fun.

Leslie Uggams is in beautiful voice as Sister Sarah. And, although she's encased in a prim, 1977 missionary uniform, she still comes across as a very warm, sexy lady. Not as foxy as Miss Adelaide (Judy Pace Mitchell), who almost steals the show.

Jimmy Spinks, who plays a big, fat Nicely, does his scene stealing in a frenetic episode inside the mission when he and the company rock out on "Sit Down, You're Rockin' the Boat —" with many reprises.

Adam Wade plays a cool, hip Nathan Detroit in an electric blue suit, and Big Jule rolls his unmarked black dice wearing a maroon, pink and purple mismatch that makes your eyeballs tingle.

The whole name of the show is color, actually. The settings vibrate: strong lavender, orange, poison green and neon pink mix in Fauvist fantasy. The same is true of costuming.

In the final analysis, however, the finest color is the great choreography, a tribute to director-choreographer Billy Wilson. He's fresh from the Broadway production of "Bubbling Brown Sugar," now showing in Los Angeles, and his credentials are tops — from New York to London to Harlem, Holland and Harvard.

The dancers don't appear to have any bones at all; they are sheer fluid grace. Everything they do looks fresh and fast moving.

That's more than I can say about the clanking, neon-hued catacombs where the slot freaks stay mesmerized for hours.

Maybe that's why so many guys and dolls pack into the huge, semicircular Aladdin Theater each night.

LESLIE UGGAMS IN BEAUTIFUL VOICE

Mickey Gilley wins country music honor

Associated Press

Mickey Gilley has sung and played his way to top honors in five categories of the 2th annual Academy of Country Music Awards.

Gilley won prizes for entertainer of the year, top male vocalist, best single record, album of the year and song of the year.

Crystal Gale was named top female vocalist, Conway Twitty and Loretta Lynn combined for top vocal group honors, Billie Jo Spears was the most promising female singer and Moe Bandy got the same award in the men's department.

Roy Clark received the Jim Reeves Memorial Award, and the Pioneer award went to record producer Owen Bradley.

Jim Ed finds a good new partner

NASHVILLE (AP) — "Jim Ed Brown, meet Helen Cornelius."

Three hours after that recent introduction, the veteran country music star and his new singing partner recorded his first hit in three years and propelled her from obscurity to stardom.

The two had never met before recording "I Don't Want to Have to Marry You." She was a little-known singer and songwriter, living quietly in Hannibal, Mo., raising three children between 12 and 15.

Helen Cornelius signed an RCA recording contract in 1975 but had no hits. Nevertheless, a year later producer Bob Ferguson picked her as a perfect partner for Brown.

After the success of "I Don't Want to Have to Marry You," she joined Brown's road show and became a regular on his syndicated television show, "Nashville on the Road." She moved to Nashville in December.

She and Brown have become one of the most successful country duos, and their recent release "Saying Hello, Saying I Love You, Saying Goodbye" made the top 10.

"She's been able to step in, and, boy, have we carried her high," said Brown, who at 6-foot-2 towers over his singing partner by more than a foot. "She's taken control, is settled and has goals. I think she's on her way."

There have been humbling experiences. She once noticed "I Don't Want to Have to Marry You" on a jukebox with her name omitted. At a fair, she overheard someone refer to "Jim Ed Brown and the girl he sings with."

Her background is very similar to Loretta Lynn's. Both are from rural backgrounds with large families, both married while teen-agers and both had children shortly after marriage.

"I was born and raised on a farm in the sticks," she said. "The boys used to say we lived at 40th and Plum — 40 miles plum out in the sticks. I drove the tractor, put up hay and did everything you do on a farm except help with the animals.

"I was the next to youngest in a family of eight. We didn't have much, and I grew up on hand-me-downs. I learned so much about appreciating life that I wouldn't trade my childhood for any-thing. My desire to chieve came out of this."

Her husband, Lewis, has provided constant encouragement.

"You've heard the phrase about there being a woman behind every successful man," she said. "In this case the reverse is true."

'Slipper, Rose'

"THE SLIPPER AND THE ROSE" raises the question: Does the world need another version of Cinderella? The answer is a qualified "yes."

One couple planning to buy a shoreline home on Lake Mission Viejo watches progress of the recreation project, already 40 per cent filled.

Viejo finds dry humor in a half-filled lake

Is it wasting water or . . . ?

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

More than 2,800 prospective Southland homebuyers agreed several years ago with developers of Lake Mission Viejo that the 125-acre recreational lake was a thing of beauty.

Yet, like beauty, the wisdom of a decision by state authorities on whether filling the lake should be stopped until the dust clears from California's worst drought, also may be in the eye of the beholder.

Lake Mission Viejo overnight has become both a symbol and a paradox, testing the limit of community planning and the roles of competing government agencies.

Mission Viejo itself was conceived 14 years ago as a total planned community. Few doubt it has succeeded in fulfilling its promise of a better life for those who can afford it.

Developers seemed to learn from the mistakes of the past, specifically the contradictions of North Orange County, where zoning patterns resemble a crazy-quilt pattern of convenience and community identity ends at intersections.

In developing Mission Viejo, planners believed a community could be controlled and that environment was indeed predictable.

Mission Viejo offered quality homes, controlled density, wide-open spaces, community resources and, as a final selling point, unlimited recreational opportunities for the entire family.

And Mission Viejo had a slogan, unheard of in the live-for-today milieu of Southern California:

"Mission Viejo — Where 'home' is a 'hometown' again."

Young Southland families, hard-pressed to find suitable housing and whose rising incomes gave them the choice of where to raise their families, bought the slogan and bought the homes.

They first arrived in 1966, and the community has been a seller's market since. Developers were pleased, if only because they are the first to admit that, all social consequences aside, Mission Viejo should make money.

Everyone prospered.

The lake became part of that dream of this planned community. The 3,600-acre-foot lake would provide recreation for the community's 37,000 residents and would be the special preserve for a select group of shoreline homebuyers.

In addition to recreation, the lake also would be a 60-day emergency water storage facility for the 115,000 residents living in five adjacent water districts. It also would improve air quality, developers said.

L.B. couple gets free London trip

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

When a young man attempted to rob Morey and Joan Shuff on a London street last September, Morey Shuff had a very natural response:

"I went after him," he recalls.

Shuff's response not only saved his bag containing passports, travelers' checks and other valuables, it won for him and his wife something few Americans can claim.

The couple was flown back to London last month — courtesy of the British Crown — to testify at the young man's trial.

While the Shuffs, of 5191 Canton St., Long Beach, say they weren't happy about the attempted robbery, they admit they can only smile with glee over their unexpected second vacation.

BUT THE trip was more than a vacation, the couple adds, because they adhered to a personal principle of getting involved and bringing the attempted robber to trial (he was convicted); got a first-hand glimpse into the traditions of the English justice system, and came away with a new appreciation of our "British cousins."

During an interview in their home, which is tastefully decorated with mementos of previous European vacations, Morey, 56, and Joan, 51, recounted their adventure:

"We had just gotten to London last September — actually it was our second night there — when this happened," Shuff began. "We've been to Europe several times, and we've never had any trouble; you know you're so safe there, we walk or take public transportation everywhere."

Shuff said he and his wife had just come out of a restaurant and were walking through the Jermyn Street shopping district, near Piccadilly Circus, when a young man grabbed the small bag he was carrying.

"I carry a bag just like many European men," he explained. "It's just a small bag, with a strap that hooks around my wrist. We usually put our passports and valuables in the hotel safe, but we were in a hurry that night, so I had them in the bag."

Shuff said there were several people on the street at that time — about 10:30 p.m. — and the man came out of the crowd, grabbed for the bag, broke the strap and began to run away.

"Well," he continued, "the force of his grab swung me around, so I went after the man. The bag dropped to the street in the scuffle, and the two of us exchanged blows."

SHUFF SAID the assailant broke away from the fight and ran down the street but was stopped by a doorman who witnessed the struggle from a nearby discotheque.

The two men wrestled the would-be robber to the ground, and Mrs. Shuff phoned for the Metropolitan Police.

"If he hadn't dropped the bag, he would have been long gone, and we probably never would have gotten it back," Mrs. Shuff interjected. "I picked it up off the curb during the fight."

Shuff said the London "bobbies," who travel in pairs in the central city and carry walkie-talkies instead of weapons, arrived in minutes.

"It was really quite a scene," he remembered. "They questioned us, then called for a patrol wagon — what you and I would call a paddy wagon — and took us all off to the police station."

The Shuffs were questioned, a deposition was taken, and they were ordered to appear the next day in Magistrate's Court, where the prisoner, James Conray of London, was read his rights and charged with assault and assault with intent to rob.

"He pleaded not guilty, and court officials explained to us that this was often the situation in cases of this nature," Mrs. Shuff said. "The defendants apparently believe that they will get away — even if the Crown pays for the witnesses to return — because Americans often won't be bothered or don't have the time to come back."

The Shuffs said the English officials "were very gracious," explaining that the trial could be scheduled as far in the future as nine months to a year but adding that the Crown would pay their way back to London to testify.

THEY SAID they continued their vacation as planned — save for the discomforts of a black-and-blue eye and a cut hand Morey suffered in the scuffle — touring France, part of Italy, Switzerland and Spain, then returning home.

"Our next contact about the case came from the Justice Department in Los Angeles," Mrs. Shuff said with a smile. "A man from Justice called to say he had received a call from Interpol — and now it starts sounding like a bloody spy magazine — and that we were to come to London."

The Shuffs' second vacation began Jan. 8, when they boarded a British Airways jet for London.

They both testified Jan. 12 during the Conray's three-day trial of in Knight's Bridge Crown Court.

Both were intrigued with the ceremonious nature of the English court, which featured judge and attorneys wearing black robes and white, horsehair wigs with curls; the defendant seated in the rear of the courtroom, with the jury on one side and spectators on the other; and a docket in which the witnesses stand and face the defendant.

"WE WERE just fascinated by the traditions and ceremony of the court," the couple agreed. "The clerk (pronounced clark) was so very nice. He took the time to explain procedures and show us one of the wigs. They're handmade and cost more than $200 each.

Transferred judges react differently

By AL MURRELL
Staff Writer

Long Beach Superior Court Judge Charles Litwin, who is being transferred to Central District as a result of the recent economic cutback by the court, plans to ride the bus to work because he doesn't want to battle the rush-hour traffic into downtown Los Angeles.

Torrance Superior Court Judge Frank Baffa, who will succeed Litwin as head of the criminal master calendar department on Tuesday, says he asked for the transfer to Long Beach "because the court has an excellent reputation" and it is closer to his home.

The transfers were necessary because Baffa's courtroom was one of eight closed by the superior court in an effort to operate within the 1975-76 budget established by the county board of supervisors.

BAFFA originally was scheduled to be moved to Central District, but he was allowed to come to Long Beach instead because he has more superior court seniority than Litwin.

Litwin, who has spent the last 35 years of his legal career in Long Beach, is not happy about the transfer and hopes he will be able to return when the 1977-78 county budget goes into effect next summer.

Superior Court Presiding Judge William P. Hogoboom has said he will ask the supervisors to restore the eight closed departments and to create any additional judgeships which are needed at the time.

Litwin, 61, was born in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, and acquired his U.S. citizenship in New York when he was 7.

He received his law degree from Southwestern University in Los Angeles in 1938. After three years of private practice in Los Angeles, he moved to the Long Beach law firm of George Shibley.

He worked as an attorney with a variety of Long Beach firms until December 1966, when he was appointed as a Long Beach Municipal Court judge by then-Gov. Edmund G. "Pat" Brown.

From 1957 through 1963, Litwin was in law partnership with Max Wisot, now a Long Beach Superior Court judge.

LITWIN was elevated to the Superior Court by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. in January 1976.

Litwin, who lives in Long Beach, is married and has one son, Steve, 33. His wife, Helen, is a senior family law counselor for the Superior Court.

Litwin received widespread publicity last November when a group of some 200 Long Beach State University students staged a rally on the courthouse steps to protest the judge's sentencing of a confessed rapist to 30 consecutive weekends in jail.

F.C. Anderson

IN A LIFETIME that will reach 83 years on May 9, Abel Trout has built houses and ships, a bridge across the generation gap and his own legend.

The legend isn't finished, and neither is the tireless Abel Trout. As long as there are things to be done for the staff, children and senior citizens at Carmelitos Recreation Center, he'll be on the job.

Abel, a member of RSVP (Retired Senior Volunteer Program), lives at 6781 Olive Ave. That's three miles up the road from Carmelitos, on a route Abel's white Dodge pickup truck knows by heart.

Every morning, rain or shine, foggy or clear, you'll find Abel's truck parked outside the office of center director Susan Mathieu, waiting for Abel to return with his pocket calendar, which lists his assignments for the day.

Susan keeps the date book current, listing all the field trips, basketball, football and softball games Abel makes with the children. The date book probably isn't needed, for Abel's memory would put an IBM computer to shame. Even so, he feels more comfortable having the little calendar of events in his pocket. A man as busy as Abel Trout can use a backup.

Abel can haul 17 children in the pickup, and he's a bug for safety. The truck has a steel pipe handbold, padded bench seats, stout locks. It also has a driver who takes no nonsense from his passengers.

Sometimes Abel takes the children ice skaking. Sometimes they go to the El Dorado Park Nature Center. Anything in the Long Beach area worth seeing is worth a field trip by Abel Trout and his young friends.

Abel Trout is at an age where he could have time on his hands. Instead, he's got kids on his lap, as Santa Claus at the center's Christmas parties. There are, of course, some sharp Carmelitos youngsters who don't believe in Santa Claus. And that's no problem — they believe in Abel Trout.

Abel says longevity runs in his family. "My father lived to 92; his father made it to 106, and if it hadn't been for pneumonia, my mother would have gone way past 82."

Abel's people came from Oceola, Mo., arriving in the Covina area when he was a lad of 7. "There was nothing out there then but lots of orange groves and open space. My father labored in the groves and taught us the virtues of hard work, punctuality and charity toward others."

In 1916, at 22, Abel was a conductor on the Los Angeles Railway's yellow cars. He signed up in the U.S. Army's remount service in World War I, breaking and training horses and mules for cavalry and artillery duty. During his Army service he moonlighted as a boxing instructor, an experience that was to be of great benefit after the war when he was employed as a bouncer in a Los Angeles dance hall.

Then came the building trade, the carpentry and masonry and the iron skills that carried him through home and building construction and the shipyards of Long Beach, Wilmington and San Pedro.

In World War II, Abel Trout was a military policeman, serving mostly at Camp Hahn, out near March Field. He had little trouble enforcing military law, for all he had to do with an errant GI was flash his old bouncer scowl and flex the biceps toughened in the shipyards.

Abel was married once, the union ending in divorce — "friendly like." The marital experience didn't sour him on women, but it also didn't cause him to pursue them with great vigor.

Abel allows that he doesn't go to church often, although he tries to practice the Golden Rule. He doesn't smoke and doesn't drink, and without those vices to upset his physiology, his health is good. A few little twinges of arthritis have slowed him down a bit, he says, but you can't tell it by the pace he maintains.

He walks with a slight limp, a residue of a motorcycle accident between the wars. Aside from that, and the arthritis, he's as spry as the children he serves.

The kids, staff and senior citizens at Carmelitos Recreation Center set their watches by Abel. They know he'll be on hand to assist the senior citizen nutrition program, to chauffeur the kids, to tell stories, give counsel, assist with the flu immunization program, to lend a hand with whatever needs doing.

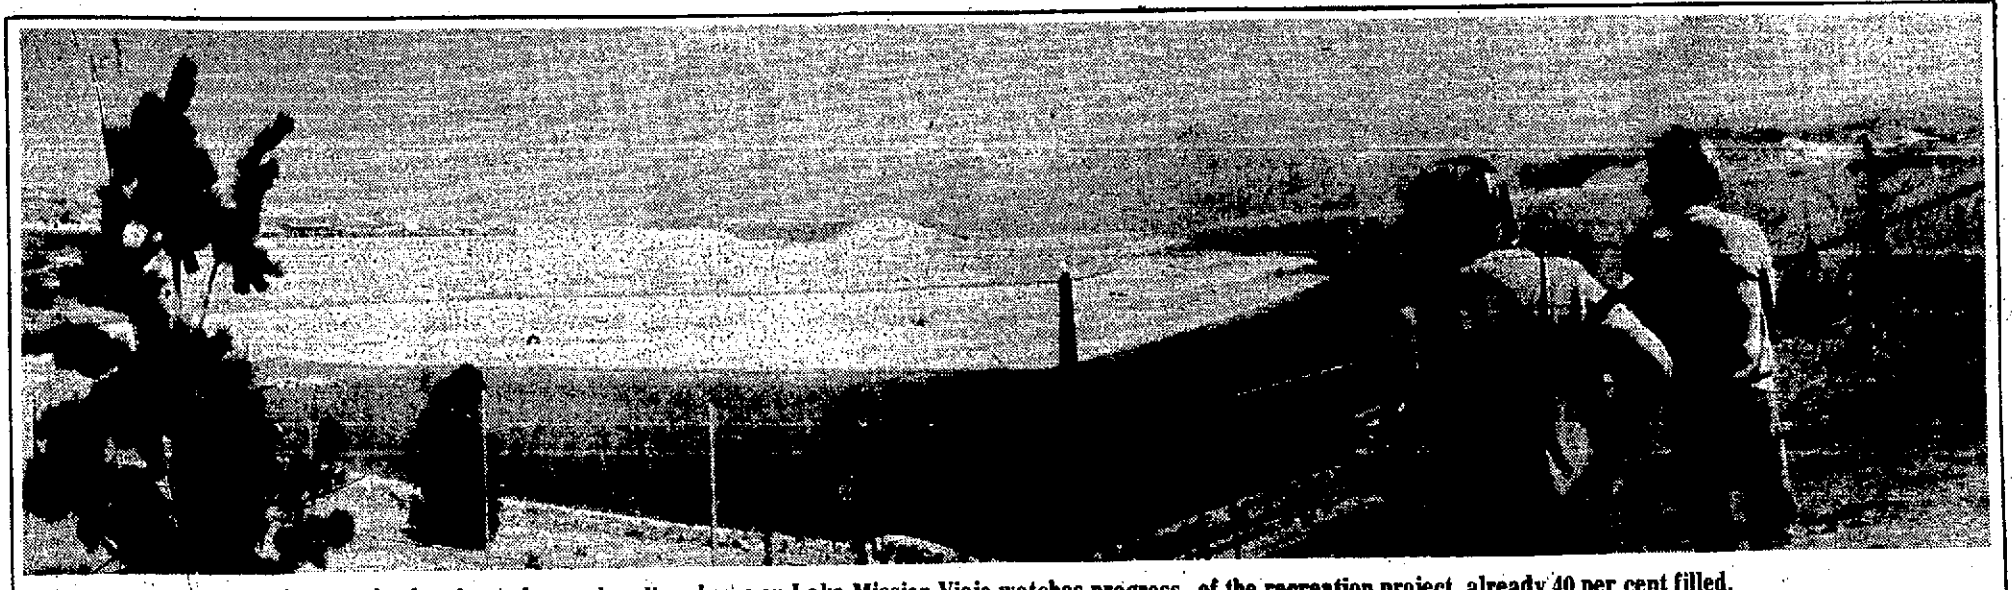

Abel Trout is like the railroad watch my great-grandfather bequeathed me almost 45 years ago. The watch just got better with time.

As Susan Mathieu says, "Abel's more than fabulous. He's incomparable. We just couldn't do without him." Abel says the feeling is mutual.

Shuff's response not only saved his bag containing passports, travelers' checks and other valuables, it won for him and his wife something few Americans can claim.

The couple was flown back to London last month — courtesy of the British Crown — to testify at the young man's trial.

While the Shuffs, of 5191 Canton St., Long Beach, say they weren't happy about the attempted robbery, they admit they can only smile with glee over their unexpected second vacation.

BUT THE trip was more than a vacation, the couple adds, because they adhered to a personal principle of getting involved and bringing the attempted robber to trial (he was convicted); got a first-hand glimpse into the traditions of the English justice system, and came away with a new appreciation of our "British cousins."

During an interview in their home, which is tastefully decorated with mementos of previous European vacations, Morey, 56, and Joan, 51, recounted their adventure:

"We had just gotten to London last September — actually it was our second night there — when this happened," Shuff began. "We've been to Europe several times, and we've never had any trouble; you know you're so safe there, we walk or take public transportation everywhere."

Shuff said he and his wife had just come out of a restaurant and were walking through the Jermyn Street shopping district, near Piccadilly Circus, when a young man grabbed the small bag he was carrying.

"I carry a bag just like many European men," he explained. "It's just a small bag, with a strap that hooks around my wrist. We usually put our passports and valuables in the hotel safe, but we were in a hurry that night, so I had them in the bag."

Shuff said there were several people on the street at that time — about 10:30 p.m. — and the man came out of the crowd, grabbed for the bag, broke the strap and began to run away.

"Well," he continued, "the force of his grab swung me around, so I went after the man. The bag dropped to the street in the scuffle, and the two of us exchanged blows."

SHUFF SAID the assailant broke away from the fight and ran down the street but was stopped by a doorman who witnessed the struggle from a nearby discotheque.

The two men wrestled the would-be robber to the ground, and Mrs. Shuff phoned for the Metropolitan Police.

"If he hadn't dropped the bag, he would have been long gone, and we probably never would have gotten it back," Mrs. Shuff interjected. "I picked it up off the curb during the fight."

Shuff said the London "bobbies," who travel in pairs in the central city and carry walkie-talkies instead of weapons, arrived in minutes.

"It was really quite a scene," he remembered. "They questioned us; then called for a patrol wagon — what you and I would call a paddy wagon — and took us all off to the police station."

The Shuffs were questioned, a deposition was taken, and they were ordered to appear the next day in Magistrate's Court, where the prisoner, James Conray of London, was read his rights and charged with assault and assault with intent to rob.

"He pleaded not guilty, and court officials explained to us that this was often the situation in cases of this nature," Mrs. Shuff said. "The defendants apparently believe that they will get away — even if the Crown pays for the witnesses to return — because Americans often won't be bothered or don't have the time to come back."

The Shuffs said the English officials "were very gracious," explaining that the trial could be scheduled as far in the future as nine months to a year but adding that the Crown would pay their way back to London to testify.

THEY SAID they continued their vacation as planned — save for the discomforts of a black-and-blue eye and a cut hand Morey suffered in the scuffle — touring France, part of Italy, Switzerland and Spain, then returning home.

"Our next contact about the case came from the Justice Department in Los Angeles," Mrs. Shuff said with a smile. "A man from Justice called to say he had received a call from Interpol — and now it starts sounding like a bloody spy magazine — and that we were to come to London."

The Shuffs' second vacation began Jan. 8, when they boarded a British Airways jet for London.

They both testified Jan. 12 during the Conray's three-day trial of in Knight's Bridge Crown Court.

Both were intrigued with the ceremonious nature of the English court, which featured judge and attorneys wearing black robes and white, horsehair wigs with curls; the defendant seated in the rear of the courtroom, with the jury on one side and spectators on the other; and a docket in which the witnesses stand and face the defendant.

"WE WERE just fascinated by the traditions and ceremony of the court," the couple agreed. "The clerk (pronounced clark) was so very nice. He took the time to explain procedures and show us one of the wigs. They're handmade and cost more than $200 each.

Transferred judges react differently

By AL MURRELL
Staff Writer

Long Beach Superior Court Judge Charles Litwin, who is being transferred to Central District as a result of the recent economic cutback by the court, plans to ride the bus to work because he doesn't want to battle the rush-hour traffic into downtown Los Angeles.

Torrance Superior Court Judge Frank Baffa, who will succeed Litwin as head of the criminal master calendar department on Tuesday, says he asked for the transfer to Long Beach "because the court has an excellent reputation" and it is closer to his home.

The transfers were necessary because Baffa's courtroom was one of eight closed by the superior court in an effort to operate within the 1975-76 budget established by the county board of supervisors.

BAFFA originally was scheduled to be moved to Central District, but he was allowed to come to Long Beach instead because he has more superior court seniority than Litwin.

Litwin, who has spent the last 35 years of his legal career in Long Beach, is not happy about the transfer and hopes he will be able to return when the 1977-78 county budget goes into effect next summer.

Superior Court Presiding Judge William P. Hogoboom has said he will ask the supervisors to restore the eight closed departments and to create any additional judgeships which are needed at the time.

Litwin, 61, was born in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, and acquired his U.S. citizenship in New York when he was 7.

He received his law degree from Southwestern University in Los Angeles in 1938. After three years of private practice in Los Angeles, he moved to the Long Beach law firm of George Shibley.

He worked as an attorney with a variety of Long Beach firms until December 1966, when he was appointed as a Long Beach Municipal Court judge by then-Gov. Edmund G. "Pat" Brown.

From 1957 through 1963, Litwin was in law partnership with Max Wisot, now a Long Beach Superior Court judge.

LITWIN was elevated to the Superior Court by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. in January 1976.

Litwin, who lives in Long Beach, is married and has one son, Steve, 33. His wife, Helen, is a senior family law counselor for the Superior Court.

Litwin received widespread publicity last November when a group of some 200 Long Beach State University students staged a rally on the courthouse steps to protest the judge's sentencing of a confessed rapist to 30 consecutive weekends in jail.

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

IN A LIFETIME that will reach 83 years on May 9, Abel Trout has built houses and ships, a bridge across the generation gap and his own legend.

The legend isn't finished, and neither is the tireless Abel Trout. As long as there are things to be done for the staff, children and senior citizens at Carmelitos Recreation Center, he'll be on the job.

Abel, a member of RSVP (Retired Senior Volunteer Program), lives at 6781 Olive Ave. That's three miles up the road from Carmelitos, on a route Abel's white Dodge pickup truck knows by heart.

Every morning, rain or shine, foggy or clear, you'll find Abel's truck parked outside the office of center director Susan Mathieu, waiting for Abel to return with his pocket calendar, which lists his assignments for the day.

Susan keeps the date book current, listing all the field trips, basketball, football and softball games Abel makes with the children. The date book probably isn't needed, for Abel's memory would put an IBM computer to shame. Even so, he feels more comfortable having the little calendar of events in his pocket. A man as busy as Abel Trout can use a backup.

Abel can haul 17 children in the pickup, and he's a bug for safety. The truck has a steel pipe handhold, padded bench seats, stout locks. It also has a driver who takes no nonsense from his passengers.

Sometimes Abel takes the children ice skaking. Sometimes they go to the El Dorado Park Nature Center. Anything in the Long Beach area worth seeing is worth a field trip by Abel Trout and his young friends.

Abel Trout is at an age where he could have time on his hands. Instead, he's got kids on his lap, as Santa Claus at the center's Christmas parties. There are, of course, some sharp Carmelitos youngsters who don't believe in Santa Claus. And that's no problem — they believe in Abel Trout.

Abel says longevity runs in his family. "My father lived to 92; his father made it to 106, and if it hadn't been for pneumonia, my mother would have gone way past 82."

Abel's people came from Oceola, Mo., arriving in the Covina area when he was a lad of 7. "There was nothing out there then but lots of orange groves and open space. My father labored in the groves and taught us the virtues of hard work, punctuality and charity toward others."

In 1916, at 22, Abel was a conductor on the Los Angeles Railway's yellow cars. He signed up in the U.S. Army's remount service in World War I, breaking and training horses and mules for cavalry and artillery duty. During his Army service he moonlighted as a boxing instructor, an experience that was to be of great benefit after the war when he was employed as a bouncer in a Los Angeles dance hall.

Then came the building trade, the carpentry and masonry and the iron skills that carried him through home and building construction and the shipyards of Long Beach, Wilmington and San Pedro.

In World War II, Abel Trout was a military policeman, serving mostly at Camp Hahn, out near March Field. He had little trouble enforcing military law, for all he had to do with an errant GI was flash his old bouncer scowl and flex the biceps toughened in the shipyards.

Abel was married once, the union ending in divorce — "friendly like." The marital experience didn't sour him on women, but it also didn't cause him to pursue them with great vigor.

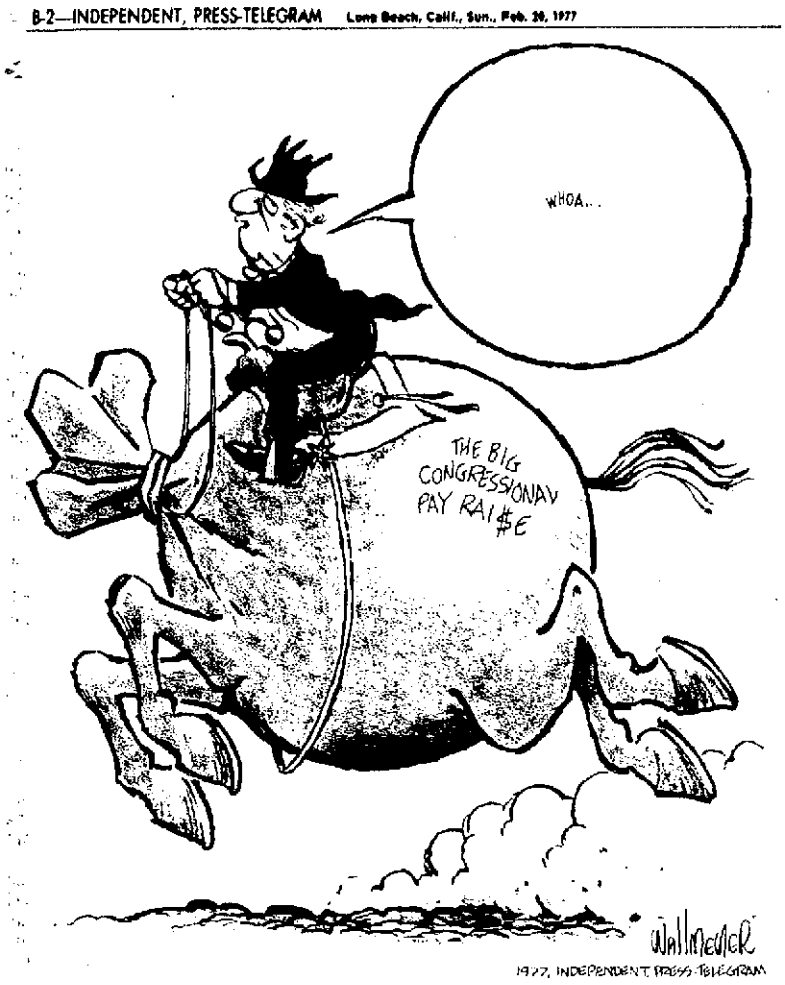

Abel allows that he doesn't go to church often, although he tries to practice the Golden Rule. He doesn't smoke and doesn't drink, and without those vices to upset his physiology, his health is good. A few little twinges of arthritis have slowed him down a bit, he says, but you can't tell it by the pace he maintains.

He walks with a slight limp, a residue of a motorcycle accident between the wars. Aside from that, and the arthritis, he's as spry as the children he serves.

The kids, staff and senior citizens at Carmelitos Recreation Center set their watches by Abel. They know he'll be on hand to assist the senior citizen nutrition program, to chauffeur the kids, to tell stories, give counsel, assist with the flu immunization program, to lend a hand with whatever needs doing.

Abel Trout is like the railroad watch my great-grandfather bequeathed me almost 45 years ago. The watch just got better with time.

As Susan Mathieu says, "Abel's more than fabulous. He's incomparable. We just couldn't do without him." Abel says the feeling is mutual.

The police patrol

"The Chief of Police shall be appointed, with confirmation of the City Council, by the City Manager, and shall serve during the pleasure of the City Manager. . .

"The Chief of Police shall have the exclusive control of the stationing and transfer of all patrolmen and other officers and employes constituting the Police Department, under such rules and regulations as the City Manager may prescribe."

Those are quotations from Sections 157 and 158 of the city charter and they clearly spell out where the power rests when police duty assignments are changed.

THAT FACT, NOT politics, guided the action of the City Council this week in referring to City Manager John Dever without suggestions a plea by police motorcycle officers to keep them on cycles rather than put them in blue uniforms and in patrol cars.

Police Chief Ralph Kortz has, following a five-month study, ordered transfer of the bulk of the motorcycle officers, as well as a number of others who had special duties, to become patrolmen on the streets.

Dever has made no secret of the fact that he feels there were not enough people on patrol, that the police response time in crime cases was too long.

The public, in various ways — through appearances before the council, through letters and complaints — has made it clear that crime and the ability of police to handle it are a major concern.

The motor officers, through spokesman Mason Kight, made a serious and responsible plea to retain their premium-pay jobs.

They raised serious issues regarding traffic control, insurance rates, accident rates, cost of operation, production of "ticket" revenue and motorcycle mobility.

There is little doubt that the police chief and the city manager were already aware of most of these problems and the pro and con arguments surrounding them.

They have accepted the responsibility for the action they have taken and there is no indication that they will ignore these problems. On the contrary, department officers have indicated that the new operation will be watched carefully.

Some motor officers will be retained. If not enough, the chief said, it is possible that some may be reinstated in their old jobs.

OBVIOUSLY, ALL concerned will be studying the new operation in detail.

It will take some time for the results to be apparent. We trust that when they are known, any corrective or additional action needed will be taken.

This is the way the city government, under our charter, should be operated. . .without politics and with professional care.

We hope that crime statistics in Long Beach improve and that the public begins to feel more secure. If not, more drastic steps may have to be taken.

Brotherhood Week

We've been having quite a bit of dialogue lately in our "Letters to the Editor" column about the contributions of various groups to the development of our nation.

And, of course, there has been lots of talk generated by the television dramatization of the book, "Roots."

As could be expected, the views have ranged all the way from statements of outright prejudice to pleas for understanding and cooperation.

This week, Feb. 20-27, some 10,000 American communities will have some sort of observance of a 44-year-old program, Brotherhood Week, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

This is not intended to be a promotion list for various events sponsored by churches, synagogues and civic organizations. Each organization will undoubtedly let its own constituents know of planned events.

This is intended, however, to draw attention to the fact that many folks, throughout the nation, are doing their best to gain understanding and build better relationships among people of all religions, races and nationalities.

This nation's whole lifestyle — and its success as a democracy — is based upon the mixture of various cultures and races. All of us from time to time need to take a long look at our own beliefs and prejudices. When we do, we realize that men are more alike than different.

That's the message that Brotherhood Week carries. We salute the National Conference of Christians and Jews for their important work in this area.

'Clear and present danger'

WASHINGTON — The rising tide of bureaucratic paperwork has reached a level that cannot longer be dismissed as merely an obstruction. It constitutes a clear and present danger to our freedom, our prosperity, our inventiveness and even our sanity.

The effect of the bureaucratization of America that is easiest to measure is the staggering cost in money, time and lost productivity. Individuals and businesses today are spending more than $100 billion a year just to fill out and comply with federal forms.

Start with the basic bureaucratic form — the individual income tax return. William F. Rickenbacker, the financial writer, has demonstrated beyond reasonable challenge that the cost in man hours of preparing the nation's income tax returns exceeds $21 billion each year.

BEYOND THAT, businesses large and small are required to prepare 114 million forms annually for the bureaucracy, at a cost which the Library of Congress has figured at $40 billion. Another $40 billion is spent by firms in carrying out federal regulations, according to one business survey of this amorphous subject.

To this $100 billion private costs, add the even greater amount spent each year to pay, house, equip and pension off the federal paper shufflers. And then consider this: Each $100 billion diverted to paperwork and to the support of the bureaucracy, if spent instead for new plants, equipment and processes, would create almost three million permanent jobs in private industry.

The total cost of the paperwork flood, in terms of lost freedom, strangled creativity and stultifying delays cannot be measured. But we see examples of it every day. For instance, there is an increasing amount of time we spend explaining ourselves to the government and waiting upon its permission to do this or that.

The sum total is an American society that has visibly slowed down, that lags in the creation of new products and new jobs, that increasingly displays the neurosis associated with the alienated who have lost control of their own activities..

This is not to say that the bureaucracy and its works are not often beneficial and sometimes indispensible. But we have reached the point where its ballooning cost and petrifying effect must be measured against its declining usefulness. If anyone doubts whether America has passed into an era of bureaucratic strangulation, let him contemplate the following items from the confidential files of the Commission on Federal Paperwork:

— Wyoming, though starved like other states for federal funds, reluctantly turned down several ecology grants last year. The state calculated that the federal paperwork would have cost more than the 108,000 in grants.

— Many a small company has folded under the burden of federal paperwork. For example, small businesses are required to fill out a useless form called EBS-1 in order to provide employes a pension program. One year, three versions of the same form had to be submitted. For the average small firm, the paperwork costs about $700 per employe before a penny can be donated to the pension fund.

— Rep. Olin Teague, D-Tex., got stuck in the bureaucracy's flypaper after purchasing $4.91 worth of government stationery. The General Services Administration billed him for the stationery, enclosing eight copies of a form, six copies of a computer printout and two computer punch cards. The congressman concluded that it would cost more to pay the bill than the stationery was worth.

— The Agriculture Department has kept adding to the school lunch regulations until it now has more bureaucrats regulating the program than administering it. To provide answers to the latest questions from Washington, Wisconsin contemplates hiring 25 auditors, which is four times the size of the school lunch program's administrative staff.

— Last year, one of President Jimmy Carter's fellow peanut farmers in Georgia wanted to file a simple application for a small business loan. At the end of six months, the farmer was $6,000 in debt to lawyers and auditors; yet the processing of the loan still hadn't been completed. It took a pile of paper weighing seven pounds to satisfy the bureaucrats at the Small Business Administration.

— The Federal Power Commission recently sent out computerized questionnaires, demanding the longitude and latitude of every gas meter in the country. The utilities were also asked to remeasure their pipes across the inside rather than the outside. Not until the Federal Paperwork Commission raised a howl this month were these requirements quietly withdrawn.

The files are full of similar stories. Like the drug company which, in attempting to market an arthritic drug, had to collect and file 120,000 pages of information with the Food and Drug Administration — in triplicate, of course.

OR THE VENERABLE Rock Island Railroad which, after waiting 10 years for government approval of a merger needed to save the line, went bankrupt just before the approval finally came through.

In return for their federal pay, the bureaucrats accumulate an estimated 4.5 million cubic feet of paper every year. Literally, tons of government forms and questionnaires repose, unread, in federal files and warehouses.

President Carter's new budget boss, Bert Lance, has pledged to raise his hand against this paper flood. Perhaps he will be able to abolish a few hundred forms before he is submerged.

Ombudsman getting poor start

WASHINGTON — President Jimmy Carter, acting on the advice of his transition team, wisely established a White House ombudsman to hear the public's complaints about government and to advise him on a proper course of action.

There is little doubt that a White House ombudsman can provide an important listening post to learn of corruption and mismanagement in government and to give the President an early warning of serious problems that normally would not reach him through the governmental bureaucracy which includes the White House staff.

But, even the first few weeks, President Carter's ombudsman is being given operational assignments that could cripple his ability to serve effectively.

THE CARTER ombudsman, California lawyer Joseph Aragon, was troubled by some aspects of the transition team's 40-page job description of his position.

Before the 36-year-old Aragon had an opportunity to discuss those problems with President Carter, he was thrust into the middle of the energy crisis with policy and operations functions that would on the surface appear to preclude a later objective analysis of how these matters are being handled.

Immediately upon the heels of the energy assignment, Aragon was deeply involved in a depth study of the Community Service Administration (CSA), the successor to the old poverty program, for the purpose of giving President Carter his views on the future course of poverty programs that now cost more than $500 million a year.

Unless the ombudsman's responsibilities with regard to these poverty program

functions are carefully circumscribed, that project could be a fatal flaw to any objective post audit or analysis the ombudsman might be required to make of that agency.

The idea of re-establishing a White House ombudsman is excellent, and Joe Aragon would seem to have the motivations, understanding, and basic qualifications to do the job properly if there is general recognition of the importance of direct access to the President and the necessity of avoiding political chores and involvement in operations and policy decisions.

Richard Nixon probably was sincere in establishing the first White House ombudsman to advise him on problems of mismanagement and corruption that would not normally reach a president through the government chain of command. Even the revelations of the Watergate disaster emphasize that aggressive good government would have been the best politics for the Nixon White House.

As Mr. Nixon's special counsel, in the role of the first White House ombudsman, I saw the good government effort fail because Mr. Nixon permitted himself to be cut off from this independent source of information on weaknesses and malfunctioning in his administration.

In 1969 and 1970, it served the purpose of the White House palace guard — particularly chief of staff H.R. Haldeman and special presidential assistant John Ehrlichman — to ignore or minimize the warnings that might have saved them and Mr. Nixon from the Watergate disaster.

UNFORTUNATELY, some of the same problems of communication already have developed in the Carter White House. These communications problems could seriously hamper and even destroy the effectiveness of Mr. Carter's ombudsman as a fact-finder and objective adviser.

Even the best qualified and best motivated ombudsman can have his effectiveness destroyed if he is required to wear a second hat as a "special projects man."

Unless the Carter administration ombudsman has free access to the President to iron out his own problems, he will not be able to be effective when the problems of the public, the Congress and the press inevitably come to his desk.

A bill to get rid of February?

SCRABBLE, Va. — Daniel Patrick Moynihan, the junior senator from New York, is considering the introduction of a bill that may secure his place in history. At the request of his Buffalo constituents, so the story goes, he is thinking of a bill to abolish February.

Because this is a piece of humane legislation I have been promoting for 25 years, the senator's initiative naturally impresses me as sound. President Carter may get modest acclaim for ridding us of limousines, White House staffers and 500 advisory committees, but the Moynihan Act, if it is written into law, will prompt jubilation across the frozen land.

MR. MOYNIHAN, in his own audacious fashion, would begin by abolishing February straight-out. Reportedly, he would add one week to April, two weeks to June and one week to October. In leap years, there'd be one more day for New Year's Eve. The birthdays of Washington, Lincoln and Harrison would be relocated by appointment of the president of the Senate and the speaker of the House. Valentine's Day would fall on May 14. It sounds too good to be true.

The effect of all this would be to give the country a running start on spring. Right after January, we'd be into March — and March is a month we can live with. March has a good name. It comes highly recommended. People rarely speak a harsh word about March. How much snow do they get in Buffalo in March? A durn sight less than they get in Buffalo in February, that's for sure.

Here in Rappahannock County, Va., up in the Blue Ridge Mountains, we haven't had anything approaching the hardships of Buffalo, Cincinnati and Fargo, but it has been miserable all the same. Ordinarily, we get a few inches of Christmas-card snow, and I write a pretty country piece about the pines in ermine and the fields vanilla-frosted, and then the snow politely goes away. This year the snow has hung around like a bad case of sniffles. The water pump froze, a pipe burst, the tractor congealed and wouldn't start. The birds have been learning to ice-skate, but their hearts aren't in it.

James J. Kilpatrick

You wouldn't believe the firewood situation. The wood dealers have become the merchant princes of the Blue Ridge Mountains. They consult with customers by appointment only. A few years ago, you could get an honest cord of wood for $20. Now, as a favor, they offer a pickup load for a hundred bucks. A hundred bucks! That was the price one of these green-oak tycoons quoted my wife, and he wasn't especially eager to sell it here in Rappahannock. In the Maryland and Virginia suburbs of Washington, these country capitalists are hawking firewood door-to-door at 50 cents a log.

There is but one thing to do, and I'm doing it. I am taking two weeks' vacation and heading for Savannah, Sea Pines and New Orleans. The immediate consequence will be a warming trend in Rappahannock County, crocus on the lawn, and bluebirds on the wing. The cherry trees will start to bud in Washington, and the Moynihan bill will die in committee. When I get back, February will be gone. Believe me, it won't be missed.

For example, small businesses are required to fill out a useless form called EBS-1 in order to provide employes a pension program. One year, three versions of the same form had to be submitted. For the average small firm, the paperwork costs about $700 per employe before a penny can be donated to the pension fund.

— Rep. Olin Teague, D-Tex., got stuck in the bureaucracy's flypaper after purchasing $4.91 worth of government stationery. The General Services Administration billed him for the stationery, enclosing eight copies of a form, six copies of a computer printout and two computer punch cards. The congressman concluded that it would cost more to pay the bill than the stationery was worth.

— The Agriculture Department has kept adding to the school lunch regulations until it now has more bureaucrats regulating the program than administering it. To provide answers to the latest questions from Washington, Wisconsin contemplates hiring 25 auditors, which is four times the size of the school lunch program's administrative staff.

— Last year, one of President Jimmy Carter's fellow peanut farmers in Georgia wanted to file a simple application for a small business loan. At the end of six months, the farmer was $6,000 in debt to lawyers and auditors; yet the processing of the loan still hadn't been completed. It took a pile of paper weighing seven pounds to satisfy the bureaucrats at the Small Business Administration.

— The Federal Power Commission recently sent out computerized questionnaires, demanding the longitude and latitude of every gas meter in the country. The utilities were also asked to remeasure their pipes across the inside rather than the outside. Not until the Federal Paperwork Commission raised a howl this month were these requirements quietly withdrawn.

The files are full of similar stories. Like the drug company which, in attempting to market an arthritic drug, had to collect and file 120,000 pages of information with the Food and Drug Administration — in triplicate, of course.

OR THE VENERABLE Rock Island Railroad which, after waiting 10 years for government approval of a merger needed to save the line, went bankrupt just before the approval finally came through.

In return for their federal pay, the bureaucrats accumulate an estimated 4.5 million cubic feet of paper every year. Literally, tons of government forms and questionnaires repose, unread, in federal files and warehouses.

President Carter's new budget boss, Bert Lance, has pledged to raise his hand against this paper flood: Perhaps he will be able to abolish a few hundred forms before he is submerged.

Ombudsman getting poor start

WASHINGTON — President Jimmy Carter, acting on the advice of his transition team, wisely established a White House ombudsman to hear the public's complaints about government and to advise him on a proper course of action.

There is little doubt that a White House ombudsman can provide an important listening post to learn of corruption and mismanagement in government and to give the President an early warning of serious problems that normally would not reach him through the governmental bureaucracy which includes the White House staff.

But, even the first few weeks, President Carter's ombudsman is being given operational assignments that could cripple his ability to serve effectively.

THE CARTER ombudsman, California lawyer Joseph Aragon, was troubled by some aspects of the transition team's 40-page job description of his position.

Before the 36-year-old Aragon had an opportunity to discuss those problems with President Carter, he was thrust into the middle of the energy crisis with policy and operations functions that would on the surface appear to preclude a later objective analysis of how these matters are being handled.

Immediately upon the heels of the energy assignment, Aragon was deeply involved in a depth study of the Community Service Administration (CSA), the successor to the old poverty program, for the purpose of giving President Carter his views on the future course of poverty programs that now cost more than $500 million a year.

Unless the ombudsman's responsibilities with regard to these poverty program

functions are carefully circumscribed, that project could be a fatal flaw to any objective post audit or analysis the ombudsman might be required to make of that agency.

The idea of re-establishing a White House ombudsman is excellent, and Joe Aragon would seem to have the motivations, understanding, and basic qualifications to do the job properly if there is general recognition of the importance of direct access to the President and the necessity of avoiding political chores and involvement in operations and policy decisions.

Richard Nixon probably was sincere in establishing the first White House ombudsman to advise him on problems of mismanagement and corruption that would not normally reach a president through the government chain of command. Even the revelations of the Watergate disaster emphasize that aggressive good government would have been the best politics for the Nixon White House.

As Mr. Nixon's special counsel, in the role of the first White House ombudsman, I saw the good government effort fail because Mr. Nixon permitted himself to be cut off from this independent source of information on weaknesses and malfunctioning in his administration.

In 1969 and 1970, it served the purpose of the White House palace guard — particularly chief of staff H.R. Haldeman and special presidential assistant John Ehrlichman — to ignore or minimize the warnings that might have saved them and Mr. Nixon from the Watergate disaster.

UNFORTUNATELY, some of the same problems of communication already have developed in the Carter White House. These communications problems could seriously hamper and even destroy the effectiveness of Mr. Carter's ombudsman as a fact-finder and objective adviser.

Even the best qualified and best motivated ombudsman can have his effectiveness destroyed if he is required to wear a second hat as a "special projects man."

Unless the Carter administration ombudsman has free access to the President to iron out his own problems, he will not be able to be effective when the problems of the public, the Congress and the press inevitably come to his desk.

A bill to get rid of February?

SCRABBLE, Va. — Daniel Patrick Moynihan, the junior senator from New York, is considering the introduction of a bill that may secure his place in history. At the request of his Buffalo constituents, so the story goes, he is thinking of a bill to abolish February.

Because this is a piece of humane legislation I have been promoting for 25 years, the senator's initiative naturally impresses me as sound. President Carter may get modest acclaim for ridding us of limousines, White House staffers and 500 advisory committees, but the Moynihan Act, if it is written into law, will prompt jubilation across the frozen land.

MR. MOYNIHAN, in his own audacious fashion, would begin by abolishing February straight-out. Reportedly, he would add one week to April, two weeks to June and one week to October. In leap years, there'd be one more day for New Year's Eve. The birthdays of Washington, Lincoln and Harrison would be relocated by appointment of the president of the Senate and the speaker of the House. Valentine's Day would fall on May 14. It sounds too good to be true.

The effect of all this would be to give the country a running start on spring. Right after January, we'd be into March — and March is a month we can live with. March has a good name. It comes highly recommended. People rarely speak a harsh word about March. How much snow do they get in Buffalo in March? A durn sight less than they get in Buffalo in February, that's for sure.

Here in Rappahannock County, Va., up in the Blue Ridge Mountains, we haven't had anything approaching the hardships of Buffalo, Cincinnati and Fargo, but it has been miserable all the same. Ordinarily, we get a few inches of Christmas-card snow, and I write a pretty country piece about the pines in ermine and the fields vanilla-frosted, and then the snow politely goes away. This year the snow has hung around like a bad case of sniffles. The water pump froze, a pipe burst, the tractor congealed and wouldn't start. The birds have been learning to ice-skate, but their hearts aren't in it.

James J. Kilpatrick

You wouldn't believe the firewood situation. The wood dealers have become the merchant princes of the Blue Ridge Mountains. They consult with customers by appointment only. A few years ago, you could get an honest cord of wood for $20. Now, as a favor, they offer a pickup load for a hundred bucks. A hundred bucks! That was the price one of these green-oak tycoons quoted my wife, and he wasn't especially eager to sell it here in Rappahannock. In the Maryland and Virginia suburbs of Washington, these country capitalists are hawking firewood door-to-door at 50 cents a log.

There is but one thing to do, and I'm doing it. I am taking two weeks' vacation and heading for Savannah, Sea Pines and New Orleans. The immediate consequence will be a warming trend in Rappahannock County, crocus on the lawn, and bluebirds on the wing. The cherry trees will start to bud in Washington, and the Moynihan bill will die in committee. When I get back, February will be gone. Believe me, it won't be missed.

Informality at White House

Marie Ridder

WASHINGTON — Somewhere between Richard M. Nixon's experiment in clothing White House guards in comic-opera uniforms and Amy Carter's reading a mystery novel by candlelight throughout a state dinner, there should be a middle way to entertain at official functions in the White House.

President Carter's efforts at finding it have not yet borne fruit. In his effort to find formats proper to the dignity of the United States, somewhere short of imperial pomp, he has not yet progressed beyond over-done hominess toward a simple, elegant style appropriate to the White House.

Americans are ambivalent about the presidency. They seem to prefer an impossible combination of monarchic grandeur and homespun informality. As they have sought to find a style somewhere between those opposites, presidents in former years have found it impossible to please everybody. Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter are no exceptions.

John F. Kennedy's elegant dinners for not only the beautiful people but for the intellectual and artistic leaders of the world were thought by many to be too enlist.

"Versailles on the Potomac," wrote one critic.

Lyndon Johnson, wedged in between the chic of the Kennedys and the dour pomp of the Nixons, probably achieved a middle road better than other presidents in recent years. Their guest lists included Americans from all over the country and of all kinds. Contemporary art was hung along the entry halls one month, fine old American china exhibited another. The food was good and the parties were fun.

The Ford White House was fun, too. Perhaps the most informal and gay of presidential couples, the Fords were criticized for inviting too many Hollywood stars and too few intellectuals, of having too much popular music and not enough serious entertainment. But their own pleasure in their parties gave the Ford's White House entertainment a special personal touch.

PRESIDENT AND Mrs. Carter have very consciously started designing their own White House image. After only four weeks, a pattern of simplicity verging on austerity has emerged.

One day after moving into the White House, they had both the energy and graciousness to give a small goodbye party for Vice President Walter Mondale before he flew to Europe. The Mondales were told to invite personal friends that they wanted to thank. They asked those neighbors who had cooked and baby sat and run errands for the absent Mondales during the campaign.

"It was an unusual gesture," said Mrs. Adlai Stevenson, III. "I have never felt so at home at the White House, and I have been there often."

A week later the Carters invited the nine members of the Supreme Court and their wives to an informal dinner in the family dining room. It was a radical change from the traditional black-tie state dinner given by past presidents for the Supreme Court. Most justices appreciated the opportunity to talk informally with the new chief executive. They also hoped that the other kind of dinner would not be abandoned.

SAID ONE WIFE, "Tradition is important in delineating our varying roles. Perhaps what I really mean is I want our dinner at the White House to be special, to have dignity, a certain historic formality. After all, going to the White House ought always to be a little awesome."

This past week the Carters gave their first state dinner, for the President of Mexico and Mrs. Jose Lopez Portillo. It was an event filled with what a White House press release described as innovations. Elimination of the honor guard along the White House driveway, a reduction of White House aides, no color guard, no sounding of trumpets or ruffles and flourishes as the presidential couples descended the stairs. Instead, the heads of state were preceded by one very confused cat. Misty Malarkey Yin Yang had escaped from her upstairs quarters and found herself to be an unplanned "innovation."

American food with American names replaced the traditional French printed menus. Wine replaced hard liquor during cocktails. Dancing and after-dinner drinks of any kind were eliminated. Mrs. Carter spoke of the occasion as "a working evening" and told reporters that her husband wanted it to end early so that he could go upstairs and work. Frivolity is out, earnestness is in.

But one innovation that surprised many guests was the sight of Amy, seated between her mother and the wife of Mexico's foreign minister, quietly reading a Nancy Drew book, "The Mystery of the Screaming Clock."

The Carters had gone to great trouble to find just the right entertainment for their visitors and in this they were triumphantly successful. Senora Lopez was a concert pianist before her marriage and has always worshipped Rudolk Serkin.

"Can you imagine," she told a friend, "how thrilled I was to know he would play for us after dinner."

SERKIN CANCELLED a concert in Philadelphia because he was so honored to be the first entertainer at the Carter White House.

"I care," he said. "I think all performers care, that a president wants to hear us. We want to contribute the best entertainment we can to the White House. I think we are all conscious that this is important for the American image."

The studious avoidance of glamor and the effort to make this state occasion feel like a dinner party for good friends may have given the Mexican president's wife the courage to accede to President Carter's request that she open the evening's entertainment. With some apologies to Mr. Serkin, Senora Lopez played two Chopin etudes and received standing ovations from the other guests.

"It was," said a veteran society reporter, "a coup."

The Carters will have ample opportunity in the next few months to refine the way they do things in the White House. Much of what they are trying is laudable, from using tulips plants to decorate the mansion that can later be planted in the White House garden, to a reduction of pageantry.

Everyone applauds the President's efforts to keep the cost of White House entertaining low. Nevertheless Mr. Carter is President of United States and a certain degree of dignity should be accorded the office.

"HI, YOU ALL," is not always an acceptable substitute for the traditional greeting to a head of state. Certainly the sending of a member of the family to substitute for the President at a head of state's traditional return dinner will not be acceptable to many foreign governments.

When the Portillos returned the White House hospitality in their own Embassy this week, they got the President's sister Ruth Stapleton and her animal-doctor husband instead of the President and Mrs. Carter.

A top Mexican official said, "We were very disappointed. Yes, we feel it was a rudeness. We didn't invite a Carter, we invited a President of the United States. He does not have a substitute. He will have to learn that there are some things that a first family can not be too personal about. There are certain traditional restrictions on how they entertain and are entertained, conventions that must be adhered to. They are part of the office."

Business licenses

A recent inquiry to Action Line, a contractor complaining of high Long Beach business-license tax fees, brought as a city answer one of those typically trite remarks that cause the present increasing incredulity between government and the citizen and business community.

By the city's own paperwork, it admitted that there were severe inequities in the licensing-fee structure. But these inequities were increased by the slow action of the city in finally trying to resolve the problem. However, when they did so, they also failed to make provisions for the refunding of fees charged during the extended period of "studying" the situation. These delays cost the electrical industry alone in excess of $37,625, at a minimum. So far, the city refuses to recognize that fact.

The fee structures seem to have been summarily set by the budget and research division of the city without any relation to fact. The announced policy of City Manager John Dever last weekend, removing this group from quasi-policy making is indeed welcome.

The city's present business license fee for electrical contractors, for example, is still some 17 per cent higher than any other city in the state of which we are aware, but for certain in Los Angeles County. In regards to Mr. McKay's statements comparing the size of Long Beach to other cities, I have surveyed four cities larger than Long Beach and find no comparison that would bear out his argument. But perhaps the statement that implied that no matter what other cities do, Long Beach sets its license fee on what it takes to operate the city is the most demonstrative of the illogic that prevails in municipal funding. In our business, and in my home, the availability of funds dictates the expenditure of funds — not the other way around!

Having appeared before the City Council on the issue, I realize its majority doesn't agree with the business-license concept and for good reason: the costs are again passed on directly to those who end up paying them all — Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer. Unfortunately, their information is clouded by the less-than-adequate input to overcome the problem.

Republican beliefs

Yes, Virginia, there is a Republican Party.

We believe:

— The individual, a spiritual, rational being, is the most important element in our society.

— Government exists to serve the individual, not the individual to serve the government.

— Government's main purpose is to insure the protection of the rights of each individual.

— The individual's economic needs are best provided for by a healthy system of free enterprise.

— The United States must be strong and self-reliant as an individual nation in a world of unstable international relations.

We welcome those who change their registration in support of these principles. As they have frequently said, "I'm not leaving my party; my party left me."

In reference to an article which appeared in your paper Feb. 7 regarding Adm. Stansfield Turner, Adm. Turner did not graduate first in his class as the article stated. He graduated 25th in he class.

I realize your paper had no control over the material in the article, since it was an Associated Press release. I just wish to clarify the error. My source of information is the U.S. Naval Academy Register, Class of 1947.

Slavery's heritage

Roberta Rynd's letter regarding "Equal time" (and Alex Haley's "Roots) on Feb. 9 does not need to be vehemently or bitterly attacked. But I must respond to three points she made:

1. It is clear that there must have been some humane white people both during and after slavery, or else all of my forefathers would have been eliminated.

2. The media are responsible for granting "equal time" for differing points of view. The producers, creators and ilk do not have this option.

3. By saying Mr. Haley's writing was "the sort of racial bigotry" which "was responsible for all of the trouble in the first place" is similar to blaming the chicken for having its neck wrung close to dinner time.

I understand her emotional response to "Roots," and how it contributed to her convoluted thinking. I was quite emotionally involved myself — both sad and very angry. But I thought the depiction of some of the elements of slavery in the United States was worthwhile, because it probably started many more people to thinking of not only slavery, but slavery's heritage — unfortunately, still with us in all its inequities.

Eagle vs. ostrich

So, we got an outsider President on the inside of the White House who promised to give us new direction with new faces. However, it appears many of the important appointments have gone to the same old recycled insiders, who will be giving out the same old unsuccessful inside dope.

From recent statements, I even suspect President Carter has been peeking over Henry Kissinger's shoulder, taking copious notes.

What's new about cutting down on defenses and talking disarmament while the rest of the world is arming to the teeth with the military hardware we're selling them?

What's new about thinking our empty silos, depleted arsenals and forsaken outposts will bring us peace?

What's new about playing footsie with Russia under the SALT table without touching their corns?

Only when Russia tears down the Berlin wall, releases captive nations, grants freedom of passage and communications to their people, can we give any credence to their integrity in their arms pacts. They have already broken their part of the Helsinki pact on human rights, while our recognition of their borders on captive nations remains intact.

The Russians must be pinching themselves in disbelief that there is a continuation of a so-called detente that has netted them the biggest truck factory in the world, loads of wheat, important technology, billions of dollars worth of trade on credit and other goodies. . .while they gave nothing (obvious) in return but a vodka toast and a slap on the back.

When Brezhnev disappears from time to time, it isn't for health reasons, but because he can't keep a straight face. I fear the eagle has been replaced with the ostrich.

A different ilk

California gubernatorial candidate Edward Davis alone is offering a challenge to unresponsive and irresponsible "leadership" in Sacramento.

Davis is an able administrator and an avowed representative of moral direction and healthy ideals.

Davis is not an emotionally impulsive panderer to the immoralities practiced by the licentious lobbies that put the present ilk in office.

Davis is not the type who will assume the role adopted by those who condescendingly patronize minority groups, offering them welfare instead of the productive work and careers they need and want.

Davis is not a fascist, as he has been identified by those who have no values beyond the mindless pornography representing itself as a "free press."

We voters must not dismiss Ed Davis as a yokel, crank or fool. He is one of us.

Education can help

The Feb. 7 letter to the editor headed "Victims of jackals' and signed by Jack Hoar has caused considerable misunderstanding leading to personal embarrassment. Friends and colleagues, quite understandably, thought I authored the letter.

This letter seems to hold the district attorney reponsible for the shooting death of a Compton store owner (Anastosios Spathorolos) by Long Beach police officer Robert W. Schroeder. While I share Mr. Hoar's name, we are, to the best of my knowledge, not related, and I do not want others to believe that I share all his views.

Like many other local citizens, I am familiar with the tragic death of Mr. Spathorolos. Like the other Mr. Hoar, I share the desire to improve our social and legal structure. But, unlike him, I cannot lay the blame for defects of our society at the door of one person or any group of persons. Individually and collectively, we all make mistakes. Mistakes are serious and unfortunate. It would be even more unfortunate it we failed to learn from these errors.

I agree that the real victim are Spathorolos, Schroeder and their families. They can be the heroes, too. The tragic incident and the proceedings in which they and we are now involved will hopefully cause us as a community to take another step forward toward the type of community and society we would all like to have.

Specifically, it should be pointed out that the district attorney is performing a task, in this case one which is not easy or pleasant, assigned to him by the citizenry. It should also be noted that being accused, under our legal system, is not tantamount to being guilty. Failure to focus on these principles does disservice to our system of government and to ourselves. We make the laws.

I have been privileged during the past five years as a part of my professional assignment with the Long Beach Unified School District to be associated with civic education programs designed to prepare students to live in and improve upon our society. One particular program, the Law in a Free Society project, has had the cooperative sponsorship of the Long Beach Police Department and the Long Beach Bar Association. Personnel from the district attorney's office have contributed personal time and expertise to assist teachers to help students better understand our legal system and to be prepared to improve upon it.

I cannot join in what seems to be unjustified blaming of one component of our system for ills. But I would trust that the writer of the "Victims of jackals" letter would join in the belief that the educational process can help cure the ills of our society.

Villains take over

I see in the Independent, Press-Telegram they want to put more trained policemen on the streets to protect the citizens. I think this is a great idea.

We have to do something to cut down on crime! It is appalling to me whenever I read the paper to see these senseless shootings of innocent people.

It was so sad to read Mr. Lundigan's letter about his young son's murder. What a waste of a young man's life. The criminal will probably get off with a light sentence. I just don't see how we can go on like this. Soon all the innocent people will be dead and the villains will take over. The way things are going, I don't think I care any more. No one wants to do anything, and we cannot be so apathetic.

I pray the plan will work to add the extra police.

McCarthy maligned

I think the commentary on the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy by Walter Ridder (Feb. 10) is despicable.

I can hardly believe that a man of his stature would stoop to castigate a man who is no longer here to defend himself. I can't help wondering how his family would feel if he were held up to scorn and ridicule long after he had died from a broken heart brought on by scurrilous attacks by vicious fellow men.

With some apologies to Mr. Serkin, Senora Lopez played two Chopin etudes and received standing ovations from the other guests.

"It was," said a veteran society reporter, "a coup."

The Carters will have ample opportunity in the next few months to refine the way they do things in the White House. Much of what they are trying is laudable, from using tulips plants to decorate the mansion that can later be planted in the White House garden, to a reduction of pageantry.

Everyone applauds the President's efforts to keep the cost of White House entertaining low. Nevertheless Mr. Carter is President of United States and a certain degree of dignity should be accorded the office.

"HI, YOU ALL," is not always an acceptable substitute for the traditional greeting to a head of state. Certainly the sending of a member of the family to substitute for the President at a head of state's traditional return dinner will not be acceptable to many foreign governments.

When the Portillos returned the White House hospitality in their own Embassy this week, they got the President's sister Ruth Stapleton and her animal-doctor husband instead of the President and Mrs. Carter.

A top Mexican official said, "We were very disappointed. Yes, we feel it was a rudeness. We didn't invite a Carter, we invited a President of the United States. He does not have a substitute. He will have to learn that there are some things that a first family can not be too personal about. There are certain traditional restrictions on how they entertain and are entertained, conventions that must be adhered to. They are part of the office."

Business licenses

A recent inquiry to Action Line, a contractor complaining of high Long Beach business-license tax fees, brought as a city answer one of those typically trite remarks that cause the present increasing incredulity between government and the citizen and business community.

By the city's own paperwork, it admitted that there were severe inequities in the licensing-fee structure. But these inequities were increased by the slow action of the city in finally trying to resolve the problem. However, when they did so, they also failed to make provisions for the refunding of fees charged during the extended period of "studying" the situation. These delays cost the electrical industry alone in excess of $37,625, at a minimum. So far, the city refuses to recognize that fact.

The fee structures seem to have been summarily set by the budget and research division of the city without any relation to fact. The announced policy of City Manager John Dever last weekend, removing this group from quasi-policy making is indeed welcome.

The city's present business license fee for electrical contractors, for example, is still some 17 per cent higher than any other city in the state of which we are aware, but for certain in Los Angeles County. In regards to Mr. McKay's statements comparing the size of Long Beach to other cities, I have surveyed four cities larger than Long Beach and find no comparison that would bear out his argument. But perhaps the statement that implied that no matter what other cities do, Long Beach sets its license fee on what it takes to operate the city is the most demonstrative of the illogic that prevails in municipal funding. In our business, and in my home, the availability of funds dictates the expenditure of funds — not the other way around!

Having appeared before the City Council on the issue, I realize its majority doesn't agree with the business-license concept and for good reason: the costs are again passed on directly to those who end up paying them all — Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer. Unfortunately, their information is clouded by the less-than-adequate input to overcome the problem.

Republican beliefs

Yes, Virginia, there is a Republican Party.

We believe:

— The individual, a spiritual, rational being, is the most important element in our society.

— Government exists to serve the individual, not the individual to serve the government.

— Government's main purpose is to insure the protection of the rights of each individual.

— The individual's economic needs are best provided for by a healthy system of free enterprise.

— The United States must be strong and self-reliant as an individual nation in a world of unstable international relations.

We welcome those who change their registration in support of these principles. As they have frequently said, "I'm not leaving my party; my party left me."

Admiral's standing

In reference to an article which appeared in your paper Feb. 7 regarding Adm. Stansfield Turner, Adm. Turner did not graduate first in his class as the article stated. He graduated 25th in he class.

I realize your paper had no control over the material in the article, since it was an Associated Press release. I just wish to clarify the error. My source of information is the U.S. Naval Academy Register, Class of 1947.

Slavery's heritage

Roberta Rynd's letter regarding "Equal time" (and Alex Haley's "Roots) on Feb. 9 does not need to be vehemently or bitterly attacked. But I must respond to three points she made:

1. It is clear that there must have been some humane white people both during and after slavery, or else all of my forefathers would have been eliminated.

2. The media are responsible for granting "equal time" for differing points of view. The producers, creators and ilk do not have this option.

3. By saying Mr. Haley's writing was "the sort of racial bigotry" which "was responsible for all of the trouble in the first place" is similar to blaming the chicken for having its neck wrung close to dinner time.

I understand her emotional response to "Roots," and how it contributed to her convoluted thinking. I was quite emotionally involved myself — both sad and very angry. But I thought the depiction of some of the elements of slavery in the United States was worthwhile, because it probably started many more people to thinking of not only slavery, but slavery's heritage — unfortunately, still with us in all its inequities.

Eagle vs. ostrich

So, we got an outsider President on the inside of the White House who promised to give us new direction with new faces. However, it appears many of the important appointments have gone to the same old recycled insiders, who will be giving out the same old unsuccessful inside dope.

From recent statements, I even suspect President Carter has been peeking over Henry Kissinger's shoulder, taking copious notes.

What's new about cutting down on defenses and talking disarmament while the rest of the world is arming to the teeth with the military hardware we're selling them?

What's new about thinking our empty silos, depleted arsenals and forsaken outposts will bring us peace?

What's new about playing footsie with Russia under the SALT table without touching their corns?

Only when Russia tears down the Berlin wall, releases captive nations, grants freedom of passage and communications to their people, can we give any credence to their integrity in their arms pacts. They have already broken their part of the Helsinki pact on human rights, while our recognition of their borders on captive nations remains intact.

The Russians must be pinching themselves in disbelief that there is a continuation of a so-called detente that has netted them the biggest truck factory in the world, loads of wheat, important technology, billions of dollars worth of trade on credit and other goodies. . .while they gave nothing (obvious) in return but a vodka toast and a slap on the back.

When Brezhnev disappears from time to time, it isn't for health reasons, but because he can't keep a straight face. I fear the eagle has been replaced with the ostrich.

A different ilk

California gubernatorial candidate Edward Davis alone is offering a challenge to unresponsive and irresponsible "leadership" in Sacramento.

Davis is an able administrator and an avowed representative of moral direction and healthy ideals.

Davis is not an emotionally impulsive panderer to the immoralities practiced by the licentious lobbies that put the present ilk in office.

Davis is not the type who will assume the role adopted by those who condescendingly patronize minority groups, offering them welfare instead of the productive work and careers they need and want.

Davis is not a fascist, as he has been identified by those who have no values beyond the mindless pornography representing itself as a "free press."

We voters must not dismiss Ed Davis as a yokel, crank or fool. He is one of us.

Education can help

The Feb. 7 letter to the editor headed "Victims of jackals' and signed by Jack Hoar has caused considerable misunderstanding leading to personal embarrassment. Friends and colleagues, quite understandably, thought I authored the letter.

This letter seems to hold the district attorney reponsible for the shooting death of a Compton store owner (Anastosios Spathorolos) by Long Beach police officer Robert W. Schroeder. While I share Mr. Hoar's name, we are, to the best of my knowledge, not related, and I do not want others to believe that I share all his views.

Like many other local citizens, I am familiar with the tragic death of Mr. Spathorolos. Like the other Mr. Hoar, I share the desire to improve our social and legal structure. But, unlike him, I cannot lay the blame for defects of our society at the door of one person or any group of persons. Individually and collectively, we all make mistakes. Mistakes are serious and unfortunate. It would be even more unfortunate if we failed to learn from these errors.

I agree that the real victim are Spathorolos, Schroeder and their families. They can be the heroes, too. The tragic incident and the proceedings in which they and we are now involved will hopefully cause us as a community to take another step forward toward the type of community and society we would all like to have.

Specifically, it should be pointed out that the district attorney is performing a task, in this case one which is not easy or pleasant, assigned to him by the citizenry. It should also be noted that being accused, under our legal system, is not tantamount to being guilty. Failure to focus on these principles does disservice to our system of government and to ourselves. We make the laws.

I have been privileged during the past five years as a part of my professional assignment with the Long Beach Unified School District to be associated with civic education programs designed to prepare students to live in and improve upon our society. One particular program, the Law in a Free Society project, has had the cooperative sponsorship of the Long Beach Police Department and the Long Beach Bar Association. Personnel from the district attorney's office have contributed personal time and expertise to assist teachers to help students better understand our legal system and to be prepared to improve upon it.

I cannot join in what seems to be unjustified blaming of one component of our system for ills. But I would trust that the writer of the "Victims of jackals" letter would join in the belief that the educational process can help cure the ills of our society.

Villains take over

I see in the Independent, Press-Telegram they want to put more trained policemen on the streets to protect the citizens. I think this is a great idea.

We have to do something to cut down on crime! It is appalling to me whenever I read the paper to see these senseless shootings of innocent people.

It was so sad to read Mr. Lundigan's letter about his young son's murder. What a waste of a young man's life. The criminal will probably get off with a light sentence. I just don't see how we can go on like this. Soon all the innocent people will be dead and the villains will take over. The way things are going, I don't think I care any more. No one wants to do anything, and we cannot be so apathetic.

I pray the plan will work to add the extra police.

McCarthy maligned

I think the commentary on the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy by Walter Ridder (Feb. 10) is despicable.

I can hardly believe that a man of his stature would stoop to castigate a man who is no longer here to defend himself. I can't help wondering how his family would feel if he were held up to scorn and ridicule long after he had died from a broken heart brought on by scurrilous attacks by vicious fellow men.

Compton dedicates city hall

By BRAD ALTMAN
Staff Writer

Compton's brand-new city hall — a $7 million two-story project located at 205 S. Willowbrook Ave. — was dedicated Saturday during ceremonies featuring a time capsule, speeches by civic officials, concert bands and choirs.

An estimated 700 persons attended the event in the U-shaped courtyard separating the new administration offices and council chambers, while 50 members of a Mexican-American group staged a protest demonstration outside.

The program began soon after 11 a.m. and went smoothly, though the protestors could be heard chanting, "We want justice" — an attempt to draw attention to their disenchantment with city policies toward affirmative action hiring.

Mayor Doris A. Davis, gesturing toward a wooden barrier screening an unfinished parking garage and plaza — a section of the civic-center complex expected to be completed in early 1978 — spoke of her hope, pride and expectations for the future of Compton.

In another portion of the ceremony, architect Harold L. Williams noted the project was first planned eight years ago and has finally been finished "three mayors, five city managers and 10 council members later."

Adding a festive note were musical presentations by the Centennial Honor Choir and the Davis Junior High School Nu-way Band, which received a standing ovation. A medley of native musical pieces was performed by 30 Samoan residents of Compton, adorned in bright red and white costumes.

An aqua-blue steel time capsule was filled with historical items to be embedded in the new City Hall, the third City Hall built since Compton was incorporated in 1925. The date when the capsule will be opened was not announced.

Despite a cooling breeze and shade, spectators seemed delighted when the pomp and circumstance finally ended at 12:45 p.m. The visitors followed tour guides — young members of the Compton Youth Council — through the 62,000-square-foot building.

They milled around a pictorial display of the history of Compton and an art show by home-town artist Cedric Adams.

City Manager Allen J. Parker, who served as master of ceremonies, remarked, "I thought it was fun."

On Willowbrook Avenue, supporters of various candidates in the March 8 municipal elections passed out leaflets.

Judges differ on transfer

To avoid the turmoil of fighting the rush-hour traffic in and out of Los Angeles each day, Litwin has decided to ride a bus to work. He said it will give him some time to review the cases he will be handling before he gets to the courthouse.

Baffa graduated from the University of Southern California Law School in 1954 and practiced law in the Inglewood area for 15 years before being named as an Inglewood Municipal Court commissioner.

He said his legal practice consisted of about 60 per cent civil cases and 40 per cent criminal.

HE WAS appointed as an Inglewood Municipal Court judge in March 1971 by then-Gov. Reagan and elevated to the Superior Court by Reagan in November 1973.

Before being transferred to Torrance last July, Baffa served three years in Central District. For six months, he presided over one of five "mini-master calendar departments" set up in an unsuccessful attempt to handle the downtown caseload more efficiently.

In July 1975, Baffa issued a gag order prohibiting Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis from discussing Vaughn Greenwood as a suspect in the "skid row slasher" case while Greenwood was on trial in Baffa's court for burglarizing actor Burt Reynolds' home. Greenwood was convicted of the burglary. In a separate trial, which ended last December, he was convicted of nine of the 11 murder charges against him.

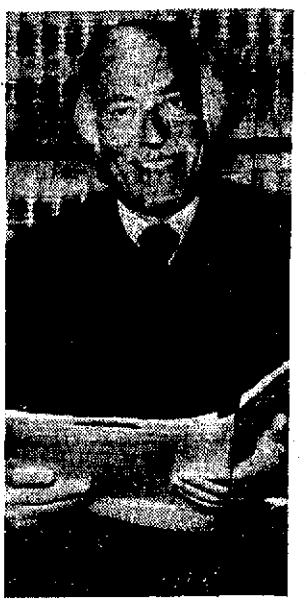

Baffa, 50, said he enjoys handling criminal cases more than civil. "Civil is easy, but it's boring," he said.

HE ALSO said the hardest thing about presiding over a criminal master calendar department "is knowing what a case is worth." One of the major responsibilities of the master calendar judge is to make sure the trial courts don't get jammed up with cases that can be "plea-bargained."

In many cases, if a defendant charged with five or six similar offenses will agree to plead guilty to one or two of the charges, a judge will dismiss the others to avoid a lengthy trial.

"If you've got good people to work with — district attorneys and public defenders — it makes your job easier . . . the (Long Beach) court has an excellent reputation."

Another reason he asked for the transfer is that Long Beach is closer to his home in Rolling Hills Estates than is Los Angeles. Baffa and his wife, Joan, have four children.

Couple testifies at London trial

"The justice system is very much like ours," Shuff said. "But there are also subtle differences. For instance, the defense attorney gives a little summation after cross-examining each witness.

"And," he continued, "in this country, attorneys listen to the judge, but in England, when the judge speaks, they jump. At one point, the judge addressed the attorneys by saying, 'Me lord advocates, arise.' When he spoke, there was absolute silence, then the attorneys leaped to their feet and replied, 'Yes, your lordship'."

Mrs. Shuff, who enjoys referring to herself as a "star witness," chuckled, "It was quite an experience. But do you know, they asked me to slow down when I was talking because they said my accent was difficult to understand?"

Following their court appearance, the Shuffs took advantage of their second vacation with a two-week tour — which they paid for — to Berlin, Brussells (where they saw the Moscow circus) and other European cities.

On their return trip, the couple took in Toronto and Niagra Falls ("it was about 14 degrees below zero there") courtesy of the British government because their plane had a scheduled stopover there.

They figure the trip cost the Crown about $2,500.

"Looking back," Shuff concluded, "the incident was very upsetting ... not at all enjoyable at the time ... but maybe the guy will straighten out ... and we can't complain at all about our extra vacation."

Lake Mission Viejo debated

Three years ago, Mission Viejo signed contracts with state water authorities permitting half the 1.25 billion gallons needed to fill the lake to be drawn from the California Water Project, supplied by the Sierra watershed. The balance would come from the Colorado River.

Both sides now agree the contracts were signed in good faith: state authorities and the Mission Viejo Co. presumed water would be plentiful.

What they didn't foresee was today's crisis in diminishing state water supplies. Runoff from the Sierra the last two years has been miserably low and Northern California water districts and Central Valley farmers have drained available reservoirs almost to the bottom.

Some northern water districts have imposed rationing and now the City of Los Angeles has urged a 10 per cent reduction in residential water use.

Gov. Brown said Friday that wasn't enough.

Calling the drought the worst catastrophe in the state's history, Brown suggested a 25 per cent cut in water consumption in Southern California and hinted that mandatory rationing is next.

"The prospects are on the table," Brown said.

Inflamed by newspaper photos and radio talk shows, some Northern Californians have found a scapegoat in Southern California and have blamed the Southland for much of their misfortune.

A CARTOON last week in the Sacramento Bee depicted a Southern California couple sloshing in their backyard pool. The caption read, "Water shortage? What water shortage?"

Radio station KNBR demanded to know in a broadcast editorial whether Southern California would "continue to fill new lakes for recreation while valley farms dry up and blow away."

The reference was to Lake Mission Viejo, which came under attack last week by the State Water Resources Control Board.

In a letter to Phillip Reilly, president of Mission Viejo Co., Water Board Executive Officer Bill Dendy asked whether continuing to fill the lake was an unreasonable waste of water.

Dendy not only asked Reilly to stop filling the lake until the drought was over but also immediately reworded the letter into a stinging press release.

Dendy made certain it got to every newspaper and broadcast station in the state.

In the release, Dendy said he had no choice but to schedule a hearing this Wednesday in Sacramento on whether filling the lake "constitutes waste, unreasonable use, unreasonable method of use or unreasonable method of diversion of water."

Reilly was at first silent, but several days later countered that fillin the lake was not a waste of water.

He further said his company could be in for serious trouble if the lake isn't completed this summer.

There are both legal and moral obligations that make it impossible for his company to cease the filling of Lake Mission Viejo, Reilly said.

"Is it reasonable to ask a private company to face possible breach of contract actions without offering a specific course of action to mitigate that private company's liability?" Reilly asked.

"We do not believe that it is, and we don't believe it is reasonable for others to demand that a state agency do so."

THE COMPANY, he said, is faced with "a terrible dilemma."

More than 2,800 homes have been sold since the company announced the lake would be constructed, Reilly said, and "people have made decisions based on our credibility. We said the lake would be full by July 1, 1977."

In the meantime, he went on, no more Northern California water will be used to fill the lake. Instead, the lake now draws Colorado River water, which is of no use to Northern California, and the rate of fill has been cut in half.

Slowing the water rate will set back the July 1 completion date, Reilly acknowledged. He said he has no idea when the project will be finished.

Despite Dendy's announcement that the Water Control Board might order the lake shut off, Mission Viejo remains under a legal obligation to another state agency to keep the tap turned on.

The state Department of Real Estate has been asked to investigate potential problems involved in shutting off water to the lake.

Even before Mission Viejo could offer homes around the lake for sale, the entire lake project had to receive DRE approval. Part of that approval was based on completion of the lake.

Reilly says potentially serious questions concerning the firm's meeting commitments to Mission Viejo residents, prospective home buyers and the DRE could arise if completion is delayed or extended.

Asked if anyone has said they'll take legal action against Mission Viejo if the lake isn't finished on time, Reilly said he didn't doubt there is a lawyer somewhere willing to raise the issue.

However, Reilly said, "It is inappropriate to imply that the company is unsympathetic to the current conditions because of its refusal to unilaterally run the risk of substantial breach of contract actions.

He said his legal practice consisted of about 60 per cent civil cases and 40 per cent criminal.

HE WAS appointed as an Inglewood Municipal Court judge in March 1971 by then-Gov. Reagan and elevated to the Superior Court by Reagan in November 1973.

Before being transferred to Torrance last July, Baffa served three years in Central District. For six months, he presided over one of five "mini-master calendar departments" set up in an unsuccessful attempt to handle the downtown caseload more efficiently.

In July 1975, Baffa issued a gag order prohibiting Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis from discussing Vaughn Greenwood as a suspect in the "skid row slasher" case while Greenwood was on trial in Baffa's court for burglarizing actor Burt Reynolds' home. Greenwood was convicted of the burglary. In a separate trial, which ended last December, he was convicted of nine of the 11 murder charges against him.

Baffa, 50, said he enjoys handling criminal cases more than civil. "Civil is easy, but it's boring," he said.

HE ALSO said the hardest thing about presiding over a criminal master calendar department "is knowing what a case is worth." One of the major responsibilities of the master calendar judge is to make sure the trial courts don't get jammed up with cases that can be "plea-bargained."

In many cases, if a defendant charged with five or six similar offenses will agree to plead guilty to one or two of the charges, a judge will dismiss the others to avoid a lengthy trial.

"If you've got good people to work with — district attorneys and public defenders — it makes your job easier . . . the (Long Beach) court has an excellent reputation."

Another reason he asked for the transfer is that Long Beach is closer to his home in Rolling Hills Estates than is Los Angeles. Baffa and his wife, Joan, have four children.

"The justice system is very much like ours," Shuff said. "But there are also subtle differences. For instance, the defense attorney gives a little summation after cross-examining each witness.

"And," he continued, "in this country, attorneys listen to the judge, but in England, when the judge speaks, they jump. At one point, the judge addressed the attorneys by saying, 'Me lord advocates, arise.' When he spoke, there was absolute silence, then the attorneys leaped to their feet and replied, 'Yes, your lordship'."

Mrs. Shuff, who enjoys referring to herself as a "star witness," chuckled, "It was quite an experience. But do you know, they asked me to slow down when I was talking because they said my accent was difficult to understand?"

Following their court appearance, the Shuffs took advantage of their second vacation with a two-week tour — which they paid for — to Berlin, Brussells (where they saw the Moscow circus) and other European cities.

On their return trip, the couple took in Toronto and Niagra Falls ("it was about 14 degrees below zero there") courtesy of the British government because their plane had a scheduled stopover there.

They figure the trip cost the Crown about $2,500.

"Looking back," Shuff concluded, "the incident was very upsetting ... not at all enjoyable at the time ... but maybe the guy will straighten out ... and we can't complain at all about our extra vacation."

Summary of Secret Witness cases

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 70 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $48,500 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case-list below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent, Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To insure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secre Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I,P-T Secret Witness Editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge an additional reward to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 38-year-old Rudy Unzueta, of Compton, shot to death by one of a youthful group while he was walking with his young niece in the 100 block of Bennett Street in Compton at 9 p.m. on Jan. 1.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Jack Adamson, 49-year-old seaman beaten to death with a tire iron during a street robbery on Anaheim Street near Flint Avenue in Wilmington at 2:30 a.m. on Dec. 17, 1976.

— A $1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and kidnap-robbery conviction, or $2,000 for the arrest and murder conviction, of persons responsible for the disappearance of Wilmington camper manufacturer Glenn Doughty, apparent victim of a robbery and kidnaping. Police checking Doughty's Fleet Aire agency at 1321 Alameda St. on Nov. 3, 1976, found the doors open and the safe standing open. Doughty's car, a 1976 Buick Regal with landau top, license 927-RCV, was missing.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Donald Lynch, 69-year-old owner of Don's Turf Motel at 4732 Katella Ave., Los Alamitos, shot to death during a holdup at the motel at 11:05 p.m. on July 20, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the purse thief who attacked and knocked down Ruth Tournat, 78, of Long Beach, as she was walking on First Street at Atlantic Avenue at 7:20 p.m. May 14, 1976, causing injuries that resulted in her death on June 1, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Michael Lee Edmonds, 23, of Long Beach, found stabbed to death in Leland Park, on Gaffey Street south of Battery Street in San Pedro, on the morning of May 5, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 56-year-old Kermit Euland King, of Westminster, who was found stabbed to death with his pockets turned inside out in an alley behind the 1400 block on Walnut Avenue in Long Beach at 7:30 p.m. on April 12, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of 23-year-old John Anthony Whitehurst, of Lynwood, who was found lying shot to death beside his car parked in a driveway of the 1600 block of Stoneacre Drive in Compton on the night of Feb. 23, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 49-year-old deaf mute Kenneth Lawrence Willis, found stabbed to death in his Long Beach duplex at 6042 Orange Ave. on Dec. 30, 1975.

—A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of Douglas Lee Thompson, 23-year-old fugitive from a murder warrant in connection with the holdup slaying of David W. Arouette in his television repair shop at 6465 Long Beach Blvd. on Dec. 30, 1973, with an additional reward of $1,500 to be paid when and if Thompson is convicted of the murder.

Parents sue over dead son

The parents of a Huntington Beach student who died from injuries suffered in a fight at Wintersburg High School have filed suit seeking $2 million damages.

In a wrongful death suit filed in Orange County Superior Court, the dead student's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Terry, named the defendants as the Huntington Beach Unified School District and Mr. and Mrs. Brook Hollis, whose son Gerald was identified as the boy who fought with Donald E. Terry.

Terry lapsed into a coma and died soon after the fight April 26, 1976.

Car crash in fog fatal

A Garden Grove man was killed when he lost control of his car on a fog-covered road near San Luis Obispo and it rolled over three times and burst into flames, authorities said Saturday.

Michael Lynn Richards, 22, of 12342 Haster St., died when thrown from the vehicle in the Friday night accident, the Highway Patrol reported.

Two passengers, both residents of Los Osos, were hospitalized. They were identified as Steve Davis, 22, who suffered serious burns, and Mark Decker, 24, who sustained minor injuries, officials said.

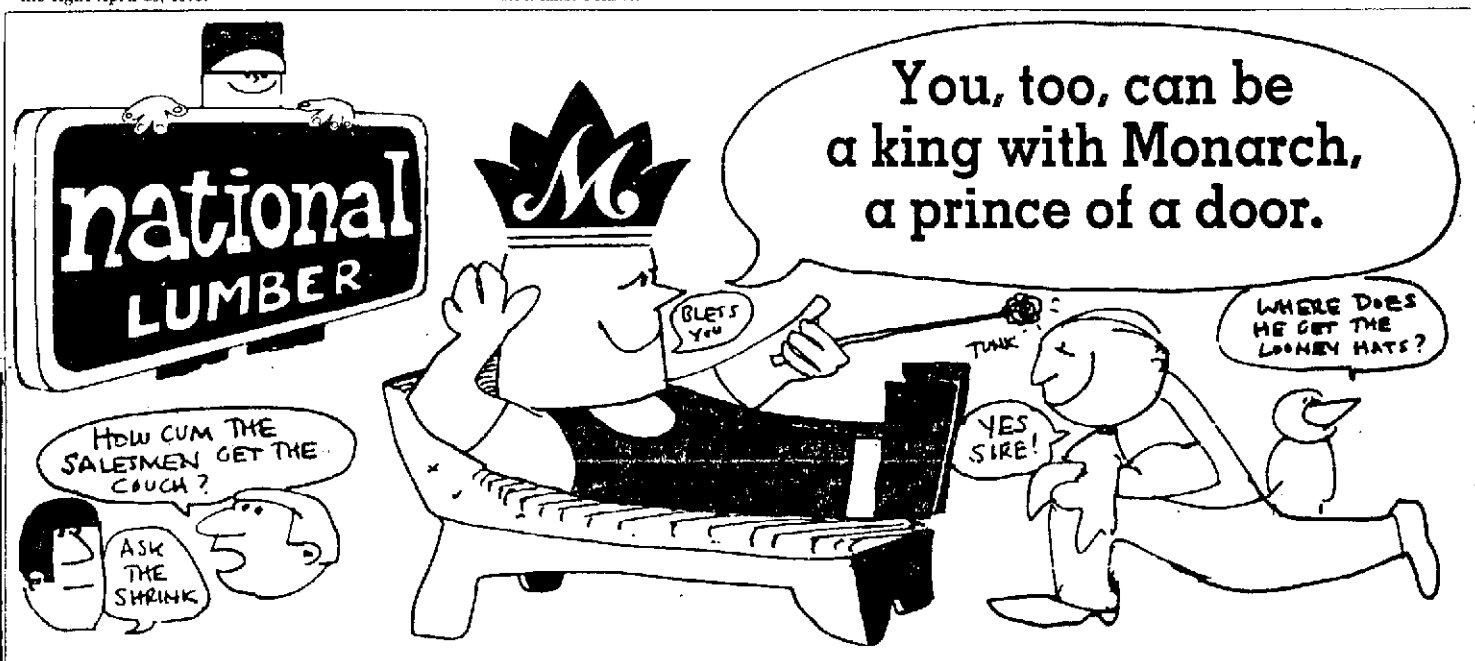

The survivors said Richards was speeding on Los Osos Valley Road, 11 miles west of San Luis Obispo, when the car spun out.

L.B. Harbor cargo volume hit all-time high in 1976

The volume of cargo moving across the wharves of Long Beach Harbor reached an all-time high during 1976, according to the Harbor Department.

Value of the record 31.4 million tons was $7.3 billion, Harbor Commission President Richard G. Wilson said last week.

Volume was almost 4 million tons more than that handled during 1975.

The port set new highs in the number of ship calls, container movements, general cargo shipments, value of cargoes handled and community economic benefits.

A record 2,984 vessels docked at the port's deep water berths, including tankers as large as 165,000 deadweight tons.

Bulk petroleum — 18.4 million tons — led all other products handled within the port.

Packed into the more than 500,000 containers moving through the port were nearly 5.5 million tons of cargo.

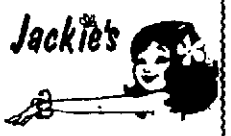

Inbound cargo, 20.4 million tons, was almost double the volume of outbound cargo of 11 million tons.

Officials reported that cargo tonnage handled currently is 2½ times what it was 13 years ago. They point out that 13 years ago the department had 323 employes, the same number now employed.

Port projects being considered or actually underway include a three-tanker terminal to receive crude oil from Alaska's North Slope, doubling the loading capacity of the grain terminal, conversion of a break-bulk cargo pier into an omni-terminal, installation of a high-speed bulk loading system on Pier D and construction of a petroleum terminal for MacMillan Ring-Free Oil Co.

L.B. Harbor cargo volume hit all-time high in 1976

The volume of cargo moving across the wharves of Long Beach Harbor reached an all-time high during 1976, according to the Harbor Department.

Value of the record 31.4 million tons was $7.3 billion, Harbor Commission President Richard G. Wilson said last week.

Volume was almost 4 million tons more than that handled during 1975.

The port set new highs in the number of ship calls, container movements, general cargo shipments, value of cargoes handled and community economic benefits.

A record 2,984 vessels docked at the port's deep water berths, including tankers as large as 165,000 deadweight tons.

Bulk petroleum — 18.4 million tons — led all other products handled within the port.

Packed into the more than 500,000 containers moving through the port were nearly 5.5 million tons of cargo.

Inbound cargo, 20.4 million tons, was almost double the volume of outbound cargo of 11 million tons.

Officials reported that cargo tonnage handled currently is 2½ times what it was 13 years ago. They point out that 13 years ago the department had 323 employes, the same number now employed.

Port projects being considered or actually underway include a three-tanker terminal to receive crude oil from Alaska's North Slope, doubling the loading capacity of the grain terminal, conversion of a break-bulk cargo pier into an omni-terminal, installation of a high-speed bulk loading system on Pier D and construction of a petroleum terminal for MacMillan Ring-Free Oil Co.

School board candidates state views

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

E. Jane Mermelstein, a candidate for Long Beach Board of Education in the March 15 election, said Saturday her campaign slogan is, "Create better schools," a representation of her convictions as well as a slap at the Keep Good Schools Committee which backs the two incumbents seeking reelection.

Better schools, without more cost to the taxpayer, can be created when the Legislature, the board members, the administrators, the teachers, the parents and other citizens are willing to examine the glue that holds good schools together," Mrs. Mermelstein said.

She said she would attempt to raise public consciousness as to what is happening in the schools, adding, "My first priority would be to assess all educational programs as to their effect on the youth they are designed to serve and their cost to the taxpayer.

"I would redefine an educationally disadvantaged youth as any youth who fails to learn to read, write and compute or loses the desire to gain knowledge."

Mrs. Mermelstein said she would attempt to establish career education throughout the school district "so that each child, no matter what background, could at least dream that our society is an open society and that with the desire and willingness to work you can become what you want to become.

"I would encourage teachers to look at the parents of the children they are responsible for as potential classroom resources. Dialogue between teacher, parent and child is the most important element in our educational structure. Teachers must take the lead in establishing this dialogue."

She quoted Pasadena Board of Education president Henry S. Myer Jr. to indicate her own approach to board membership:

"As mortals, our only method of survival is for each generation to transmit its accumulated store of knowledge to each succeeding generation. If that transmission process becomes inefficient, any nation will ultimately deteriorate and die."

Two seats are at stake in the March 15 election. Incumbents Elizabeth Wallace and James Zarifes seek new terms.

DIXON STATEMENT

Long Beach School Board candidate Elliott J. Dixon said he is appalled at board member Jerald Jacobs' recent comments about too much emphasis being placed on educating girls in business, politics and the arts and that girls need more training in the skills of the housewife.

Dixon called the statement "flagrant discrimination against half the citizens of our community.

"Our society is fortunate to have the services of thousands of intelligent, capable and talented women in those areas Jacobs apparently believes are the exclusive domain of males."

Dixon, a lawyer, pledged his support to the 1972 federal law prohibiting discrimination by sex in educational programs that receive federal money.

In a recent talk before the Lakewood Republican Women's Club, Dixon said that he shares homemaking duties with his wife, Dorothy, who also is a college instructor.

"I don't like the idea of my daughter's education being influenced by the kind of archaic philosophy espoused by Mr. Jacobs," Dixon said.

Jacobs is not up for reelection this year.

FUENTES PLATFORM

Nick Fuentes, 27, a bilingual welfare worker for Los Angeles County, describes himself as the Socialist Workers Party candidate for the Long Beach Board of Education.

Using board estimates of the racial composition of the school district, Fuentes said segregation is still a problem with Whittier Elementary School almost 70 per cent black, Roosevelt more than 65 per cent black and Webster close to 23 per cent Chicano and Mexicano.

Fuentes said the current board holds that complete balance is not feasible and favors neighborhood schools, a "code word," he charged, "for the board's racist policy of de facto segregation.

"While black people, Chicanos and Asians are forced to accept lower paying jobs and live in low income neighborhoods, 'neighborhood schools' will always be segregated and segregated schools never provide minority children with a quality education."

The candidate said he supports the use of busing to achieve school desegregation. He would have bilingual, bicultural programs made available to Chicano and Mexicano children wherever they attend school. He is for a consistent policy of recruiting more minority teachers and staff, especially bilingual teachers and said that all adult education courses should be made available in Spanish.

Fuentes said freedom of speech and other basic democratic rights should be restored to the city colleges, noting that current board policy forbids the distribution of political literature on the two city college campuses.

Fuentes received his B.A. degree in psychology from Los Angeles State University in 1974.

Ma Bell calls on lawmakers

By ED ZUCKERMAN
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Is Ma Bell having trouble selling her monopoly proposal to Congress?

So far, only a handful of House and Senate members have signaled their support for the "Consumer Communications Reform Act." But observers on both sides of the struggle insist that the nation's biggest corporation can never be counted out in a political battle. All the signs from last year — when 175 House and 12 Senate members co-sponsored the measure which was drafted in the legal stable of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (AT&T) — indicated that the super-corporation would be gunning for an early verdict from Capitol Hill this year.

BUT, IN AN AGE when bigness is not necessarily equated with virtue, AT&T's current drive to recruit co-sponsors has not produced too many re-enlistments for this year's legislative battle — so far, only 32 House and three Senate members have answered the call.

Ma Bell is not lethargic, insisted AT&T spokesman James Mundis. He said the House Communications subcommittee only recently became operational.

But Herb Jasper, director of the anti-AT&T lobby created by the companies that are threatened by the legislation, the Ad Hoc Committee for Competitive Telecommunications, predicts that the telephone company's expensive lobbying campaign is doomed to failure.

LAST YEAR'S round-up of co-sponsors, Jasper said, came in a "blitzkreig" assault on Capital Hill by AT&T lobbyists whose arguments were "dishonest."

Nobody is certain how much manpower and money is being spent by the two sides in the legislative fight, but there are indications that it is impressive.

AT&T, for instance, has disclosed to the Federal Communications Commission that it spent over $2.5 million during the last 15 months for lobbying and promotional expenses related to the bill — despite the fact that AT&T has a single registered lobbyist in the nation's capital.

HE IS JOHN G. FOX who, Mundis said, "registered under protest." Under a 1946 law, lobbyists are required to register if "the main thrust of their occupation is to affect legislation," and none of AT&T's employes meet that requirement, Mundis explained. Fox "runs an office and somebody has to register, so it's him," the AT&T spokesman added.

At issue in the complex struggle is a series of FCC decisions and court rulings which have permitted competition to enter the telephone industry.

It was first enuciated in the 1950s when the FCC, in its Hushaphone decision, said equipment could be attached to AT&T property so long as it provided a private benefit without causing public harm.

THE CONCEPT WAS driven home in the FCC's 1968 Carterfone decision which related to an invention that made it possible to transmit mobile radio signals through telephone lines.

Those decisions have spawned the development of the so-called "interconnect" industry, which manufactures a wide array of communications gadgetry such as automatic answering devices, machines that transmit pictures and computer data over telephone lines and sophisticated switchboards.

Claiming the 1934 Communications Act sanctified its monopoly, AT&T claims that the loss of revenue to competitors will eventually become significant enough to force the company to seek financial replenishment elsewhere, primarily through higher rates from its telephone customers.

"WE MAKE GOOD money on long distance service," AT&T's Mundis explained, "but 55 cents of every dollar is bled off to support local phone service. Our competition is going into long distance and every dollar lost causes a loss to home phone service . . . the loss will be gradual, but eventually, the cost of home phones has to go up."

In other words, AT&T has the interest of its customers at heart.

But opponents who derisively label the bill "The Ma Bell Monopoly Protection Act," says its approval would also nullify a massive Justice Department antitrust suit which was filed several years ago.

10 hard nosed questions to ask before you buy any motor home.

(And some straight answers from Winnebago.)

1. Is this motor home built by an experienced reputable manufacturer?
There's more to building a good motor home than putting a box on top of a truck chassis. Winnebago's experience and know-how have made it the best-selling brand in the U.S. We're also number one in repeat sales.

2. Do you have a good selection of sizes and models to choose from?
Some dealers have to push you into what they've got. But this year, Winnebago offers 6 different models and 15 floor plans. You can buy the motor home that fits your family.

3. Does this company have a program to upgrade vehicle safety?
Winnebago has one. It includes tough crash tests to prove the strength of our rugged Thermo-Steel® construction. We don't know anyone else who makes such tests.

4. Are parts and service readily available in all sections of the country?
You buy a motor home to go places. But can you get service in Florida as well as California? In Texas, Maine, Minnesota or Washington? Winnebago has some 450 service centers from coast to coast, even in Canada and Alaska. When you're on the road 500 miles from home, it's a mighty comforting thought.

5. Are you buying from a well-established, well-equipped dealer?
Winnebago dealers aren't here-today-gone-tomorrow outfits after a fast buck. They're experienced RV or automotive dealers, backed by full motor home service facilities and factory training programs.

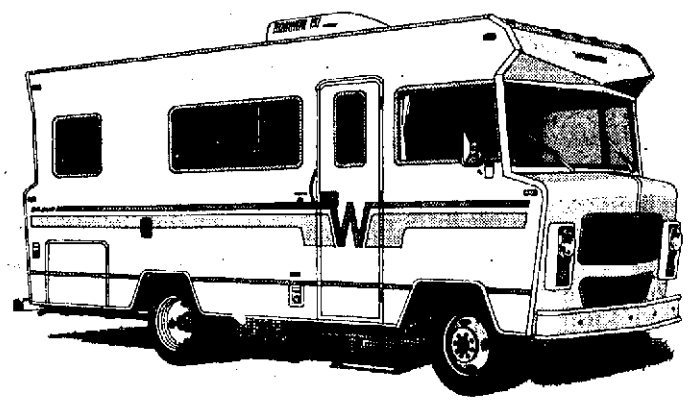

6. Is there anyone beyond the dealer I can go to for satisfaction or help?
With Winnebago, you have a friend at the factory. Our Customer Relations Department is organized specifically to help you with questions, complaints or any special problems that may arise with your motor home.

7. What about protection after the sale?
No warranty or any other promise is any stronger than the company that stands behind it. The Winnebago Homeowners Plan spells out our limited warranty and many more owner benefits that help protect both you and your investment. And we have both the corporate and dealer strength to back it up.

8. What will your motor home be worth five years from now?
In the past few years, dozens of motor home companies have gone out of business and dozens more have sprung up. When the time comes to sell or trade, "orphan" brands take a big beating on price. On the other hand, Winnebagos consistently bring top resale dollars.

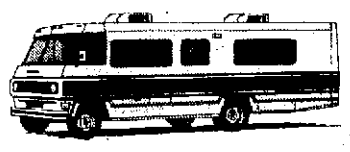

9. Will I pay more for freight charges here than in other parts of the country?
Not if you buy a Winnebago anywhere in the continental U.S. or Canada. Winnebago's freight charge is only $100 and it's included in the selling price.

10. Does this motor home have a printed sticker price?
If it's a Winnebago it does. You get facts, not fancy talk from a Winnebago dealer. When you make a deal, you'll know the price is right. Make that deal right now and you'll do even better!

New D21 Brave $13,226*
Here's traditional Winnebago styling, plus Winnebago quality and construction at a very affordable price. This 21-foot Brave is a full-size motor home, with great livability, comfort and convenience features.
Dollar for dollar, it offers you the solid value that's made Winnebago America's best-selling motor home.
*Mfrs. list price, freight included. Dealer prep, state and local taxes extra.

WASHINGTON — Is Ma Bell having trouble selling her monopoly proposal to Congress?

So far, only a handful of House and Senate members have signaled their support for the "Consumer Communications Reform Act." But observers on both sides of the struggle insist that the nation's biggest corporation can never be counted out in a political battle. All the signs from last year — when 175 House and 12 Senate members co-sponsored the measure which was drafted in the legal stable of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (AT&T) — indicated that the super-corporation would be gunning for an early verdict from Capitol Hill this year.

BUT, IN AN AGE when bigness is not necessarily equated with virtue, AT&T's current drive to recruit cosponsors has not produced too many re-enlistments for this year's legislative battle — so far, only 32 House and three Senate members have answered the call.

Ma Bell is not lethargic, insisted AT&T spokesman James Mundis. He said the House Communications subcommittee only recently became operational.

But Herb Jasper, director of the anti-AT&T lobby created by the companies that are threatened by the legislation, the Ad Hoc Committee for Competitive Telecommunications, predicts that the telephone company's expensive lobbying campaign is doomed to failure.

LAST YEAR'S round-up of co-sponsors, Jasper said, came in a "blitzkreig" assault on Capital Hill by AT&T lobbyists whose arguments were "dishonest."

Nobody is certain how much manpower and money is being spent by the two sides in the legislative fight, but there are indications that it is impressive.

AT&T, for instance, has disclosed to the Federal Communications Commission that it spent over $2.5 million during the last 15 months for lobbying and promotional expenses related to the bill — despite the fact that AT&T has a single registered lobbyist in the nation's capital.

HE IS JOHN G. FOX who, Mundis said, "registered under protest." Under a 1946 law, lobbyists are required to register if "the main thrust of their occupation is to effect legislation," and none of AT&T's employes meet that requirement, Mundis explained. Fox "runs an office and somebody has to register, so it's him," the AT&T spokesman added.

At issue in the complex struggle is a series of FCC decisions and court rulings which have permitted competition to enter the telephone industry.

It was first enuciated in the 1950s when the FCC, in its Hushaphone decision, said equipment could be attached to AT&T property so long as it provided a private benefit without causing public harm.

THE CONCEPT WAS driven home in the FCC's 1968 Carterfone decision which related to an invention that made it possible to transmit mobile radio signals through telephone lines.

Those decisions have spawned the development of the so-called "interconnect" industry, which manufactures a wide array of communications gadgetry such as automatic answering devices, machines that transmit pictures and computer data over telephone lines and sophisticated switchboards.

Claiming the 1934 Communications Act sanctified its monopoly, AT&T claims that the loss of revenue to competitors will eventually become significant enough to force the company to seek financial replenishment elsewhere, primarily through higher rates from its telephone customers.

"WE MAKE GOOD money on long distance service," AT&T's Mundis explained, "but 55 cents of every dollar is bled off to support local phone service. Our competition is going into long distance and every dollar lost causes a loss to home phone service . . . the loss will be gradual, but eventually, the cost of home phones has to go up."

In other words, AT&T has the interest of its customers at heart.

But opponents who derisively label the bill "The Ma Bell Monopoly Protection Act," says its approval would also nullify a massive Justice Department antitrust suit which was filed several years ago.

10 hard nosed questions to ask before you buy any motor home.

(And some straight answers from Winnebago.)

1. Is this motor home built by an experienced reputable manufacturer?
There's more to building a good motor home than putting a box on top of a truck chassis. Winnebago's experience and know-how have made it the best-selling brand in the U.S. We're also number one in repeat sales.

2. Do you have a good selection of sizes and models to choose from?
Some dealers have to push you into what they've got. But this year, Winnebago offers 6 different models and 15 floor plans. You can buy the motor home that fits your family.

3. Does this company have a program to upgrade vehicle safety?
Winnebago has one. It includes tough crash tests to prove the strength of our rugged Thermo-Steel® construction. We don't know anyone else who makes such tests.

4. Are parts and service readily available in all sections of the country?
You buy a motor home to go places. But can you get service in Florida as well as California? In Texas, Maine, Minnesota or Washington? Winnebago has some 450 service centers from coast to coast, even in Canada and Alaska. When you're on the road 500 miles from home, it's a mighty comforting thought.

5. Are you buying from a well-established, well-equipped dealer?
Winnebago dealers aren't here-today-gone-tomorrow outfits after a fast buck. They're experienced RV or automotive dealers, backed by full motor home service facilities and factory training programs.

6. Is there anyone beyond the dealer I can go to for satisfaction or help?
With Winnebago, you have a friend at the factory. Our Customer Relations Department is organized specifically to help you with questions, complaints or any special problems that may arise with your motor home.

7. What about protection after the sale?
No warranty or any other promise is any stronger than the company that stands behind it. The Winnebago Homeowners Plan spells out our limited warranty and many more owner benefits that help protect both you and your investment. And we have both the corporate and dealer strength to back it up.

8. What will your motor home be worth five years from now?
In the past few years, dozens of motor home companies have gone out of business and dozens more have sprung up. When the time comes to sell or trade, "orphan" brands take a big beating on price. On the other hand, Winnebagos consistently bring top resale dollars.

9. Will I pay more for freight charges here than in other parts of the country?
Not if you buy a Winnebago anywhere in the continental U.S. or Canada. Winnebago's freight charge is only $100 and it's included in the selling price.

10. Does this motor home have a printed sticker price?
If it's a Winnebago it does. You get facts, not fancy talk from a Winnebago dealer. When you make a deal, you'll know the price is right. Make that deal right now and you'll do even better!

New D21 Brave $13,226*

Here's traditional Winnebago styling, plus Winnebago quality and construction at a very affordable price. This 21-foot Brave is a full-size motor home, with great livability, comfort and convenience features. WES, ROMALITA HOBBS ENJOY ORANGE LAKES LIVING

Orange Lake units filling

Orange Lakes, the successful condominium community built by C. Robert Langslet & Son, Inc. of Long Beach is virtually sold out.

The first to move into the lavishly landscaped "lakes" community in Orange were Wes and Romalita Hobbs, who like many of the Orange Lakes buyers are purchasing their first home. "Naturally, we were extremely interested in the cost," Hobbs said. "We were very surprised to find a brand new, really beautiful community which offered homes priced in the $40,000 range."

Another deciding factor was the "country atmosphere," Mrs. Hobbs said. "Since I am originally from Singapore, I'm used to townhome-style living. A difference here is in the open spaces and the lovely surroundings."

Both are excited about the unique lakes, waterfalls, fountains, and dramatic landscaping that abound at Orange Lakes, and all of the new residents enjoy the lakes and recreational facilities.

As of the end of this month, approximately 80 escrows will have closed. Of the 118 one- and two-bedroom homes, only three remain unsold.

The recreation complex at Orange Lakes offers a centrally located cabana with large jacuzzi and lakeside swimming pool, a sauna with one-way glass overlooking the recreation area, a sunken fire pit at lake's edge, and two night-lighted tennis courts.

The nine-acre planned unit development allows each buyer the ownership of the land under his home as well as an interest in all common areas and facilities.

Located near the Santa Ana, Garden Grove and Orange Freeways, Orange Lakes is reached via the Newport Freeway to the Chapman Ave. exit, and east two miles to Solana Drive.

Only 5 homes remain

"Only five homes remain to be sold in Phase I at Emblem Townhomes in Cerritos, and we expected prices in the next phase to be considerably higher," said Phil Walsh, president of Emblem Development Corp., builder of the 79-unit.

Priced from $52,950, the three or four bedroom, two or three bath homes offer from 1,250 to 1,820 square feet of living area.

Four distinctive floor plans offer luxury appointments plus quality options.

The largest plan, Yellowstone, has four bedrooms and three baths and features a formal dining room, kitchen pantry, patio pass-thru bar, large walk-in closet in the master suite with private bath and dressing area and a large garden view family room.

STANDARD features include Gaffers and Sattlers range and oven, disposal, trash compactor and dishwasher, ceramic tile countertops and luminous ceilings. Wall-to-wall carpeting is included in living areas, formal dining areas, halls and bedrooms.

To reach Emblem Townhomes, take the Artesia Freeway (91) west to the Norwalk Boulevard exit, right on Norwalk and turn right again on Cedarcrest Drive.

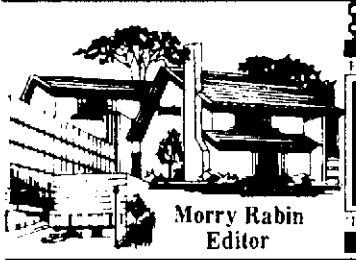

Units are open from 10 a.m. to dusk.

Focal point

Tennis and social activities are keyed to the Mission Hills Tennis Club at Mission Hills Tennis Townhomes. The 8,000-square foot, $1 million complex was opened officially during the American Airlines Tennis Games. Included are 13 courts — seven lighted — and facilities for 7,200 spectators. There are also two indoor squash courts.

Planning too early can be detriment at actual retirement

By DON G. CAMPBELL

Is there such a thing as planning TOO well for retirement? In an age where nine out of 10 of us don't give the subject of retirement a thought until it suddenly looms up as an immediate problem, the idea of being too premature in our planning is something of an oddity. But, it obviously CAN happen.

Dear Mr. Campbell: My wife and I plan on retiring early (in our 50s) and have started to build our retirement home in the country while presently living in the city.

The retirement land has been paid for ($8,000) and the home is shelled in and partially finished. We initially borrowed $16,000 to shell in the house and are now on a pay-as-we-go plan finishing it as we get the cash.

I estimated that by the time we finish the house, over the next three years, we will have invested between $35,000 and $40,000, including a loan which should amount to about $15,000.

When we sell our present city home how can we reduce the capital gains tax? Our house we live in now is worth around $50,000 and we paid $20,000 for it. Normally, if we traded into a house costing more than $50,000, we could defer the tax.

If we sold our house and bought a new house within the six-month period and the new house cost $40,000, we would pay capital gains tax on the difference between $40,000 and the cost of the new house, $50,000.

Since the retirement house has been paid for over the last seven years (as we were building it), how can we pay the capital gains on the difference of what we'll have invested in the house? We will not move into the country until we retire and our home is sold in the city. Mr. R.P., Concord, Cal.

A. Normally, as you know, the capital gains tax on the sale of a home is deferred if you replace it with one at least as expensive within 18 months (not six months), or if you build a replacement home costing as much and occupy it within two years.

Unfortunately, your foresightedness is, to a certain extent, your undoing. There's no way this deferment can be applied retroactively to a replacement home completed and paid for well before your actual move.

There's something ironic in being penalized for planning ahead so thoroughly. But it sure doesn't mean that you were wrong in doing so.

Take comfort in the fact that even though you will be subject to the capital gains tax, you'll come out of the sale of your present home in pretty good shape.

Dear Mr. Campbell: If I sell my double home do I get the same tax deferment on a replacement that a single-family home owner does? Mr. W.A.S., Philadelphia, Pa.

A. If you're occupying one-half of the double, yourself, you'll get a proportionate deferment when you buy a replacement.

Century 21's growth steady

The Great American Dream is still alive.

What began as a casual conversation in an Orange County coffee shop in late 1971 has erupted into one of the most spectacular business successes of the 70s.

Art Bartlett and Marsh Fisher, who met to "kick around a few real estate ideas," decided to put those ideas into action with a $6,000 investment, and on Feb. 12, 1972, Century 21 Real Estate Corp. opened for business in Orange County with 17 affiliated real estate offices.

On its fifth birthday, Century 21 represents the largest real estate organization in the world. More than 3,200 independent real estate offices operate under the Century 21 banner in 48 states and Canada.

THE 30,000-PLUS members of the Century 21 sales and management teams are responsible for approximately $13 billion in gross sales annually.

Today, the executive staff at the organization's international headquarters in Irvine helps monitor, develop and implement new international programs. 35 regional centers throughout the United States and Canada employ a staff of approximately 350 people to keep close communications and management systems available to Century 21 member brokers and salespeople.

With a quarter of a million real estate transactions in 1976, the Century 21 sales and management teams have developed into one of the largest and most productive sales forces in the world.

AS CENTURY 21 brokers and salespeople celebrate the fifth anniversary of the organization, new Century 21 offices are opening at a rate of 125-150 a month. At the Century 21 fourth convention in Las Vegas last month, president Barlett, predicted that the number of offices would rise to 4,500 by the end of the year, and 7,000 by 1980, with continued international expansion.

THE CONVENTION proved to be a true measure of growth. Nearly 7,200 member brokers and salespeople attended the largest convention ever held by a single company under one roof anywhere.

What are the reasons for the firm's dynamic growth?

"We are successful," Bartlett said, "because we give more than is expected. That's been our policy from the very beginning.

"Century 21 was born and bred in consumerism," he continued. Consumerism is our obligation to give the most professional service to the public and to our regional offices, brokers and salespeople. Our philosophy of giving more than expected extends throughout our organization.

"Any deviation from this philosophy, whether it be at International Headquarters, one of our regional offices, or one of our brokers or salespeople, is immediately checked."

THE CENTURY 21 sales team has two objectives, Bartlett said.

"One is to help the home seller sell his home as quickly as possible, with the least amount of inconvenience. The second is to help the homebuyer find the right home and give professional guidance in all details."

Bartlett explained that, to the average American or Canadian family, buying a home is the largest single financial transaction in their life.

"A majority of the average person's life savings is usually invested in his property," he said. "An awesome responsibility is entrusted to the real estate broker and salesperson to professionally handle the transaction."

Some of the advanced marketing systems that Century 21 offers its member brokers and salespeople to better serve the public are training, recruiting, and an international referral system to aid in marketing property. Also, TV, radio and print advertising is employed to proclaim Century 21 services.

Introducing...

Shea Homes

This proud new name in home building is a proud old name in American construction.

We're Shea Homes. Until now, we've been known as Century Community Developers. It was a good name and, under its banner, we've built residential communities that are home to thousands of families in California and Nevada.

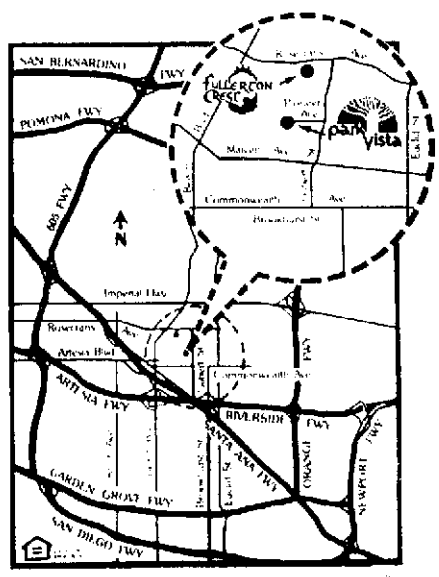

Century Community Developers is hardly a personal name, and we feel that homebuilding is a highly personal enterprise. Now we're using our own name. It brings our endeavor closer to home, if you will. Under our new name, we'll be working even harder to improve the quality of the homes we build and offer for sale. Our reputation matters to us. Our slogan says it best; "Your home and our reputation...Equally important to both of us."

Century 21's growth steady

The Great American Dream is still alive.

What began as a casual conversation in an Orange County coffee shop in late 1971 has erupted into one of the most spectacular business successes of the 70s.

Art Bartlett and Marsh Fisher, who met to "kick around a few real estate ideas," decided to put those ideas into action with a $6,000 investment, and on Feb. 12, 1972, Century 21 Real Estate Corp. opened for business in Orange County with 17 affiliated real estate offices.

On its fifth birthday, Century 21 represents the largest real estate organization in the world. More than 3,200 independent real estate offices operate under the Century 21 banner in 48 states and Canada.

THE 30,000-PLUS members of the Century 21 sales and management teams are responsible for approximately $13 billion in gross sales annually.

Today, the executive staff at the organization's international headquarters in Irvine helps monitor, develop and implement new international programs. 35 regional centers throughout the United States and Canada employ a staff of approximately 350 people to keep close communications and management systems available to Century 21 member brokers and salespeople.

With a quarter of a million real estate transactions in 1976, the Century 21 sales and management teams have developed into one of the largest and most productive sales forces in the world.

AS CENTURY 21 brokers and salespeople celebrate the fifth anniversary of the organization, new Century 21 offices are opening at a rate of 125-150 a month. At the Century 21 fourth convention in Las Vegas last month, president Barlett, predicted that the number of offices would rise to 4,500 by the end of the year, and 7,000 by 1980, with continued international expansion.

THE CONVENTION proved to be a true measure of growth. Nearly 7,200 member brokers and salespeople attended the largest convention ever held by a single company under one roof anywhere.

What are the reasons for the firm's dynamic growth?

"We are successful," Bartlett said, "because we give more than is expected. That's been our policy from the very beginning.

"Century 21 was born and bred in consumerism," he continued. Consumerism is our obligation to give the most professional service to the public and to our regional offices, brokers and salespeople. Our philosophy of giving more than expected extends throughout our organization.

"Any deviation from this philosophy, whether it be at International Headquarters, one of our regional offices, or one of our brokers or salespeople, is immediately checked."

THE CENTURY 21 sales team has two objectives, Bartlett said.

"One is to help the home seller sell his home as quickly as possible, with the least amount of inconvenience. The second is to help the homebuyer find the right home and give professional guidance in all details."

Bartlett explained that, to the average American or Canadian family, buying a home is the largest single financial transaction in their life.

"A majority of the average person's life savings is usually invested in his property," he said. "An awesome responsibility is entrusted to the real estate broker and salesperson to professionally handle the transaction."

Some of the advanced marketing systems that Century 21 offers its member brokers and salespeople to better serve the public are training, recruiting, and an international referral system to aid in marketing property. Also, TV, radio and print advertising is employed to proclaim Century 21 services.

Introducing...

Shea Homes

This proud new name in home building is a proud old name in American construction.

We're Shea Homes. Until now, we've been known as Century Community Developers. It was a good name and, under its banner, we've built residential communities that are home to thousands of families in California and Nevada.

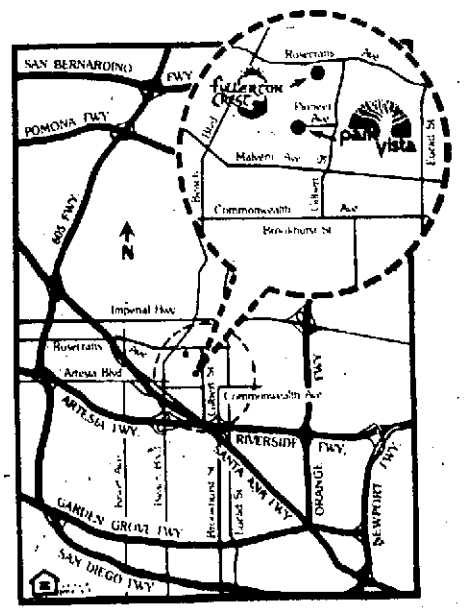

Century Community Developers is hardly a personal name, and we feel that homebuilding is a highly personal enterprise. Now we're using our own name. It brings our endeavor closer to home, if you will. Under our new name, we'll be working even harder to improve the quality of the homes we build and offer for sale. Our reputation matters to us. Report cites need for airborne 'war rooms'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Airborne military command centers must be strengthened because land-based centers, including a central post in the Pentagon, are unlikely to withstand a nuclear attack, a congressional report says.

The House Armed Services subcommittee on investigations, in a study released Friday, endorsed an Advanced Airborne Command Post program as offering the best probability of survival, compared to surface and subsurface command posts, which are more vulnerable.

The National Military Command Center in the Pentagon, from which day-to-day peacetime military operations take place, is a good example of how vulnerable the systems are, the study said.

"While located in the basement of the Pentagon, a realistic assessment must conclude that there is little possibility that the National Military Command Center would survive a nuclear attack directed against it," the report said.

An alternate National Military Command Center could assume control of U.S. forces immediately should the Pentagon center be destroyed, but it too is vulnerable, the report said.

Airborne command posts "assigned to commanders as emergency alternate centers appear to offer the highest probability for continuation of command and control during and after nuclear attack," the report said.

The aircraft carry a battle staff and are maintained on ground alert. They can be placed on continuous airborne alert when necessary.

"In addition, enemy targeting of the alert aircraft would be extremely difficult if they were frequently moved from base to base on a random basis," the report said.

The Advanced Airborne Command Post program uses modified Boeing 747 jumbo jets as flying war rooms. The program's cost has grown rapidly and the subcommittee suggested a study, to be completed in six months, of how expenses might be reduced.

On Friday, administration sources reported that President Carter has told Pentagon officials that they should not buy more of the $117-million "doomsday" planes and should tell him about future plans for the three aircraft already in operation.

Carter flew aboard one of the planes last weekend during a visit to his Georgia home.

The subcommittee report complained that the Defense Department and the Joint Chiefs of Staff have systematically reduced the rank and prestige of managers in charge of command, control and telecommunications. This contributed to an erosion in their authority and that of their offices, it said.

The panel suggested that those functions be restored to an assistant secretary of defense, as they had once been.

Seven injured in Amtrak derailment

IRWIN, Pa. (AP) — An Amtrak passenger train derailed near this southwestern Pennsylvania community on Saturday, injuring seven of its 45 passengers.

"It felt like the train was rolling sideways on a platter of marbles," said Denny Duda, 25, of New Castle, Pa., who boarded the National Limited in Pittsburgh.

Rails were twisted, ties broken, and cars were tilted at odd angles when the 10-car train screeched to a halt in sight of the Pennsylvania Turnpike.

"It's a mess," said fireman Donald Wentroble, who helped extinguish a fire under a locomotive derailed in the accident. "The track is bent like a pretzel."

The train was en route from Kansas City, Mo., to New York and had stopped in Pittsburgh a short time before the wreck.

The 10 cars and one of the train's two locomotives left the track.

Amtrak officials gave no immediate explanation for the derailment. The train was traveling about 40 mph, they said.

"It was like getting nearer to God," said trainman G.J. McKenzie, who was walking through the train when it derailed. "It scared the hell out of me."

Gardner Duncan, 57, of New York, a railroad employe, was hospitalized in fair condition with lower back injuries.

Four women and two men also were taken to area hospitals for treatment, but none was seriously injured, officials said.

The train came to a stop adjacent to the Harliss Specialties plant in the village of Shalton.

"I was in the office and felt the floor tremble," said owner Frank Lissy. "We're used to that here, but this time it seemed unusually loud."

Passengers later came to the plant to call relatives. Among them was Theresa Chalfant of Weirton, W.Va., who was on her way to Newark, N.J.

Gunman drugged, captured

HARLINGEN, Tex. (AP) — A gunman who led police on a 150-mile chase through South Texas after allegedly shooting a border guard was captured Saturday night when a doctor sedated him and a drug agent seized his gun.

The gunman's two women hostages bolted to freedom from the motel lobby where the seven-hour siege ended.

The middle-aged man was carried out on a stretcher to a waiting ambulance. He was semiconscious and half-smiling.

A local doctor had entered the motel earlier. Several bottles of injectable Valium, a tranquilizer, and some syringes could be seen on a table in the lobby.

"The doctor sedated him and I got the gun away from him," said Federal Drug Enforcement Agent Louis Dracoulis.

OFFICIALS said they expected charges to be prepared today. The man's name was not released.

The drama began just before noon Saturday when Border Patrol Officer Cecilio Ruiz was shot by a man dressed as a priest.

Ruiz, 31, had stopped a car at a checkpoint near Sarita, nearly 100 miles from the Mexican border.

Ruiz said he was shot in the hip and shoulder after he opened the trunk of the man's car and found marijuana. The gunman fled in Ruiz's car.

Law enforcement officials gave this account of what happened next:

The gunman used the patrol car's flashing lights to stop a car in which three women were returning from a South Texas vacation. He took over their car and forced one of the women to drive. Police gave chase.

The gunman ordered the woman driver to stop the car north of Sarita. When she did, police shot out three tires on her car.

THE GUNMAN ran to a nearby vehicle and commandeered it at gunpoint.

LBSU students fight Crime on campus

By JAMES M. LEAVY
Staff Writer

"He who enters a university walks on hallowed ground," observed Educator James B. Conant at the Harvard Tercentenary in 1936.

Last week some of that "hallowed ground" at Long Beach State University was judged to be so dangerous that students voted to spend more than $16,000 to hire and equip 18 monitors to guard a safe path through campus at night.

Student Treasurer Christopher Loomis, a 26-year-old marketing senior, sold the board of control and the Senate on financing the Student Protection Monitor Service. He calls it a "cost effective" way of providing security on campus at night.

He says monitors will carry citizens band radios for communication with each other and with campus police officers. Supervisors will be paid $3 and monitors $2.60 an hour. They will wear bright orange helmets and vests and each will carry a flashlight and a whistle. Two thousand whistles will be given away to advertise the system. It begins Feb. 28 and extends through final examinations in May.

Loomis expects the specially designated nighttime walkway will reduce the increasing number of assaults on women, theft from autos and buildings and other crimes committed on campus.

College women are aware of the growing record of violence against women here and on campuses throughout the nation.

Last year Long Beach State University student was accosted on campus and raped. They were outraged when her assailant, Redondo Beach accountant Ken W. Scholl, received a sentence of only 30 weekends in the county jail after he was convicted of the crime. More than 250 men and women marched on the county courthouse last fall to protest the sentence imposed by Superior Court Judge Charles Litwin.

The rape and reaction to the sentencing increased fear and awareness of the danger on campus. There were, according to campus police, four attempted rapes on campus last year. Marcie Jenner, chairman of the Campus Women's Commission which operates a rape hotline, says there were 10 unreported rapes involving LBSU women last year.

A CRY FOR BETTER lighting, an alarm system and more police patrols went up on the campus at nearby Dominguez Hills State College in Oct. 1975 after a woman member of the faculty was raped while working in her office at the library building at 7:30 a.m.

At UCLA rising consciousness of the danger of mugging, robbery and rape prompts about 30 women each evening to make use of an all-night escort service. Husky males have been hired to walk women to dorms and parking lots.

There are 16 emergency phones, painted yellow and spotted throughout the campus at LBSU. They tie directly to the campus police communications center and students are told about them in the campus newspaper.

The Long Beach campus is patrolled by 16 armed officers who are trained members of the California Highway Patrol.

"This is not a sanctuary," Jack R. Brick, director of public safety says. He is the chief security officer for what he describes as a "city of 37,000 students and faculty."

More than half of the students are women, most of them young. About a third of those who teach and take courses are on campus at night.

Brick says the 320-acre campus is open. A person has as much legal right to be there as he has on Pine Avenue.

Officers cannot remove an outsider without some evidence that he is committing a crime. Yet, according to Brick, 95 per cent of the crime on campus is committed by nonstudents.

Brick says the majority of crimes occur at night and his department has less communication with nighttime students, many of whom have no other contact with the school and do not even read the student newspaper.

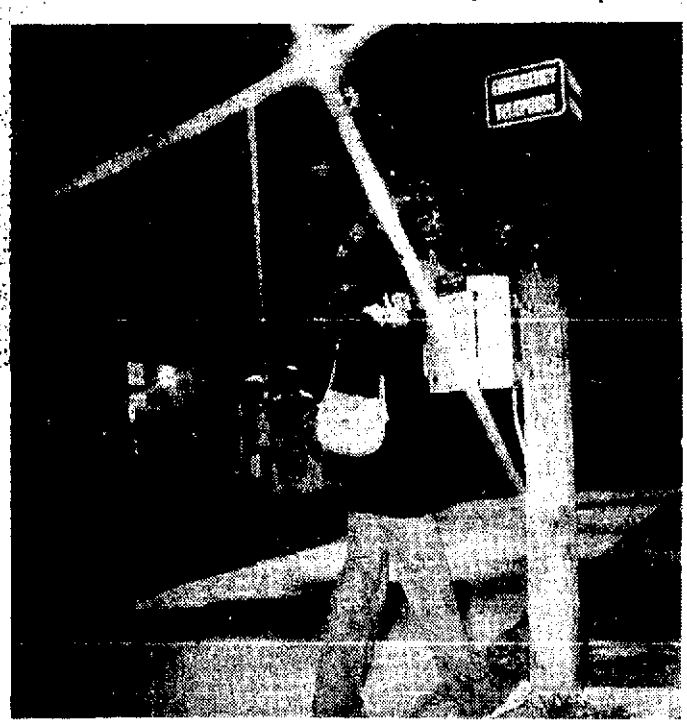

Darkness transforms the pleasantly landscaped campus into an ideal hunting ground for anyone who would stalk and assault a woman. And the parking lots on the edge of the complex force students to walk great distances from classrooms to autos.

Despite this, a tram which carried students from cars to classes at night was discontinued. Brick says is was operated from 4 p.m. until 10:30 p.m., four nights a week until a 9-week survey revealed that only 52 persons used it. Brick says that on many nights no one rode it at all.

THE CAMPUS POLICE are busy, if their reporting procedures are accurate. They answered an astounding 109,000 calls last year. Complaints, mostly initiated by students, ranged from cries for help to reports of burglaries and thefts and fire and burglar alarms.

It's tradition! 'Fiddler's' back at CLO

By JEAN SANDERS
Staff Writer

"Some years ago I saw 'Fiddler on the Roof' at the Music Center, way up in the balcony. I heard grandmothers turning to their grandchildren and say, 'That's how it was.'"

Gary Gordon didn't know then that he himself would play the role of Tevye, the poor milkman conversant with God, at least 130 times in the years that followed.

Still solidly built, Gordon is 20 pounds lighter than when he played 'Fiddler's' male lead in the 1972 Long Beach Civic Light Opera production.

He has had time to mellow and to think about the struggling Jewish family in Czarist Russia.

"I can't play Tevye without appreciating how it must have been to have lived in a time when life was so oppressed. It's hard to imagine, living comfortably as we do today.

"My own roots go back to Russia. Both my grandmothers were Russian Jews. One of them said to me when she saw the show in '72, 'It's like turning back the clock 70 years.'

"In a way, 'Fiddler on the Roof' reminds me of 'Roots.' People are interested in their heritage. 'Fiddler' tells about life in a tiny Jewish village in Russia. In the end, they are forced to leave. It has universal appeal — the triumphs and failures of the 'little man,' the coping with life in adversity."

THIS IS THE fifth time Gordon has played Tevye. Previous performances were in Orange County, except for the local presentation in '72. He works hard to keep the role fresh.

"It's new each time I do it. I keep finding new things about Tevye. The more I do it, the more sensitive I feel about people around me in everyday life. I get tears in my eyes when I stop and think of what we do have here."

Gordon has seen Tevye performances by other actors. He has seen the motion picture, which he thought took the humor out of Tevye.

LBSU students fight Crime on campus

By JAMES M. LEAVY
Staff Writer

"He who enters a university walks on hallowed ground," observed Educator James B. Conant at the Harvard Tercentenary in 1936.

Last week some of that "hallowed ground" at Long Beach State University was judged to be so dangerous that students voted to spend more than $16,000 to hire and equip 18 monitors to guard a safe path through campus at night.

Student Treasurer Christopher Loomis, a 26-year-old marketing senior, sold the board of control and the Senate on financing the Student Protection Monitor Service. He calls it a "cost effective" way of providing security on campus at night.

He says monitors will carry citizens band radios for communication with each other and with campus police officers. Supervisors will be paid $3 and monitors $2.60 an hour. They will wear bright orange helmets and vests and each will carry a flashlight and a whistle. Two thousand whistles will be given away to advertise the system. It begins Feb. 28 and extends through final examinations in May.

Loomis expects the specially designated nighttime walkway will reduce the increasing number of assaults on women, theft from autos and buildings and other crimes committed on campus.

College women are aware of the growing record of violence against women here and on campuses throughout the nation.

Last year Long Beach State University student was accosted on campus and raped. They were outraged when her assailant, Redondo Beach accountant Ken W. Scholl, received a sentence of only 30 weekends in the county jail after he was convicted of the crime. More than 250 men and women marched on the county courthouse last fall to protest the sentence imposed by Superior Court Judge Charles Litwin.

The rape and reaction to the sentencing increased fear and awareness of the danger on campus. There were, according to campus police, four attempted rapes on campus last year. Marcie Jenner, chairman of the Campus Women's Commission which operates a rape hotline, says there were 10 unreported rapes involving LBSU women last year.

A CRY FOR BETTER lighting, an alarm system and more police patrols went up on the campus at nearby Dominguez Hills State College in Oct. 1975 after a woman member of the faculty was raped while working in her office at the library building at 7:30 a.m.

At UCLA rising consciousness of the danger of mugging, robbery and rape prompts about 30 women each evening to make use of an all-night escort service. Husky males have been hired to walk women to dorms and parking lots.

There are 16 emergency phones, painted yellow and spotted throughout the campus at LBSU. They tie directly to the campus police communications center and students are told about them in the campus newspaper.

The Long Beach campus is patrolled by 16 armed officers who are trained members of the California Highway Patrol.

"This is not a sanctuary," Jack R. Brick, director of public safety says. He is the chief security officer for what he describes as a "city of 37,000 students and faculty."

More than half of the students are women, most of them young. About a third of those who teach and take courses are on campus at night.

Brick says the 320-acre campus is open. A person has as much legal right to be there as he has on Pine Avenue.

Officers cannot remove an outsider without some evidence that he is committing a crime. Yet, according to Brick, 95 per cent of the crime on campus is committed by nonstudents.

Brick says the majority of crimes occur at night and his department has less communication with nighttime students, many of whom have no other contact with the school and do not even read the student newspaper.

Darkness transforms the pleasantly landscaped campus into an ideal hunting ground for anyone who would stalk and assault a woman. And the parking lots on the edge of the complex force students to walk great distances from classrooms to autos.

Despite this, a tram which carried students from cars to classes at night was discontinued. Brick says is was operated from 4 p.m. until 10:30 p.m., four nights a week until a 9-week survey revealed that only 52 persons used it. Brick says that on many nights no one rode it at all.

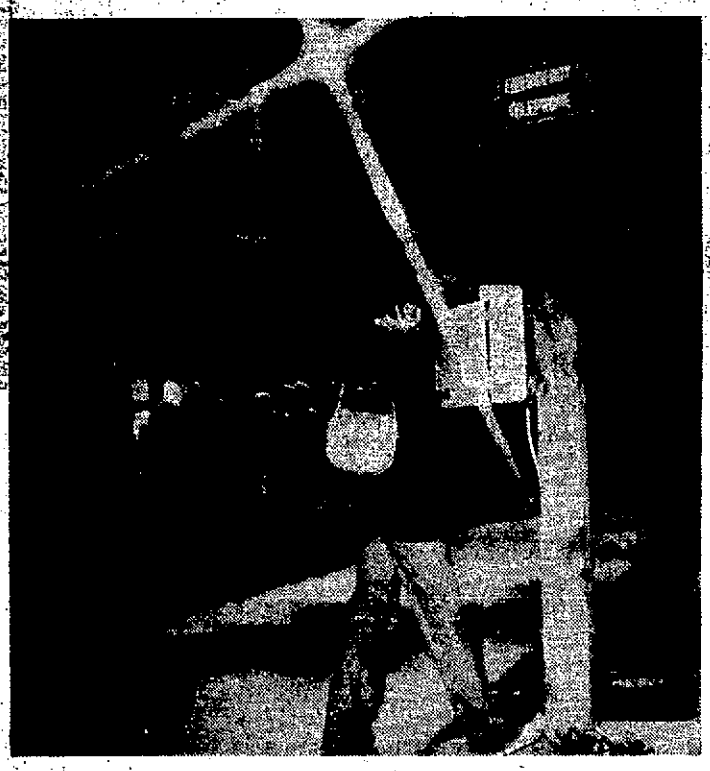

THE CAMPUS POLICE are busy, if their reporting procedures are accurate. They answered an astounding 109,000 calls last year. Complaints, mostly initiated by students, ranged from cries for help to reports of burglaries and thefts and fire and burglar alarms.

It's tradition! 'Fiddler's' back at CLO

By JEAN SANDERS
Staff Writer

"Some years ago I saw 'Fiddler on the Roof' at the Music Center, way up in the balcony. I heard grandmothers turning to their grandchildren and say, 'That's how it was.'"

Gary Gordon didn't know then that he himself would play the role of Tevye, the poor milkman conversant with God, at least 130 times in the years that followed.

Still solidly built, Gordon is 20 pounds lighter than when he played 'Fiddler's' male lead in the 1972 Long Beach Civic Light Opera production.

He has had time to mellow and to think about the struggling Jewish family in Czarist Russia.

"I can't play Tevye without appreciating how it must have been to have lived in a time when life was so oppressed. It's hard to imagine, living comfortably as we do today.

"My own roots go back to Russia. Both my grandmothers were Russian Jews. One of them said to me when she saw the show in '72, 'It's like turning back the clock 70 years.'

"In a way, 'Fiddler on the Roof' reminds me of 'Roots.' People are interested in their heritage. 'Fiddler' tells about life in a tiny Jewish village in Russia. In the end, they are forced to leave. It has universal appeal — the triumphs and failures of the 'little man,' the coping with life in adversity."

THIS IS THE fifth time Gordon has played Tevye. Previous performances were in Orange County, except for the local presentation in '72. He works hard to keep the role fresh.

"It's new each time I do it. I keep finding new things about Tevye. The more I do it, the more sensitive I feel about people around me in everyday life. I get tears in my eyes when I stop and think of what we do have here."

Gordon has seen Tevye performances by other actors. He has seen the motion picture, which he thought took the humor out of Tevye.

Glad you asked that!

Q: I was first impressed with Paul Burke's acting when he played with Horace McMahon in the "Naked City" series, still my favorite detective show. Burke was also magnificent in his other series, "12 O'Clock High" — as he is believable in his commercials. Was his father an actor too? — Mrs. Melanie Doran, Seattle.

A: "No," Paul grinned when we asked about his dad, "father wasn't an actor. He owned and ran a string of clubs (I guess they called them saloons in those days) in Louisiana. I was raised on Voodoo with Irish superstitions. I can still remember that burials had to be above the ground in old New Orleans and sometimes you'd see 'For Rent' signs on a few of the vaults. It would be interesting if you could get Mayor Moon Landrieu to determine if this custom still prevails."

In checking with Mayor Landrieu we received this reponse: "Needless to say, it's a subject that fascinates many people and our historic cemeteries are among the major tourist attractions in the city.

"There is no law I know of that requires above-ground burial. It is a custom that evolved here due to the high water table. New Orleans was quite swampy at one time and attempts at underground burial often resulted in bizarre consequences ... supposedly coffins would occasionally surface, which was neither pleasant nor healthy. Thus, the above-ground vaults came into being and are still used to this day.

"The great majority are privately owned and are located in cemeteries run either by the city or by the archdiocese of New Orleans. Titles to the vaults may be passed down through a family for generations.

"The cemeteries administrator for the city of New Orleans says he knows of no instances where owners have rented out their vaults. The director of the archdiocesan cemeteries says that their rules and regulations specifically prohibit such a practice. However, the archdiocese does have title to some of the tombs on its property, and it will, in case of an emergency, temporarily rent one out with the understanding that the casket must be removed to a private vault within a specified period.

Q: Marty Allen looks so much like George Savalas, I wonder — are they related? — A. Terrance, Youngstown, Ohio.

A: No. But George (Detective Stavros on "Kojak") and Marty are such look-alikes, many fans ask that same question. Chatting with Marty after he did his act in a Las Vegas hotel, a femme fan embraced the comedian and said: "I love you on your brother's show. I couldn't believe you could dance that well!"

Marty said thanks, and not wishing to disappoint the gal, gave her an autograph signed, "Sincerely, Stavros Allen Savalas."

Q. Is there anything to the rumor that Rod McKuen has a son? — Lee Atkins, pittsburgh.

A: Yes. Though the multi-talented McKuen is a notorious loner and unmarried, he told us: "I have a young son. He's living in France with his mother. I see him as much as I can, but it's not enough. He's really super and I miss him a lot."

Q: Until I met John Wayne at a banquet wearing a Jewish six-pointed star dangling from a gold chain on his neck I thought he was Catholic. Isn't he? — T. Ryan, Phoenix, Ariz.

A: "I was born Catholic," he says. "My parents saw to it that I was spoon-fed my catechism as a boy, but I've grown away from the actual dogma somewhat. However, I haven't grown away from the uplifting faith, just pulled away from the entangling religion. I guess you could say I'm a cardiac Catholic.

"About that star," Wayne further explained "one of my real best friends in the world is a Jew. And he said to me after my bout with that cancer thing: 'Duke, if your time comes I want you to be ready just in case you're going to have to slip in the back door.' I figure he had a good point, so I've worn his present ever since he gave it to me."

ACTOR Paul Burke — remembers childhood in Louisiana.

POET-composer Rod McKuen — the loner has a son out-of-wedlock whom he visits whenever time permits.

Looks kindly on Hollywood's latest offerings

The movie business, at the moment, is having a January white sale.

All sorts of bargains are popping up to replace the bombs they dropped on us during the Christmas season. Just when it was beginning to look like Hiroshima, a fresh new landscape looms, with new movies on every marquee:

"The Cassandra Crossing" is for folks who like their earthquakes, sinking ships, hurricanes and burning buildings with a star in every frame. This celestially overcrowded disaster epic features not one holocaust, but two.

The Cassandra Crossing is the name of a condemned bridge in Poland that hasn't been used since World War II. Now there's a big, shiny transcontinental express train traveling from Geneva to Stockholm with 1,000 passengers aboard who all look suspiciously like movie actors.

Before the train left Geneva, some terrorists broke into the headquarters of the International Health Organization and accidentally knocked over some glass bottles containing cultures of bubonic plague bacteria. One got away and is now on board the train, drooling in the rice and breathing on children, nuns and Sophia Loren.

Because of the contagious disease, no country will allow the train to stop or unload on its territory, so the unsuspecting passengers must be rerouted to a quarantine center near Warsaw, forcing the speeding train to cross this frail, abandoned bridge that is not equipped to stand the weight.

THERE'S Richard Harris, straining the credibility gap as a neurosurgeon; voluptuous Sophia Loren, as his journalist wife who has written an expose novel about him that threatens to be a scandalous bestseller; Ava Gardner, looking both ravaged and ravishing, as an Auntie Mame-style wisecracking wife of a German arms millionaire; Martin Sheen, as her gigolo, who is using her to smuggle heroin across the border; Lee Strasberg, as a desperate old survivor of the concentration camps who cannot enter Poland without arrest; and O. J. Simpson as a narcotics cop disguised as a priest.

Back at the health organization in Geneva, Burt Lancaster is the ruthless and unscrupulous health official who could save them all, but won't even try. Ingrid Thulin is the doctor who watches the terror and hysteria accelerate while the minutes tick away toward disaster.

This all-star adventure saga packs more excitement into a single scene than most movies even attempt. Greek director George Pan Cosmatos has a keen eye for detail and keeps the action moving at a brisker pace than usual.

Except for Richard Harris, who wears more make-up than Sophia Loren and looks like a white zombie, the acting is quite serviceable. With plague and monsoon crashes and sick pets and children wandering into the line of machinegun fire and that fatal bridge looming ahead, you'll get your money's worth.

ART CARNEY and Lily Tomlin, two veteran comics from TV, have teamed up for "The Late Show," so wouldn't you quite naturally expect a comedy? Well, don't.

What little humor they squeeze out of this lame little film is mild, not wild. And whatever it is that makes the film diverting derives from characterization rather than the usual elements of good filmmaking, such as plot, dialogue, style, tempo, structure and action.

It's labeled a "romantic comedy thriller," whatever that means, but under any name it's a curiously uneven oddity.

Carney plays an aging private detective who limps, has a bleeding ulcer and lies around a rented room reading cheap paperbacks of the Mickey Spillane genre like "Naked Girls and Machine Guns." While attempting to find the killer of an old partner, he gets saddled with a cuckoo-brain Hollywood drifter, played with lip-smacking lunacy by Lily Tomlin.

She owes a guy $500, so he stole her cat Winston, and now he says he'll strangle Winston if she doesn't cough up the money. She offers Carney $25 to find the catnapper, and in the process the two cases merge, plunging them both into a vortex of sex and homicide as baffling as something Dashiell Hammett might turn out in his sleep after a dinner of enchiladas and pistachio sundaes.

"THE LATE Show" wanders off course and sometimes just drops dead from exhaustion and lack of substance, but there is always the charm that comes from watching Carney and Tomlin make the most of their mismatched predicament by stealing scenes from each other.

Lily Tomlin can't really act. She has no visible technique to fall back on when the going gets tough, and her craft is still in the diaper stage of career evolution. But she whines and drones in her sad comic voice until some sort of character is established, then she coasts on easy naturalism.

Carney, on the other hand, goes right for the heart of his character, establishing instant identification with a bum leg, a pot belly and a hearing aid.

With these meager props, they somehow manage the impossible feat of becoming real, instead of cardboard, fruitcakes, and "The Late Show" assumes, with their aid, a sweetness all its own. Not a great movie, but pleasantly unusual.

"FUN WITH Dick and Jane" is a wickedly amoral comedy about the disintegration of the American middle class, focusing on one all-American couple who decide to do something about it.

The opening credits, as well as the title, derive from those dog-eared childhood Dick and Jane books we all devoured as gospel, swallowing rose-tinted litany about the American Dream ("See Dick run," "See Jane happy!"). Well, Dick and Jane grew up to be George Segal and Jane Fonda.

Dick has a job as a space engineer, Jane is a perfect wife who makes a perfect meat loaf, and everything comes true just like in the movies. Almost.

Dick gets fired because aerospace dynamics is suddenly classified as a "depressed industry" (even Jane's father, a starchy, conservative old Emersonian, pompously informs her he sold his own aerospace stock the day we landed on the moon). Up to now, "making economies" has only meant dropping the Book of the Month Club.

Abruptly, with everything mortgaged, Dick and Jane find themselves with no assets, no income and an eternity of debts. It's an inequitable situation that forces him to investigate the world of food stamps, loan sharks and unemployment insurance, and catapults her into the position of breadwinner — a job for which her fancy degrees and educated opinions leave her staggeringly unqualified.

Dick and Jane decide the only way to beat the system that produced them is to turn to the most logically lucrative means of amassing the kind of income they've come to expect. They pool their talents, resources, intelligence and sophisticated wit, and become the Bonnie and Clyde of suburbia.

The public cheers. By the time they hit the phone company, the complaint line is even holding the door for their escape.

Dick and Jane not only get away with the loot, but end up heroes. I'm not sure I approve of the message, but I was captivated by the bright, capricious way this deft and charming pair of crooks deliver it.

MOVIE GOERS get fair share of stars in "The Cassandra Crossing," a film centered around a train that is racing across Europe with passengers who have been exposed to a deadly bacillus. A smattering of those whose names appear on the marquee are, from left, Ava Gardner, Martin Sheen, Sophia Loren and Richard Harris.

Glad you asked that!

At that moment

aftermath

Sam and Mary Nocella of Philadelphia are combining work and pleasure abroad. After years as a news photographer Sam is a free lance and they are touring Yugoslavia and Greece taking travel pictures Sam will sell when they return home.

They arrive in Skopje, Yugoslavia, Thursday, July 25, 1963. It is about 8 p.m. The night clerk at the Hotel Macedonia shrugs hopelessly and tells them there is no room. He points the way to the Jordan Hotel down the street. Tired and lugging suitcases and camera equipment, the Nocellas find a vacancy there. They have dinner and by midnight are asleep.

They awake with a shock. There is what seems a roaring explosion. The walls are swaying, and the chandelier is doing a crazy dance on the ceiling. Their thermos of water falls from the night table and shatters. By the time they reach the door they realize in teror that it is no explosion. Earthquake. The key won't turn. Plaster is falling all around them. Finally Sam manages to get the door open.

Mary rushes downstairs in her pajamas. Sam stops long enough to pull on a pair of pants and grab his camera. In the square, in the early morning light, the air is full with a mist of mortar as dense as smog. Dust still rises from a mound of debris — and, terribly, voices rise from it too. It was, minutes before, an apartment house, home for 30 families. While the Nocellas stand there among the dazed and screaming, two survivors are pulled from the tomb of brick and rock, an old man and a baby. The earth tremors have stopped now. Sam is aiming his camera everywhere, but he stops as an anguished father approaches, still in his night clothes and barefoot, his dying baby in his arms.

Down the street the Nocellas find the Hotel Macedonia. There is nothing left but litter. Two hundred and sixty sleeping guests perished in the wreckage of the four story building. Mary suddenly remembers the night clerk. "He saved our lives," she says.

It takes days to clear the debris in this Macedonian city of 270,000 people. In the end, the dead number 1,100; the injured and homeless are in the thousands.

Give voice to gratitude

dr. walt menninger

I was relaxing at home watching television when the phone rang. It was long distance, and the caller introduced herself as a native of Seattle who had just seen my column on "Thank You, the Magic Words" in the Seattle Times.

She called to thank me. And she shared her experience of finding people so much more responsive when they are approached positively and thanked in advance. Instead of telling people to do things for her, she asks them if they might do something when they have the time.

She has discovered that invariably they are more likely to respond to her request sooner when phrased that way and thanked in advance. And she finds people are especially appreciative of being thanked when they are not expecting it.

Nevertheless, thank you is an important message to give people who do something for you. It is "feedback" which rankles when it is not given. Witness another response to that same column:

DEAR DR. Menninger,

Thank you for your wonderful "thank you" column. The article was beautiful. It brought out so many interesting points.

I am a square, conservative, stubborn jackass and also a Jewish mother. I say damn well what I think but I don't like to hurt people. I say what I please because I have nothing to lose.

I know I raised my daughter to say "thank you," but last summer I wondered. I sent her a large check for some birthday gifts for her, her husband and their son.

About a month later, I called her. We were having a great chat when she said she got the check. And that was it! She did not say thank you, or thanks for the check, or thanks for thinking of us. She didn't say a damn thing. I didn't like that and I told her so.

Yet it happened again. A few months ago, I again sent her something so that she and her husband might have a night out. She wrote me and told me all about their night out. But again, no thank you.

We were raised in childhood to say, "Thank you." A person does expect a thank you, and when you don't get it, it's disappointing.

Thank you, sincerely. — Mrs. N. B., Des Moines.

DEAR DR. Menninger,

With regard to your column on the death penalty, why not consider another alternative? The federal and state governments could design productive work programs for all prisoners which would produce income.

Part of this income could be used to defray the cost of prisons and part should go into national and state funds to aid victims of crime.

Crimes against individuals cause endless economic problems and the best penalty for any criminal is for him to restore that which he has taken. Of course, a life extinguished cannot be returned; but money can aid victims to overcome the hardships of crimes they have suffered.— R.E., New Orleans.

Note — In nearly all federal and most state prisons, there are some prison industries which make products for use by governmental agencies — furniture, clothing, auto tags, etc. By law, products made by prison labor are not to compete with products of labor in the private sector.

While there has been a good deal of discussion of proposals for compensation of victims of crimes, only in recent years has there been serious consideration by some legislatures of those proposals.

Sam and Mary Nocella of Philadelphia are combining work and pleasure abroad. After years as a news photographer Sam is a free lance and they are touring Yugoslavia and Greece taking travel pictures Sam will sell when they return home.

They arrive in Skopje, Yugoslavia, Thursday, July 25, 1963. It is about 8 p.m. The night clerk at the Hotel Macedonia shrugs hopelessly and tells them there is no room. He points the way to the Jordan Hotel down the street. Tired and lugging suitcases and camera equipment, the Nocellas find a vacancy there. They have dinner and by midnight are asleep.

They awake with a shock. There is what seems a roaring explosion. The walls are swaying, and the chandelier is doing a crazy dance on the ceiling. Their thermos of water falls from the night table and shatters. By the time they reach the door they realize in teror that it is no explosion. Earthquake. The key won't turn. Plaster is falling all around them. Finally Sam manages to get the door open.

Mary rushes downstairs in her pajamas. Sam stops long enough to pull on a pair of pants and grab his camera. In the square, in the early morning light, the air is full with a mist of mortar as dense as smog. Dust still rises from a mound of debris — and, terribly, voices rise from it too. It was, minutes before, an apartment house, home for 30 families. While the Nocellas stand there among the dazed and screaming, two survivors are pulled from the tomb of brick and rock, an old man and a baby. The earth tremors have stopped now. Sam is aiming his camera everywhere, but he stops as an anguished father approaches, still in his night clothes and barefoot, his dying baby in his arms.

Everyone drove to Palm Springs to see a Ford

carolyn mcdowell

DID YOU NOTICE how quiet it was around town last weekend?

Half the population was in Palm Springs for the 18th annual Bob Hope Desert Classic golf tournament.

And EVERYONE was in former President Jerry Ford's gallery. I'm told it was difficult to tell the Secret Service men from the players but no one could mistake Bob Hope and the Great One, Jackie Gleason.

Among Great Long Beach Amateurs were Ed Twining and Dean Eastman. I'm sure there were more but my spies were so busy racing from the Ford gallery to parties that they forgot to take notes.

Patti Twining and Betty Eastman followed their husbands on the celebrity course.

I'm more than a little confused but I know that Bob and Joyce Carter houseguested with the Twinings.

I also know that Norma and Burt Marter and their houseguests, Dave and Dorothy Main, had a cocktail party for 80 with the gals doing all of the gourmet cooking.

Likewise Shirley Gillis and Kay Nesbitt who cooked for 60 friends with an assist from respective husbands, Bill and Bill.

I am absolutely positive that Keith and Beth Utterback gave a farewell party to their old desert home. They have bought a new home in Rancho Las Palmas.

Keith and Beth managed to squeeze in 35 guests among the packing boxes for a cocktail buffet. Their houseguests were Paul and Jeanne Williamson.

JB and Mary Lou Dixon and Herb and Peggy Gifford were hosted by Pat and Connie DeRosa.

Bob and Bev Ray invited George and Shirley Green and Harold and Yvonne Hall for the weekend.

Some of the Long Beachers ran into former Long Beachers, Wayne and Joan Sharp, now desert dwellers.

Faces in the galleries belonged to such as Lee and Shirley Caldwell, Bill and Fran Chastain, John and Kay Roggeveen, Chris and Deenie Conway, Don and Bette Barden, Dean and Willa Gilmore and Hal and Pat Horrocks.

Others rushing from the greens to parties were Doug and Lois Benwell newlyweds Jim and Jeannie Baxes, Carl and Mary Brooks, Bob Leebrick, Betty Asher, Bob and Sue Driscoll, with their houseguests, Lyman and Nancy Lough.

Aso Bruce and Charlotte Mitchell, Dr. Dave Gean, Joyce Dale, Jim and Marylyn Thurmond, John and Shirley McCune and Reg and Mary Barden, Glen and Dottie Copeland and the Mastersons, Mel and Middie and Norm and Iola.

A DIFFERENT desert for Ken and Shelley Golden.

They took in the nightspots (and Shelley took in the jackpots) in Las Vegas.

Then they hurried home in time to attend a United Jewish Appeal fund raising dinner at the Anaheim Hyatt House.

Guest of honor was Maj. Gen. Avram Orly of the Israeli Army who was one of the planners of the raid on Entebbe.

WHILE WE are on the subject, Pacesetter Division of the United Jewish Welfare Fund (Women's Division) gathered at the home of Sylvia Coonen for luncheon, cards and a guest speaker, Than Wyenn, who played a role in the TV movie Victory At Entebbe.

Hostesses for the Valentine themed party were Reva Alban, Blanche Amos, Muriel Baldwin, Shirley Freedland, Ethel Lessin, Kate Neuberger and Tess Wohlstatter.

Chairmen (that's what they said) of the Women's Division are Gerda Seifer and Barbara Shoag.

THE EBELL CLUB of Long Beach also had a Valentine party.

Guests of honor were members who are at least 80 years old. There were 47 "Valentines" honored, the eldest was 83. They were presented with red carnations. The group traveled to Russia via the imagination of Dr. Wendell Miller, minister emeritus of the Manhattan Beach Community Church. His illustrated lecture was titled "Potpourri of Russia."

VALENTINE weekend was a good time to get married.

So Vivian Wright Seabridge and Frank Braunlich did just that.

The Rev. William Miedema officiated at the ceremony in El Dorado Park Community Church with immediate family and close friends attending.

A reception dinner followed at the Newporter Inn in Newport Beach.

The couple is at home in Rossmoor.

Women are asking...

"I'm shy and find it hard to communicate. Any tips for a conversational drop-out?"

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

How do you greet the people? What's your attitude when you enter a room — is it self-agonizing or self-assured? Are you afraid they won't like you, you'll say something "dumb" or is it a friendly approach. "Hi, new buddy, what's going on?"

Today, most young people no longer shake hands. They seem to appraise one another, and the "vibes" they get sets the scene. With many of them, it isn't one's status, clothes or economic worth, it's a more loving and caring attitude.

Perhaps, that's why they're familiar, "Have a nice day" and "Hang in there!" phrases are so appealing.

Observers say, "To be accepted by the new generation, one enters more with a smile, a pocketful of expectations of making friends, and relating to their world of sharing. Usually, they are more interested in 'discovering' — why a plant blooms better in one soil than another, who'll help them clean their van, or communicating with one another on their CB radios.

The younger generation's big brothers and sisters seem to follow a middle-of-the-road approach. When they enter a room, they do offer their hand and do look you straight in the eye; however, their attitude and conversation has become more nonchalant. They don't press a point so hard, nor try to impress so much. Instead, they sprinkle their conversation with questions pertaining to the other person.

The latter, some psychologists say, is an ideal way for the shy person to enter into a discussion. As they explain, "If you're too tongue-tied to carry on a dialogue, then ask someone about a new restaurant, directions to a well-known place of interest, or simply compliment them on their clothing and inquire about it. "Most persons," confide the experts, "love to be considered authorities."

So the next time you enter a room, come armed with a smile and some questions, you may like the response you get!

Seat belts may save child's life

Many youngsters are needlessly killed or seriously injured in car accidents because their parents neglected to install and use proper seat belts or other restraining devices.

This was discovered after researchers surveyed more than 5,000 automobiles in which children were passengers. Checked were cars in 14 amusement areas and shopping centers in Maryland, Massachusetts and Virginia by teams from the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

More than 90 per cent of passengers less than 10 years old were not restrained, says Allan F. Williams, Ph. D. Eighty-one per cent of passengers 10 or older and 78 per cent of the drivers had not fastened their seat belts.

Investigators found that children under the age of two years were likely to be sitting on someone's lap with no protection at all against a crash. If the adult holding the child is thrown forward, the child could be crushed between the adult and the dashboard, Dr. Williams says.

The report is in the American Journal of Diseases of Children.

Aplastic anemia aid

Lithium carbonate, customarily used to treat a certain psychiatric disorder, may prove useful in some patients suffering aplastic anemia, a frequently fatal blood disorder.

Researchers at Westminster Medical School, London, England, found that the drug stimulates growth of certain white blood cells.

Trials with a couple of patients showed that one experienced a rise in a number of blood components, and there has been no serious bleeding or infection since lithium treatment was begun.

Details appear in the Lancet, a British medical journal.

Allergy symptoms

Some women after hysterectomy may develop allergic symptoms such as asthma

ben zinser

for several days after their surgery, a doctor says.

Dr. Claude A. Frazier, allergist of Asheville, N. C., reports in the Consultant, a medical periodical, that a similar allergic phenomenon sometimes developed in young children six months or so after they underwent a tonsil and adenoid operation.

Relieves depression

A new drug, maprotiline, effectively relieved depression and anxiety in 63 men who had suffered recent heart atcks.

The research was conducted by Dr. A. Selveni in Milan, Italy.

The drug markedly reduced anxiety, the study shows, and produced results comparable to those who received diazepam, a widely known tranquilizer. The big advantage of the new drug is that it improved depression, but depression worsened in those receiving diazepam.

The report is in the Journal of Internal Medicine Research, and a summary appears in Internal Medicine News, a newspaper for physicians.

Golfers' ailment

The weekend golfer who complains of chest pain and pain in the lower rib cage may have unwittingly injured his ribs by missing the golf ball in a vigorous swing.

A Utica, N. Y., pathologist, reporting in the journal Patient Care, says if the golfer hits a divot instead of the ball, certain muscles may twist violently, tearing muscle fiber.

Also, the ribs may wind up being a shock absorber.

The doctor says that if this unrecognized injury is a possibility, a chest X-ray film will help confirm the diagnosis.

A word on Laetrile

Now that Laetrile, the so-called anticancer drug, has won a victory in one state of the United States, the British Medical Journal has the following to say in an editorial about the anticipated test cases in various state courts:

"The lawyers will become richer, the patients poorer, and the law an ass."

The Formula

Sink disposers sparkle

By DR. NORMAN STARK

You can buy a number of different brands of cleaner for sink disposers — all at fancy prices. Or you can make this simple concoction that works very well, at a fraction of the cost.

Mix one cup of VINEGAR in a sufficient amount of water to fill an ice cube tray. Freeze the mixture. Now start your disposer and feed the cubes into it to be ground. After the grinding action has stopped, flush with COLD water for a minute or so.

The principle here is an interesting one. Many fats, such as butter, for example, are semi-solid at room temperature and in this state will cling to surfaces. The cold temperature of the ice tends to solidify the fats, and permits the vinegar and abrasion of the ground ice to remove the fat deposits.

The cost of making your own sink disposer cleaner is approximately three cents per ounce.

To determine your savings, divide the cost of your store-bought brand by the number of ounces it contains. Then compare the per-ounce cost — you'll be surprised at how much you can save for so little effort.

Note: Material costs are based on the prices at retail outlets of national drug, grocery and hardware chains. These costs will vary, depending on the geographic area. If you wish to make up a larger quantity — and save even more — buy your materials at a chemical supply company (see the Yellow Pages).

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

WHILE WE are on the subject, Pacesetter Division of the United Jewish Welfare Fund (Women's Division) gathered at the home of Sylvia Coonen for luncheon, cards and a guest speaker, Than Wyenn, who played a role in the TV movie Victory At Entebbe.

Hostesses for the Valentine themed party were Reva Alban, Blanche Amos, Muriel Baldwin, Shirley Freedland, Ethel Lessin, Kate Neuberger and Tess Wohlstatter.

Chairmen (that's what they said) of the Women's Division are Gerda Seifer and Barbara Shoag.

THE EBELL CLUB of Long Beach also had a Valentine party.

Guests of honor were members who are at least 80 years old. There were 47 "Valentines" honored, the oldest was 93. They were presented with red carnations. The group traveled to Russia via the imagination of Dr. Wendell Miller, minister emeritus of the Manhattan Beach Community Church. His illustrated lecture was titled "Potpourri of Russia."

VALENTINE weekend was a good time to get married.

So Vivian Wright Seabridge and Frank Braunlich did just that.

The Rev. William Miedema officiated at the ceremony in El Dorado Park Community Church with immediate family and close friends attending.

A reception dinner followed at the Newporter Inn in Newport Beach.

The couple is at home in Rossmoor.

Women are asking...

'I'm shy and find it hard to communicate... Any tips for a conversational drop-out?'

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

How do you greet the people? What's your attitude when you enter a room — is it self-agonizing or self-assured? Are you afraid they won't like you, you'll say something "dumb" or is it a friendly approach. "Hi, new buddy, what's going on?"

Today, most young people no longer shake hands. They seem to appraise one another, and the "vibes" they get sets the scene. With many of them, it isn't one's status, clothes or economic worth, it's a more loving and caring attitude.

Perhaps, that's why they're familiar, "Have a nice day" and "Hang in there!" phrases are so appealing.

Observers say, "To be accepted by the new generation, one enters more with a smile, a pocketful of expectations of making friends, and relating to their world of sharing. Usually, they are more interested in 'discovering' — why a plant blooms better in one soil than another, who'll help them clean their van, or communicating with one another on their CB radios.

The younger generation's big brothers and sisters seem to follow a middle-of-the-road approach. When they enter a room, they do offer their hand and do look you straight in the eye; however, their attitude and conversation has become more nonchalant. They don't press a point so hard, nor try to impress so much. Instead, they sprinkle their conversation with questions pertaining to the other person.

The latter, some psychologists say, is an ideal way for the shy person to enter into a discussion. As they explain, "If you're too tongue-tied to carry on a dialogue, then ask someone about a new restaurant, directions to a well-known place of interest, or simply compliment them on their clothing and inquire about it. "Most persons," confide the experts, "love to be considered authorities."

So the next time you enter a room, come armed with a smile and some questions, you may like the response you get!

Seat belts may save child's life

Many youngsters are needlessly killed or seriously injured in car accidents because their parents neglected to install and use proper seat belts or other restraining devices.

This was discovered after researchers surveyed more than 5,000 automobiles in which children were passengers. Checked were cars in 14 amusement areas and shopping centers in Maryland, Massachusetts and Virginia by teams from the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety.

More than 90 per cent of passengers less than 10 years old were not restrained, says Allan F. Williams, Ph. D. Eighty-one per cent of passengers 10 or older and 78 per cent of the drivers had not fastened their seat belts.

Investigators found that children under the age of two years were likely to be sitting on someone's lap with no protection at all against a crash. If the adult holding the child is thrown forward, the child could be crushed between the adult and the dashboard, Dr. Williams says.

The report is in the American Journal of Diseases of Children.

Aplastic anemia aid

Lithium carbonate, customarily used to treat a certain psychiatric disorder, may prove useful in some patients suffering aplastic anemia, a frequently fatal blood disorder.

Researchers at Westminster Medical School, London, England, found that the drug stimulates growth of certain white blood cells.

Trials with a couple of patients showed that one experienced a rise in a number of blood components, and there has been no serious bleeding or infection since lithium treatment was begun.

Details appear in the Lancet, a British medical journal.

Allergy symptoms

Some women after hysterectomy may develop allergic symptoms such as asthma for several days after their surgery, a doctor says.

ben zinser

Dr. Claude A. Frazier, allergist of Asheville, N. C., reports in the Consultant, a medical periodical, that a similar allergic phenomenon sometimes developed in young children six months or so after they underwent a tonsil and adenoid operation.

Relieves depression

A new drug, maprotiline, effectively relieved depression and anxiety in 63 men who had suffered recent heart ataks.

The research was conducted by Dr. A. Selveni in Milan, Italy.

The drug markedly reduced anxiety, the study shows, and produced results comparable to those who received diazepam, a widely known tranquilizer. The big advantage of the new drug is that it improved depression, but depression worsened in those receiving diazepam.

The report is in the Journal of Internal Medicine Research, and a summary appears in Internal Medicine News, a newspaper for physicians.

Golfers' ailment

The weekend golfer who complains of chest pain and pain in the lower rib cage may have unwittingly injured his ribs by missing the golf ball in a vigorous swing.

A Utica, N. Y., pathologist, reporting in the journal Patient Care, says if the golfer hits a divot instead of the ball, certain muscles may twist violently, tearing muscle fiber.

Also, the ribs may wind up being a shock absorber.

The doctor says that if this unrecognized injury is a possibility, a chest X-ray film will help confirm the diagnosis.

A word on Laetrile

Now that Laetrile, the so-called anti-cancer drug, has won a victory in one state of the United States, the British Medical Journal has the following to say in an editorial about the anticipated test cases in various state courts:

"The lawyers will become richer, the patients poorer, and the law an ass."

The Formula

Sink disposers sparkle

By DR. NORMAN STARK

You can buy a number of different brands of cleaner for sink disposers — all at fancy prices. Or you can make this simple concoction that works very well, at a fraction of the cost.

Mix one cup of VINEGAR in a sufficient amount of water to fill an ice cube tray. Freeze the mixture. Now start your disposer and feed the cubes into it to be ground. After the grinding action has stopped, flush with COLD water for a minute or so.

The principle here is an interesting one. Many fats, such as butter, for example, are semi-solid at room temperature and in this state will cling to surfaces. The cold temperature of the ice tends to solidify the fats, and permits the vinegar and abrasion of the ground ice to remove the fat deposits.

The cost of making your own sink disposer cleaner is approximately three cents per ounce.

To determine your savings, divide the cost of your store-bought brand by the number of ounces it contains. Then compare the per-ounce cost — you'll be surprised at how much you can save for so little effort.

Note: Material costs are based on the prices at retail outlets of national drug, grocery and hardware chains. These costs will vary, depending on the geographic area. If you wish to make up a larger quantity — and save even more — buy your materials at a chemical supply company (see the Yellow Pages).

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

Advice to the Taxlorn

Plenty of time to paint before selling

DEAR MR. SMITH: I have lived in my home for 50 years and I am thinking of selling it soon. I will probably move out in order to make some repairs on the house before selling, as I am allergic to paint. For how long can the house remain unoccupied and be eligible for the $35,000 exclusion? — M. E. H.

Being over 65, you can qualify for the $35,000 once-in-a-lifetime exclusion if you have owned and lived in your residence at least five years (any 60 full months) out of the eight years prior to the date of sale. That would allow up to three years after moving out to repair, rent it out, etc., while you look for a buyer. I assume that you haven't rented it, or left it vacant, during the past five years.

DEAR MR. SMITH: During 1976 I closed two certificate of deposit bank accounts before their maturity date. There was a penalty of over $1,000. How do I show this loss on my federal income tax return? Is there a maximum amount of loss that can be deducted in one year? Does the bank send a form to me? My son died leaving no will. I was his beneficiary. He had a life insurance policy with his labor union. Do I have to show that on my income tax return? The company he worked for had a profit sharing plan and I received $5,000 from it. Do I list that as income?

I had an 80-year-old house is another city. The neighborhood had deteriorated to a high crime area, and thus it was difficult to sell houses there. So I gave it away. For $10 I deeded the house to a relative. The city in 1974 assessed all property at its sale price. The house was listed at $15,000. I have never made a gift report on an income tax return. I understand a person is allowed $30,000 as gifts. —I. A. E.

The 1099 form from your bank should list both the interest income, and the penalty loss. This loss is fully deductible and should be entered on Form 1040, Page 2, Line 41.

The life insurance proceeds are tax-exempt. The $5,000 from the profit sharing fund may also be tax-exempt, since some plans provide a death benefit which qualifies for a $5,000 exclusion. Watch for instructions from the company.

A federal gift tax return (Form 709) was due for the year when you made the gift, if the actual net value was more than $3,000 per person ($6,000 to a married couple). An assessment, mortgage, or other lien against the property would reduce its value. The $30,000 lifetime exclusion ($60,000 for a married couple), which was in effect prior to 1977, presumably would eliminate any tax on the gift. I recommend filing the delinquent gift tax return. Gifts should not be reported on Form 1040.

DEAR MR. SMITH: Would an individual who works for a city for fees be subject to self-employment tax or Social Security? Would auto expense be deductible? —E. F.

When you receive your first check, the absence of any FICA (Social Security) deduction will mean that you are receiving self-employment income. You can deduct business mileage either at 15 cents per mile, etc., or as a percentage of total car expenses. Do not deduct the mileage between home and office, and reduce the total by any reimbursements.

DEAR MR. SMITH: My father owns two farms, one of which he still works. He has several thousand acres, plus range rights. My parents are 76 and 74, and my brothers and I are in our middle 40s. My father has asked me to help in setting up an estate plan. What do you recommend? — J.H.B.

Your parents' wills, deeds, life insurance policies, etc., should be reviewed by a qualified professional. The simple will, whereby a husband leaves everything to his wife outright, can often prove very costly. Annual tax-free gifts usually save big estate taxes later and income taxes currently. If the farms are to remain in the family after your father dies, you may qualify for a lower than usual estate tax valuation.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I became a widower in March, 1976. I have three minor children, ages 8, 12, and 14. What tax deductions, if any, am I entitled to? If my mother, who is 77, and whose only income is a widow's pension, comes from England to reside with me for a considerable part of the year, can I claim her support on my tax? If I should remarry, would it be better to file separate returns or combine them? I have five children whom I totally support. My gross income is $22,000. — F. W. S.

For 1976, you are permitted to file a joint return with your deceased wife, in the same manner as in prior years. There may be other requirements if your wife left an estate. If you remarry, you will then have the choice of filing joint or separate returns, whichever produces a lower total tax. If you do not remarry, you can still use the joint return tax rates (or tax tables) for 1977 and 1978, even though you are not filing a joint return. You can claim your mother as a dependent if, for any year, she is a resident of the United States at least part of the time, and you provide more than 50 per cent of her total support and she does not have $750 gross taxable income. But she is not a "resident" unless she has taken some action to be a permanent resident. A visitor, transient, etc., on a temporary visa, is not a resident.

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice To The Taxlorn," P.O. Box 49081, Tucson, Ariz. 85717, with a self-addressed, stamped envelope, for information that may help you. Your identity will not be disclosed.

Q. "I'm into acquiring old nail files." — Gert, Rutledge, Ill.

A. Those old nail files with sterling silver, silverplated, pearl or wooden handles have resurfaced as choice collectibles. Budget minded collectors, please take note, as many can be acquired for practically pennies.

The attractive handles were frequently embossed with flowers, vines, geometric motifs or other similar Art Nouveau designs. The sterling silver types are considered best, although they often sold for under $1 each around the turn of the century. Some having ebonized wooden handles displayed silver shields or mounts. Other types could be folded into sterling silver or silverplated cases for portable nail-clipping sessions. Value guide: sterling silver handle, Art Nouveau motif, circa 1900, $15.

Q. "Kindly assist me in evaluating my collection of Flow Blue plates." — Harriet, Macon, Mo.

A. Flow Blue wares were produced by numerous potters in the Staffordshire district of England and elsewhere during the 1800s. The patterns, which smudged slightly or ran in the firing, were given specific names, many based on oriental themes. Value guide: Amoy, 7½-inch diameter, $30; Argyle, 8-inch diameter, $25; Fairy Villas, 9-inch diameter, $24; Lorne, 9-inch diameter, $17; Manilla, 7-inch diameter, $31; Normandy, 8½-inch diameter, $30; Mongolia, 10-inch diameter, $20.

Q. "Is our old iron footscraper considered a collectible?" — Mr. and Mrs. G. P., Salinas, Calif.

A. Before paved streets and sidewalks became common, the trusty iron footscraper prevented carpets and floors from being soiled with dirt and mud. These iron oddities could be found stationed near the doorway, inviting those about to enter to stop for scraping chores. They were produced in a variety of shapes, ranging from pleasing to puzzling. The ornamental types are particularly prized. Regardless of the over-all shape, the ever present scraping bar was always in evidence. Dedicated antiquers never walk away from a bargain-priced footscraper. Value guide: iron, scrolled ends, circa 1880, $25.

Q. "Kindly assist me in evaluating my collection of Flow Blue plates." — Harriet, Macon, Mo.

A. Flow Blue wares were produced by numerous potters in the Staffordshire district of England and elsewhere during the 1800s. The patterns, which smudged slightly or ran in the firing, were given specific names, many based on oriental themes. Value guide: Amoy, 7½-inch diameter, $30; Argyle, 8-inch diameter, $25; Fairy Villas, 9-inch diameter, $24; Lorne, 9-inch diameter, $17; Manilla, 7-inch diameter, $31; Normandy, 8½-inch diameter, $30; Mongolia, 10-inch diameter, $20.

Q. "Is our old iron footscraper considered a collectible?" — Mr. and Mrs. G. P., Salinas, Calif.

A. Before paved streets and sidewalks became common, the trusty iron footscraper prevented carpets and floors from being soiled with dirt and mud. These iron oddities could be found stationed near the doorway, inviting those about to enter to stop for scraping chores. They were produced in a variety of shapes, ranging from pleasing to puzzling. The ornamental types are particularly prized. Regardless of the over-all shape, the ever present scraping bar was always in evidence. Dedicated antiquers never walk away from a bargain-priced footscraper. Value guide: iron, scrolled ends, circa 1880, $25.

"We have a number of bottles in the Jim Beam State Series." — Al and Ellen, Langhorne, Pa.

Country pine furniture has maintained a popular niche in American history. And today's decorators find that country-pine accent pieces add an instant touch of antique joy.

We've created six simple-to-build units you can add to your home at a fraction of the retail cost (if you could even find these exclusive designs in stores). And there's that special pride in saying "I made it myself."

The bread box, wall phone cover, stationery box, towel rack, vanity and mirrored planter are all built from standard 12-inch and 34-inch pine available everywhere. Detailed plans and patterns for the six projects include step-by-step photos, instructions and complete materials lists for each item. Build one or build them all.

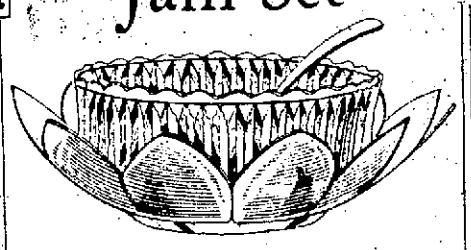

The plan sheet includes a traceable stencil for the bread box lettering and traceable patterns for all decorative cutouts. We've even included details on turning plain hardboard into the phone cover blackboard and modifying the towel rack for paper towels.

Roy Lichtenstein exhibition opens

Twelve years ago ceramist Roy Lichtenstein had a new idea for ceramic sculpture. With collaboration by ceramist Hui Ka Kwong, the two executed 27 pieces. Sixteen were exhibited in New York and private collectors immediately snapped them up.

For the first time, all of the sculptures of female heads and crockery forms, along with molds used in their making, hand painted maquettes and unfinished pieces will be exhibited in the art galleries of Long Beach State University.

Lichtenstein will be present for the opening reception Tuesday from 7 to 9 p.m. in the art galleries. The event is open to the public.

Those first pieces, never before seen by the public, remain a major influence in all of Lichtenstein's subsequent work.

Constance W. Glenn, director of the art gallery, has prepared a catalog in conjunction with the exhibition which covers the artist's related works from 1965 to the present.

An exhibition of 75 photographs documenting the famed Merce Cunningham Dance Company accompanies the Lichtenstein exhibit. Titled "M. C. = 52" it features the company and premier dancers, sets by a range of designers including Andy Warhol, and the artists, musicians and composers who have helped bring recognition to the avantgarde dance group.

Gallery hours are Monday through Friday from noon to 4 p.m., Sunday from 1 to 4 p.m.

WHILE Lichtenstein often works with crockery forms, tea pots are the "in" thing at El Camino College art gallery. Works in the comprehensive exhibit, two years in preparation, use the tea pot form as a point of departure to pursue sculptural and occasionally whimsical directions.

Fourteen artists have prepared 44 exhibits which have been assembled from all over the West. The tea pots may be viewed through March 13.

ART GROUPS: Lakewood Artist Guild will see Judy Jacobson demonstrate landscape painting at its meeting Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Mayfair Park, Clark and South Streets. The artist received her BFA degree from Syracuse University and now teaches at Long Beach State University.

Manuel DeLeon of Cerritos Community College will be juror for Lakewood Artist Guild's annual membership show scheduled next Saturday and Sunday at Lakewood Community Service Center in Mayfair Park.

Winners of the LAG popular vote last month were Virginia Leiser, Kathleen Neal and Dorothy Lawrence.

Southern California Community Artists, Inc., which convenes in Cypress, gave its monthly awards to Kitty Matheny, Theresa Zazzarino, Patsy Morgan, Joy McCannon, Lorraine Brakke, Nancy Risner, Dori Solomon and Sandra Wanamaker.

The SCCA recently named Eileen Kuenn of Cypress its artist-of-the-year while Buena Park Art Guild selected Paul Perrine of Long Beach its artist-of-the-year.

WOMENPOWER: Attracting throngs to the Los Angeles County Museum of Art is its major exhibition, "Women Artists: 1550-1950." In conjunction with the exhibit is a 368-page scholarly book detailing the contribution made by women artists to Western culture during the past 400 years. It was co-authored by Dr. Ann Sutherland Harris, professor of art history at the State University of New York in Albany, and Dr. Linda Nochlin, professor of art history at Vassar College.

But women artists are not limited to the County Museum. Opening Friday at Chapman College in Orange is "Information Exchange," a multi-media exhibit featuring the work of 11 women artists, all members of the Women Artists Information Exchange. Art forms include sculpture, prints, drawings, paintings and installation pieces.

Oil and watercolor paintings by Claire Jones and airbrush paintings by Thelma deGoede Smith are on exhibit through March 5 at Designs Recycled Gallery, 619 N. Harbor Blvd., Fullerton.

Jones is a board member of Watercolor West and Association of Western Artists and is active in San Diego's Watercolor Society, Fine Arts Guild and Art Institute.

Smith has paintings in the permanent collections of Long Beach and Downey Museums of Art. She is a member of the Los Angeles, Laguna Beach and Orange County Art Associations.

Romaine Brooks (1874-1970) is represented in paintings and drawings at Muckenthaler Cultural Center, Fullerton, through March 6, as is Kathy Howe whose specialty is large weavings.

CROCKERY fascinates Roy Lichtenstein. This nine-inch glazed ceramic sculpture is from an Aspen, Colo., private collection.

Oratorio, Haydn group scheduled

"Elijah," the dramatic Mendelssohn oratorio, will be presented by the Long Beach State University Symphony Orchestra and the Forty-Niner Chorus Saturday at 8 p.m. at Los Altos Methodist Church, 5450 E. Willow St.

The lengthy work will be given in a shortened version with all portions vital to the unfolding of the drama left intact. Directors are Hans Lampl and Ed Thompson.

Soloists will be John Noschese, baritone; Cecilia Bringer, soprano; Margaret Michaels, mezzo-soprano, and Marshall Ramirez, tenor.

The story of the Hebrew prophet is embodied by Mendelssohn in a series of dramatic scenes. "Elijah" was composed by Mendelssohn in 1846.

Admission for the public is $2; students, $1. Ticket information is available through the university's fine arts ticket office. Tickets may also be purchased at the door.

THE HAYDN Orchestra, under direction of Alan Parker, will give a concert Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in First United Methodist Church, 148 10th St., Seal Beach.

Flutist Verna Balch will perform the Quantz Concerto in E minor, and harpist Ann Cox will be soloist in Ravel's Introduction and Allegro for harp, flute, clarinet and strings.

The program will close with Beethoven's String Quartet in C minor, Opus 18, No. 4, played by the Ysaye String Quartet.

Admission is $2.

Gordon on Tevye

more in Tevye with each performance. The audience deserves the best of him."

Gordon confesses difficulty in doing the drunk scene with the butcher who seeks his eldest daughter's hand "because I've never been drunk. I'm the one who always drove home after a party."

Tevye was a chauvinist toward Golde, his wife of 25 years, Gordon thinks. "He had no time to think about her. He was too busy trying to make a living. He took her for granted. It's an impersonal relationship until he discovers his daughters are marrying for love and not through a matchmaker, and that's when he asks her shyly, as though the thought had suddenly occurred to him, 'Do you love me?' "

Gordon's favorite scene is not the wishful 'If I Were a Rich Man' as a theatergoer might suspect, but rather the scene later in the musical with Chava, the daughter who wishes to marry out of her faith and become the wife of a Russian.

"He struggles with himself, but simply cannot give his blessing to this daughter," Gordon says. "Yet, the audience knows he has not banished her from his life."

CHILDREN visiting backstage after performances impress this lovable bear of a man. "Their eyes!" he exclaims. "The look on their faces! Many of them tell me, 'I've never met a live actor. I've never seen a live show before.' "

Gordon finds this incredible, since he is so steeped in theater. He was a theater arts major at Los Angeles City College and a music major at Los Angeles State College. He did summer stock at Tustin Playbox and played many Gilbert and Sullivan roles with Los Angeles Savoy Artes.

Making a living in the arts is another question. He moved his family to Sacramento a few years ago when he became grants program manager for the California Arts Commission. It was short lived. To his dismay, he discovered "the job was 1/100th for the arts and 99/100ths politics."

His steady job is sales representative for Lasco, a seafood smoking and curing company. Nighttime and weekends find him involved in the theater.

"I love performing when children are in the audience," he comments. "'Fiddler' is a perfect family musical. There is no foul language and no one is taking off their clothes."

Gordon commutes from his home in Beverly Hills for rehearsals and playing dates. As a matter of fact, so does his wife, known in show business as Diana Monter, who for the fourth time is playing Hodel, one of his daughters.

"DIANA'S THE singer," Gordon observes. "She has a lovely, secure voice. I think of myself as a singing actor. We met when Savoy Artes was doing Gilbert and Sullivan's 'Patience.'

"Our daughter, Jennifer, will be 6 the day we close 'Fiddler.' Until she was born I was unaware that kind of love could exist. The first time I did the show, she was a year old. I used to rock her to sleep singing 'Little Bird, Little Chavala" from the show.

"When she gets older, Jennifer hopes I'll do the show again so she can play Bielke, one of Tevye's younger daughters."

Tenderness in Gordon's eyes turns to a different warmth as he talks of Civic Light Opera.

"We work seven days a week for five weeks to build a clean, sharp, quality production. There is unbelievable warmth and closeness in the cast. I wonder, when the auditorium has empty seats, if Long Beach is aware of the quality of theater here. I think its Civic Light Opera is the finest in the Southland."

TEVYE CONJURES a dream wherein Tzeitel, played by Alyson Reed, becomes the bride of a wretchedly poor tailor, portrayed by Roger Keller. Love, with Tevye's scheming, triumphs again.

From jazz to Waring

If youngsters don't know much about jazz, they will after attending a concert Saturday in Lakewood High School auditorium, Briercrest Avenue and Harvey Way.

Featured in the Long Beach Symphony's "Musical Showcase for Youth" series will be the Seal Beach Elementary School Jazz Band.

The youthful group of 24 musicians are fifth to eighth grade students directed by Chris Johnson and Charles Wackerman. For four years in a row they have won first place in the Reno International Jazz Festival. Additionally, they won first place last year in the Orange Coast College Jazz Festival.

The rousing concert begins at 2 p.m. Tickets are available at the door or reservations may be made through the Long Beach Symphony office, 121 Linden Ave.

RUTHIE Gorton, popular folk singer and song writer from Los Angeles, will give a concert Friday at 8 p.m. at Geneva Presbyterian Church, 2625 E. Third St., as a benefit for the Western Service Workers Association and California Homemakers Association. Long Beach Domestic Worker support group is handling arrangements.

Donation is $2. Tickets are available at Sojourner Book Store, 538 Redondo Ave.

FRED WARING is still around — this is his 61st year in the entertainment field — and he brings his Young Pennsylvanians to Pasadena Civic Auditorium Friday and to the Music Center's Pavilion March 1 at 8:30 p.m.

A tribute to Schoenberg

Described as "a living monument," the Arnold Schoenberg Institute for the study, research and performance of the composer's contribution to 20th century music and culture will open today in ceremonies at 2 p.m. at USC.

Pierre Boulez, music director of the New York Philharmonic and outspoken advocate of "new" music will be the keynote speaker. Honored guests will be two of the world's authorities on Schoenberg, Rudolf Kolisch of Boston, and Prof. H. H. Stuckenschmidt, representing West Berlin, sister city to Los Angeles.

Located in the new School of Performing Arts Center on the USC campus, the institute will house a collection of Schoenberg's works valued at more than $3 million.

OPENING ceremonies will feature performances of Schoenberg works, including the world premiere of "Fanfare on Motifs of Die Gurrelieder" (1945).

Lower level of the building is devoted to study and research and contains the archival workroom, reading room and seminar facility. Inside the entrance of the upper level, the public area, is a replica of Schoenberg's studio in Los Angeles where he worked the last 17 years of his life.

The exhibit and performance hall is the largest public facility of the institute, seating 229 persons for performances and lectures. It was accoustically designed by Gerald Strang, an authority on acoustics and former head of the music department at Long Beach State University.

Featured in the Long Beach Symphony's "Musical Showcase for Youth" series will be the Seal Beach Elementary School Jazz Band.

The youthful group of 24 musicians are fifth to eighth grade students directed by Chris Johnson and Charles Wackerman. For four years in a row they have won first place in the Reno International Jazz Festival. Additionally, they won first place last year in the Orange Coast College Jazz Festival.

The rousing concert begins at 2 p.m. Tickets are available at the door or reservations may be made through the Long Beach Symphony office, 121 Linden Ave.

RUTHIE Gorton, popular folk singer and song writer from Los Angeles, will give a concert Friday at 8 p.m. at Geneva Presbyterian Church, 2625 E. Third St., as a benefit for the Western Service Workers Association and California Homemakers Association. Long Beach Domestic Worker support group is handling arrangements.

Donation is $2. Tickets are available at Sojourner Book Store, 538 Redondo Ave.

FRED WARING is still around — this is his 61st year in the entertainment field — and he brings his Young Pennsylvanians to Pasadena Civic Auditorium Friday and to the Music Center's Pavilion March 1 at 8:30 p.m.

Oratorio, Haydn group scheduled

"Elijah," the dramatic Mendelssohn oratorio, will be presented by the Long Beach State University Symphony Orchestra and the Forty-Niner Chorus Saturday at 8 p.m. at Los Altos Methodist Church, 5650 E. Willow St.

The lengthy work will be given in a shortened version with all portions vital to the unfolding of the drama left intact. Directors are Hans Lampl and Ed Thompson.

Soloists will be John Noschese, baritone; Cecilia Bringer, soprano; Margaret Michaels, mezzo-soprano, and Marshall Ramirez, tenor.

The story of the Hebrew prophet is embodied by Mendelssohn in a series of dramatic scenes. "Elijah" was composed by Mendelssohn in 1846.

Admission for the public is $2; students, $1. Ticket information is available through the university's fine arts ticket office. Tickets may also be purchased at the door.

THE HAYDN Orchestra, under direction of Alan Parker, will give a concert Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in First United Methodist Church, 148 10th St., Seal Beach.

Flutist Verna Balch will perform the Quantz Concerto in E minor, and harpist Ann Cox will be soloist in Ravel's Introduction and Allegro for harp, flute, clarinet and strings.

The program will close with Beethoven's String Quartet in C minor, Opus 18, No. 4, played by the Ysaye String Quartet.

Admission is $2.

A tribute to Schoenberg

Described as "a living monument," the Arnold Schoenberg Institute for the study, research and performance of the composer's contribution to 20th century music and culture will open today in ceremonies at 2 p.m. at USC.

Pierre Boulez, music director of the New York Philharmonic and outspoken advocate of "new" music will be the keynote speaker. Honored guests will be two of the world's authorities on Schoenberg, Rudolf Kolisch of Boston, and Prof. H. H. Stuckenschmidt, representing West Berlin, sister city to Los Angeles.

Located in the new School of Performing Arts Center on the USC campus, the institute will house a collection of Schoenberg's works valued at more than $3 million.

OPENING ceremonies will feature performances of Schoenberg works, including the world premiere of "Fanfare on Motifs of Die Gurrelieder" (1945).

Lower level of the building is devoted to study and research and contains the archival workroom, reading room and seminar facility. Inside the entrance of the upper level, the public area, is a replica of Schoenberg's studio in Los Angeles where he worked the last 17 years of his life.

The exhibit and performance hall is the largest public facility of the institute, seating 229 persons for performances and lectures. It was accoustically designed by Gerald Strang, an authority on acoustics and former head of the music department at Long Beach State University.

Free gifts and cake during celebration

THE PROOF IS IN! The people of the Long Beach-Lakewood area are crazy about broiled seafoods.

The Seafood Broiler restaurant on Candlewood Street just east of Lakewood Boulevard doesn't deep-fry, pan-fry or grill its ocean entrees. It broils them lightly over natural-wood coals on broilers behind glass in the dining room. Those seated nearby can be seen licking their lips with anticipation as they watch those beautiful items being quickly broiled to retain the moisture and tnderness which are the hallmarks of the most luscious seafoods.

Because its prices are so sensible and the food is so skillfully prepared, the Seafood Broiler is immensely popular on weekends. Although it's a large restaurant, with many tables and chairs, there's often a 10 to 15-minute wait during the busiest meal times. Manager Dave Christie suggests that for immediate seating guests should visit the Broiler early on Sunday or on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights. It is open every day from 11 a.m. on, serving dinner all day Sundays and luncheon Mondays through Saturdays, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

This month the Seafood Broiler, owned by Del Allen and Steve Stiefel, is marking its second anniversary. It is the talk of restaurateurs everywhere because it became so phenomenally successful in such a short period. The Lakewood Broiler's immediate acceptance stimulated Steve and Del into opening a second Seafood Broiler at 5545 Reseda Blvd., Tarzana, and a third Seafood Broiler at 919 S. Central Ave., Glendale. The new manager of the Glendale restaurant is Jim Green, formerly assistant manager at the Lakewood Broiler.

The Seafood Broiler will continue its second anniversary celebration today and Monday by including a complimentary piece of cake with all dinners. A free bottle of seasoning salt will be given out for each dinner check.

The dinner prices are attractively lower than other restaurants. Pacific red snapper is $3.65 on the dinner, $2.60 for luncheon. (Snapper is a splendid, boneless whitefish.) Northern white sea bass filet is $3.95 for dinner and $2.75 for luncheon. The dinners include choice of three: cherry tomatoes, coleslaw, potatoes, corn cobbett or rice pilaf. Also included are bread, butter, tartar or red cocktail sauce and fresh lemon wedge. There's even a dinner for as little as $2.65 — the light-eater's plate, a slightly smaller portion of boneless whitefish. Because of the broiling, all the entrees are "unfishy."

One of Broiler's most popular combinations, for luncheon or dinner, is a bowl of clam chowder with a tasty fish salad, hot roll, butter, coffee or tea, $1.75. Other dinner choices are scallops, shrimp, mahi mahi, salmon, halibut, oysters with bacon and fish kabobs, mostly $3.95 to $5.35. Also served are lobster, crab, wines, Anchor steam beer and regular beers. The dining room's fresh fish market is open daily at 10 a.m.

I ALSO KNOW PEOPLE WHO are crazy about potted Swiss steak, chicken and dumplings and barbecue pork chops. Such people aren't out of their minds, of course. It's merely that their taste buds become a bit delirious whenever they think about dining at Arnold's Family Restaurant or the Queen Cafeteria.

One of my friends is a divorced man who enjoys potted Swiss steak every Sunday at Arnold's, 3925 Atlantic Ave. in the Bixby Knolls section of Long Beach. He declines to be identified because his ex-wife has been trying to find him and she has a ferocious temper. He's a charitable man who says: "There was one nice thing about my ex-wife, the way she cooked potted Swiss steak. It was extremely good. Since our divorce, I've discovered the potted Swiss steak at Arnold's and it's even better. Thank God for our divorce!"

Arnold's self-service restaurant and the Queen Cafeteria, 101 Alamitos Ave., are owned by a family man, Ray Johnson. He's from Essex, Iowa, where he was a star athlete. Later he was a head coach and teacher at Manson, Iowa. He has owned Arnold's since 1969 and the Queen since 1970. He and his staffs have unusual expertise in the preparation of the most delicious, nutritious foods at reasonable family prices.

That potted Swiss steak is $3 on the dinner at Arnold's. Included are three fresh, sparkling salads per person, two hot vegetables, fresh hot roll or bread with butter and beverage. It is currently the most popular Sunday entree at Arnold's. Second in popularity is another Sunday special — chicken and dumplings, $2.70 on the dinner.

People's dining habits vary sharply according to geographical areas. Barbecue pork chops, $3 on the dinner, are terrifically popular at the Queen Cafeteria. Although they're prepared the same way for the same price at Arnold's, for some reason they're not very popular at Arnold's. Both restaurants are open from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m., closed Mondays. Both have similar menus and prices. Both are famous for their unusually large varieties of fresh salads and a big variety of fresh hot vegetables. Breads, rolls, muffins, pies, cakes and pastries are baked daily for both restaurants by versatileob Griffin whose custom bakery is at the Queen.

Wonderful daily luncheons — soups, salads, hot sandwiches and hot entrees — are featured from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Among the dinner features every day are succulent round of roast beef, baked ham, roast turkey and seafoods. The staffs at both restaurants are youthful, unusually well-trained, courteous and friendly. Tim McMillan is supervisor for both restaurants. Tom Smith is Arnold's manager and Mark Holznecht is the Queen's manager.

Lone woman at night in danger on campus

decks from some of the 20,000 cars which are on campus each day, along with burglaries and thefts in the buildings, constitute a major crime problem. The majority of calls, however, were requests for help to start cars or other minor personal problems, according to police.

Brick says there were nearly 10,000 calls for assistance during January which is usually a slow month because classes are in recess part of the time. There were 27 arrests on campus last month. There were only 35 arrests during the entire year in 1972.

"We are understaffed," Brick says. "Some universities smaller than this have 60 to 70 officers on duty."

He also thinks better lighting is needed on campus and he supports the student monitor system as an aid to campus security.

Officer Ron Wilcoff, who investigates crimes against women on campus, thinks the emphasis should be on prevention. He distributes brochures, shows a film and tries to inform women students of the potential hazards. He advises them to walk in groups, preferably with males, choose a lighted path, carry whistles, learn the location of the emergency phones, report suspicious persons or incidents, and he tells them what to do if they are accosted.

Wilkoff fears he is not reaching most of them. A recent survey of 25 women revealed that only one carried a whistle, and none knew where the emergency phones were located.

Campus police have advertised their willingness to escort anyone from a classroom to a car at night. They have had relatively few takers.

YET FEAR persists. But for some women it is coupled with a deep resentment of not being able to walk unmolested on a college campus. Some resent the idea of being forced to call a man for help . . . of being dependent upon one man to protect them against another.

"I don't feel at all comfortable calling the police," says Arlene Barthrop, a 32-year-old graduate student and teacher in the psychology department. "Calling a total stranger and asking him to walk me to my car would make me feel like I'm five years old. I walk to one car with a group and one of them drives me to my own car at night."

Ms. Barthrop says she is more aware of the danger on campus than most women. "A lot of women think it is not going to happen to them," she says.

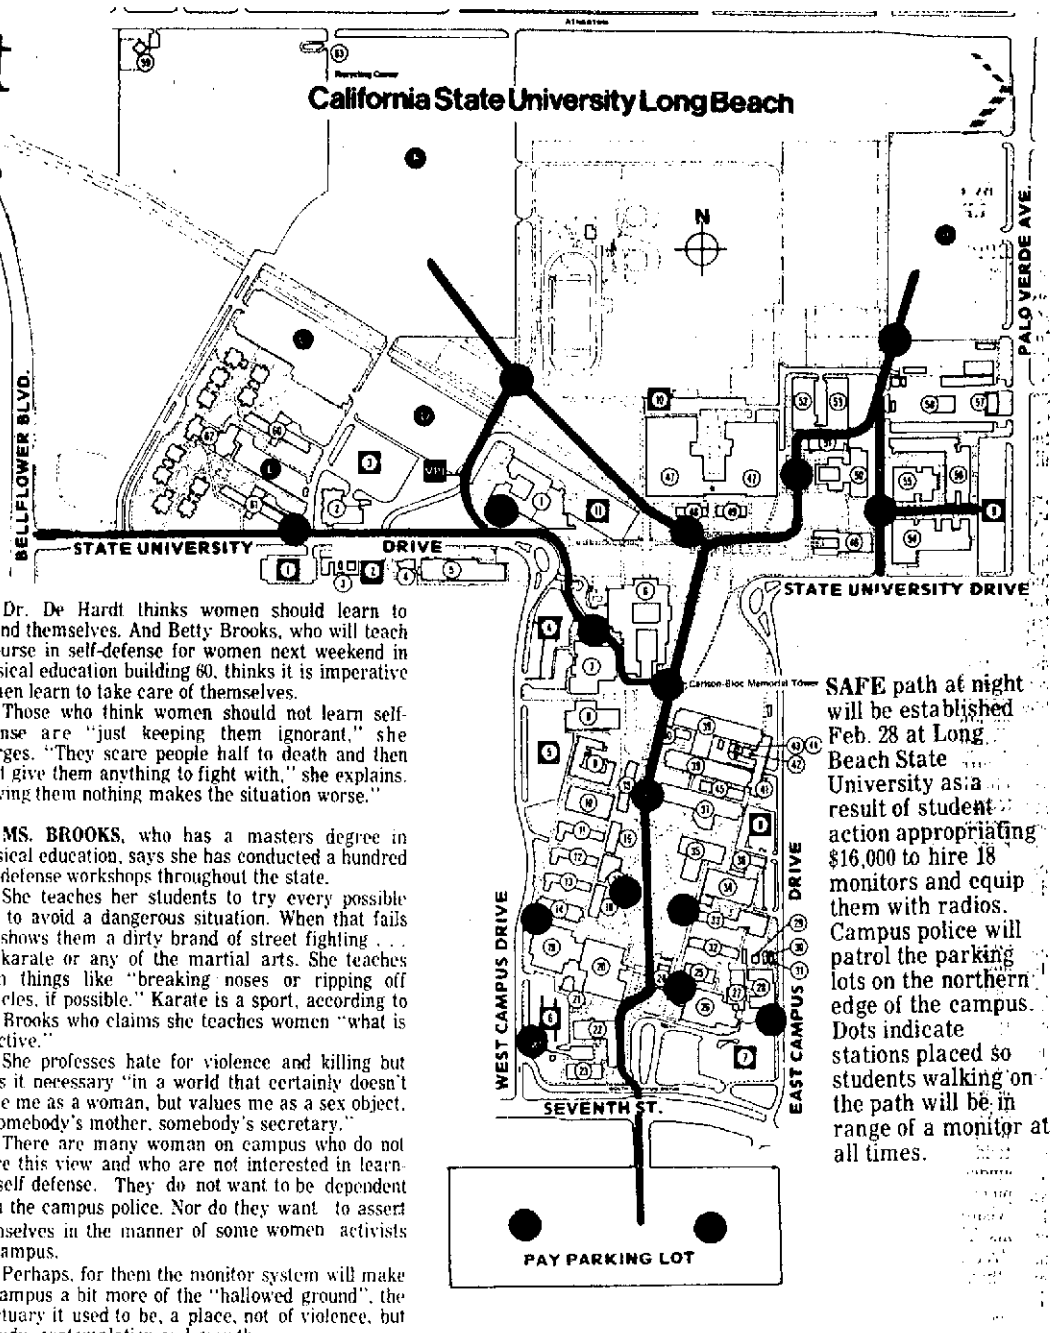

Her attitude toward police is what Dr. Doris De Hardt calls "social distance". The psychology instructor explains, "Most college women are anti-cop or at best suspicious of police and how supportive they are." She says this attitude prevails because "college students have a need to rebel against authority" and the campus police are a convenient symbol of it.

Dr. De Hardt says she will not come on campus at night without a male colleague. She will not teach a class at night, even though she can park near the psychology building. "Students don't have free choice of movement. They have to take night classes and the cannot always park near the buildings where they are scheduled," she says.

She believes there is a real problem for women alone on campus and it is not caused entirely by nonstudents. "Students tell me of men being too familiar and making passes inappropriately."

Dr. De Hardt is working with an organization called "Women Against Rape/Men Against Rape" to establish a uniform rape sensitivity program on all 19 state university campuses. In addition, they want women self-defense instructors consulted on campus security matters, support for women's personal defense instruction, a rape hotline service, an anti-rape conference before the fall 1977 semester and establishment of a violence crisis center on each campus, all funded by the state system.

There is a difference of opinion on campus about the merits of self defense. Wilkoff does not advocate karate or the use of weapons except for keys which, when held properly, can help fend off an attack, he says.

SAFE path at night will be established Feb. 28 at Long Beach State University as a result of student action appropriating $16,000 to hire 18 monitors and equip them with radios. Campus police will patrol the parking lots on the northern edge of the campus. Dots indicate stations placed so students walking on the path will be in range of a monitor at all times.

Dr. De Hardt thinks women should learn to defend themselves. And Betty Brooks, who will teach a course in self-defense for women next weekend in physical education building 60, thinks it is imperative women learn to take care of themselves.

Those who think women should not learn self-defense are "just keeping them ignorant," she charges. "They scare people half to death and then don't give them anything to fight with," she explains. "Giving them nothing makes the situation worse."

MS. BROOKS, who has a masters degree in physical education, says she has conducted a hundred self-defense workshops throughout the state.

She teaches her students to try every possible way to avoid a dangerous situation. When that fails she shows them a dirty brand of street fighting . . . not karate or any of the martial arts. She teaches them things like "breaking noses or ripping off testicles, if possible." Karate is a sport, according to Ms. Brooks who claims she teaches women "what is effective."

She professes hate for violence and killing but finds it necessary "in a world that certainly doesn't value me as a woman, but values me as a sex object, as somebody's mother, somebody's secretary."

There are many woman on campus who do not share this view and who are not interested in learning self defense. They do not want to be dependent upon the campus police. Nor do they want to assert themselves in the manner of some women activists on campus.

Perhaps, for them the monitor system will make he campus a bit more of the "hallowed ground", the sanctuary it used to be, a place, not of violence, but of study, contemplation and growth

Aces on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn:

Playing rubber bridge I made a one over one response to partner's opening on a marginal minimum hand. Opener reversed and since I had a singleton in his first suit, I passed. That's when the trouble started. Is a reverse bid an unconditional force? — In Solitary, Royal Oak, Mich.

Answer: In an average rubber bridge game most would probably play the reverse as non-forcing, but showing a very good hand. Among advanced players, most would regard it as an unconditional force. Why the disparity?

Bridge changes over the years and the advanced players tend to keep up with modern treatments. Needless to say, it's a subject that any new partnership should discuss and agree upon.

Dear Mr. Corn:

In this sequence, is the jump to four no trump Blackwood or is it a 15-16 point no trump raise? — Crossed Signals, Flushing, N.Y.

Op.	Resp.
1 NT	2♣
2♦	4 NT

Answer: This is also an area for discussion and agreement. In general, since no suit agreement has been reached, the bid should describe an invitational raise with one or more four card majors.

Nevertheless, it is sequences like this one that make the use of the Gerber convention most attractive. I use it in a limited way. Any four club bid is a request for aces when either the first or last bid made by the partnership is in no trump.

In cases such as this, it becomes clear that four no trump is a quantative raise.

Dear Mr. Corn:

About face down opening leads. What and why are they and can they be changed after the card is on the table? — New Horizons, Longmeadow, Mass.

Answer: The face down opening lead is a procedure used in tournament play. It is primarily intended to free opening leader's partner to ask whatever question he requires about the meaning of bids without fear of inadvertently crossing the "ethics line" and influencing partner's choice of lead.

Under the rule, opening leader asks whatever questions he wishes and then selects his face down opening lead. Third hand may now question and since the lead has been made, there can be no suspicion of influence.

The face down lead may not be changed once third hand begins his questions.

A side benefit of the procedure is that it virtually eliminates an opening lead out of turn. Unless, of course, all four players are taking a short nap.

Dear Mr. Corn:

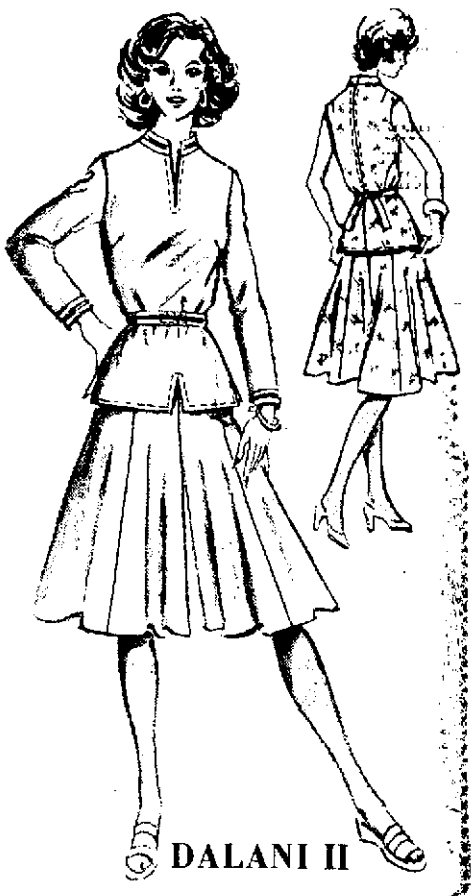

Should dummy and declarer exchange hands, comments and glances before play? I find it irritating and distracting. — Off Beat, Nashville, Tenn.

Answer: No. Not only is the practice inconsiderate, it is in violation of the proprieties.

Dear Mr. Corn:

What is the lead from interior sequence? — No Dictionary, Hartford, Conn.

Answer: The lead of the next to top card in a semi-solid sequence in which the top card is not part of the sequence. Example, A J 10 9, K J 10 9, Q 10 9 8, etc.

Answer: This is also an area for discussion and agreement. In general, since no suit agreement has been reached, the bid should describe an invitational raise with one or more four card majors.

Nevertheless, it is sequences like this one that make the use of the Gerber convention most attractive. I use it in a limited way. Any four club bid is a request for aces when either the first or last bid made by the partnership is in no trump.

In cases such as this, it becomes clear that four no trump is a quantative raise.

Dear Mr. Corn:

About face down opening leads. What and why are they and can they be changed after the card is on the table? — New Horizons, Longmeadow, Mass.

Answer: The face down opening lead is a procedure used in tournament play. It is primarily intended to free opening leader's partner to ask whatever question he requires about the meaning of bids without fear of inadvertently crossing the "ethics line" and influencing partner's choice of lead.

Under the rule, opening leader asks whatever questions he wishes and then selects his face down opening lead. Third hand may now question and since the lead has been made, there can be no suspicion of influence.

The face down lead may not be changed once third hand begins his questions.

A side benefit of the procedure is that it virtually eliminates an opening lead out of turn. Unless, of course, all four players are taking a short nap.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Should dummy and declarer exchange hands, comments and glances before play? I find it irritating and distracting. — Off Beat, Nashville, Tenn.

Answer: No. Not only is the practice inconsiderate, it is in violation of the proprieties.

Dear Mr. Corn:

What is the lead from interior sequence? — No Dictionary, Hartford, Conn.

Answer: The lead of the next to top card in a semi-solid sequence in which the top card is not part of the sequence. Example, A J 10 9, K J 10 9, Q 10 9 8, etc.

Kyushu has steam heat and kimonos

By HERB SHANNON
I,P-T Travel Editor

BEPPU, Japan — There are at least eight kinds of hell in this steamy spa resort on Kyushu, the southernmost of the main islands of the Japanese archipelago. One not listed on the official roster is the unusual weather, which has been doing its best this season to duplicate the current climate of Florida, the U.S. state Kyushu is most often likened to.

Palms, tangerine and grapefruit trees bearing ripening fruit in February give ample evidence of the usual balmy winter clime, but both sunshine and scenery were blotted out frequently by snow flurries during the three-hour train trip from Fukuoka in the north. Topcoat liners are in order, and I do not regret the luggage space I reserved for a set of thermal underwear, just in case.

The other kinds of hell are the hot springs which are the prime tourist attractions of Beppu. There are actually 3,795 of them, all spewing steam of various temperatures and aroma into the chilly air. Eight major spa centers have been established around as many distinctly different types of spring.

THE TERMINOLOGY for these natural phenomena comes from the Japanese word Jigoku, which translates as 'hell' or 'inferno' in English. The temperature of the Sea Hell spa, a huffing, puffing, 400-foot deep cauldron named for the resemblance of its turgid pool to sea water, is 94 degrees Centigrade, just short of boiling.

The pool is fenced off to prevent toddlers from falling in and is surrounded by botanical gardens and picnic grounds used by up to 1,000 visitors at a time in clement seasons. The gardens contain a banana tree greenhouse in addition to more than 4,000 tropical plants outdoors.

Blood Pond Hell is another superheatd pool regurgitating a scarlet pigment from depths of 500 feet. Its therapeutic waters contain iron oxide and magnesium compounds which are highly recommended by Japanese physicians for the treatment of skin diseases.

The most spectacular of the springs may be Waterspout Hell, which more properly is a geyser. More regular than Old Faithful in Wyoming's Yellowstone Park, the Japanese version blows a stream of boiling water more than 60 feet into the air every ten minutes. The cooled water of the pond contains salts, acids and natural potassium useful in the cultivation of tropical plants.

OTHER SPRINGS are used for cooking, bathing and residential heating when required. In addition to developing these utilitarian purposes and the medical therapy which helps to bring eight million tourists to Kyushu annually, the local prefectural government maintains an experimental geophysics station near Beppu to study other applications of the residual volcanic thermal energy.

One hot spring named Oniyama Hell for its location in Beppu's district of that name is not likely to be a target for tourists in search of a bath. The salts of its violent spout stimulate the growth of banana plants and the evil denizens of a crocodile breeding farm nearby.

herb shannon

Hotels on the hillsides of Beppu utilize the hot waters of the springs for their own spas. This natural advantage and the resulting domestic tourist traffic has led to the development of one of the largest public baths in Japan at the Suginoi Hotel, perched above the city on the slopes of a foothill of the Tsurumi mountain range ringing Beppu Bay.

A HUGE, modern hostelry combining the traditional decor of traditional Japanese inns with western conveniences, the Suginoi is a self-contained resort city. In addition to the gigantic bath, with a dozen pools of varying temperatures and mineral content, waterfall slides and interior landscaping, the hotel features a 36-lane bowling alley, artificial ice skating rink, night club, theater, museum, shhopping arcade, conference room complex and convention center.

Although some rooms provide a choice of Japanese or western-style sleeping accommodations, and restaurants also are available for typical Japanese meals served by costumed geishas serving at floor-level tables, tradition stops at the public bath. The gigantic pool complex is segregated by a fixed wall separating the sexes.

The Suginoi furnishes its patrons with all the necessities for an overnight or weekend stay. Toothbrush and razor kits are laid out in the bathroom and a freshly laundered kimono and happicoat are ready on the bed. The kimono is the required uniform for dinner, bath or night club. Underwear is optional. I opted for long johns.

THE FIRST indication that tourist costs in Japan compare favorably with those anywhere came with the Suginoi rate card. A twin or double bedded room for one, including the kimono and bath kits, came to $20.

The price for two persons adds $3.50 to the bill.

These costs are even lower under the Sunrise Holidays package tour plans promoted this year by Japan Air Lines and the Japan Travel Bureau. A six-day tour of southern Kyushu, including accommodations at Beppu, Miyazaki, Ibusuki and Kagoshima, rail and coach transportation to and from Fukuoka and some meals, totals the equivalent of $270.

At breakfast, scare stories about the $3 thimble of orange juice faded away. There were self-help containers of orange, tomato and pineapple juice on the serving tables. A full western breakfast of ham and eggs and all the trimmings, or a seemingly unlimited choice of Japanese dishes at the buffet came to $3.50.

AFTER THE sukiyaki dinner on tatami mats in the Suginoi's Japanese dining room, more evidence of cost-consciousness surfaced in the modern bar off the lobby. As an experiment, I ordered a martini, with imported gin. Our Japan Travel Bureau guide, Masaaki (Mike) Yokura, whose first name means honest and bright, smiled confidently.

The barmaid, Ritsuko Onozaki, whose name means self-governing, according to Mike's explanation, without hesitation mixed the drink in the time-honored way, pouring the vermouth with admirable self-control. The tab came to $1.50, including service charge.

"You see?" said Mike. "You get what you pay for in Japan. No gypping."

And no tipping, either. That's a foreign custom.

THREE generations of Japanese family in traditional and modern dress visit Sea Hell, one of many spectacular hot springs tourist attractions of Beppu.

Penny-wise traveler: Next time try the bus

jane morse

Visit any nice bus terminals lately?

No, they haven't all been shaped up and made squeaky-clean, but it's now possible to use "nice" next to "bus terminal" for an overridingly good reason — that new $50 fare!

With $50 the maximum price for one-way transportation between any two U.S. cities, Greyhound and Continental Trailways now overwhelmingly undercut both trains and planes for many long-distance trips.

Is there more to know before you go? Well, to get the most for your money, yes. If, for instance, you go roundtrip, take overnight breaks in a hotel, obviously the costs start percolating back up to something closer to discount air fares.

Bus company planners therefore have tried to sweeten their offer by (1) making the $50 ticket good for two months and unlimited free stopovers once you're out of the state; (2) permitting one child under 12 to travel free with each adult. Since normal fares always allow it, an infant under 2 travels free as well, and a handicapped person may take a friend free.

IN ADDITION, the companies allow a $33 fare on out-of-state roundtrips that you can complete in three days or less. The only string on these offers is that you must use the most direct route to your destination.

If you think this sounds too good to last, you're right, it won't. Prices are scheduled to go back up March 31. The idea is to boost winter bus travel, and apparently it needs boosting. At least one 43-passenger bus carried only two people between Los Angeles and Phoenix earlier this month — and one of them was a company employee.

Meanwhile, if you haven't done much bus riding lately, you might like to know some of the specifics in over-the-road travel.

A new, nine-day Ameripass good for unlimited travel in any direction anywhere has been added by both Greyhound and Continental Trailways. However, Greyhound also throws in an Ameripass booklet good for discounts on a number of hotel, meal and sight-seeing rates.

GREYHOUND'S arsenal of price-war weapons includes as well what may be the nation's best buy on coffee. At its Post House restaurants in major city terminals, the company sells pint Thermos bottles for $2.79, and then fills them with coffee as often as you wish thereafter for only 15 cents a refill.

In 52 major cities, Greyhound has made arrangements with nearby, moderately priced hotels or motels to offer Greyhound passengers rooms at slightly under regular prices.

Regardless of which bus line you travel with, bear in mind that tickets are just like cash. If you lose one, chances are you've lost your investment. The bus companies do consider applications for refunds on lost tickets, but, even if granted, the refunds won't arrive with the speed of light. (A good precaution is to record the number of your ticket.)

CHECKED BAGGAGE is automatically insured by the bus company for $250 these days, but read the rules carefully, since there is a long list of items that are ship-at-your-own-risk. They include cameras, musical instruments, radios, typewriters, liquids and "anything fragile or of extraordinary value."

If $250 barely covers the cost of your underwear, see about getting your own insurance ahead of time, since the bus companies have no provisions for selling increased coverage.

As to whether bus riding is beautiful, there is the yes answer and no answer. When it's good it's very, very good, as lots of schoolteachers, students, retirees, job hunters, poor people and certain travel writers (including this one) can attest.

travel

The United States offers pretty scenic country, even in winter. Moreover, most rides are as smooth as apple butter, most buses clean, most rest stops regular (one about every three to four hours). More and more suburban stops are being added and are a great convenience for those who don't want or need to go all the way into a major city.

Mystery of the Malaysian jungles choral pepper

GAL-IVANTING

No one could possibly visit Cameron Highlands without peering into the jungle that surrounds the prim English gardens and hoping that by some mad miracle Jim Thompson will suddenly break out of the tangled mass. But he never has since his mysterious disappearance in 1967.

I am in this Malaysian mountain resort now, ensconced in a heavily-beamed Tudor room with an antique four-poster bed and, would you believe it, a hot water bottle tucked under the covers. Such typically unobtrusive British luxury is not only apparent in my hotel, Fosters Smokehouse, it permeates the entire community.

I can understand why Jim Thompson, the refined expatriate American who did so much to develop the Thai silk industry, cherished his holidays in this cool retreat.

From my window I cannot see Moonlight Cottage where he visited with friends at the time of his disappearance, but I can look across the golf course toward the jungle in which the small estate is carved. And, as the fragrance of bacon sizzling in the kitchen below wafts in through my window with the crisp morning air, like Jim Thompson, I am eager to launch upon a jungle walk.

ALTHOUGH Cameron Highland's atmosphere is more English than Asian, with rose gardens, herbaceous borders and Tudor houses, its Chinese population exceeds that of Malays, Indians, native Oran Aslis and others who live here.

Nevertheless, most newcomers have succumbed to the life style established by the English rubber planters, Colonial administrators and missionaries who came during Malaysia's days of British rule to escape the exhaustion of tropical lowland heat in this 5,000-foot-high, temperate all-season climate.

Jungle paths leading from hotels and public thoroughfares and carefully mapped, numbered and maintained by the government. Warnings are posted advising hikers to never walk alone, to inform a friend before leaving and to keep to numbered paths.

But as you breathe the exhilarating air and feel the warmth of high-altitude sun upon your face, it is easy to forget the warnings and to go darting onto a mysterious jungle trail.

A FREAK species of plant draws your attention. You cease to think about warning signs and the possibility that you may have wandered onto an oblique offshoot path hewn by jungle natives while hunting tiger with their blowguns. You could be lost and not even know it.

These things happen. There are those who believe that Jim Thompson disappeared in such a way. But that is the mystery that surrounds the growing legend of the man.

Without the intrigue of a mystery, Cameron Highlands still is a place I will leave with regret. Its euphoric tempo seems almost unreal, a never-never land inhabited with gentle people inexplicably eager to share the joys of their quiet well-bred, well-fed, comfortable life with strangers motoring between Penang and Kuala Lampur.

Penny-wise traveler: Next time try the bus

jane morse

Visit any nice bus terminals lately?

No, they haven't all been shaped up and made squeaky-clean, but it's now possible to use "nice" next to "bus terminal" for an overridingly good reason — that new $50 fare!

With $50 the maximum price for one-way transportation between any two U.S. cities, Greyhound and Continental Trailways now overwhelmingly undercut both trains and planes for many long-distance trips.

Is there more to know before you go? Well, to get the most for your money, yes. If, for instance, you go roundtrip, take overnight breaks in a hotel, obviously the costs start percolating back up to something closer to discount air fares.

Bus company planners therefore have tried to sweeten their offer by (1) making the $50 ticket good for two months and unlimited free stopovers once you're out of the state; (2) permitting one child under 12 to travel free with each adult. Since normal fares always allow it, an infant under 2 travels free as well, and a handicapped person may take a friend free.

IN ADDITION, the companies allow a $33 fare on out-of-state roundtrips that you can complete in three days or less. The only string on these offers is that you must use the most direct route to your destination.

If you think this sounds too good to last, you're right, it won't. Prices are scheduled to go back up March 31. The idea is to boost winter bus travel, and apparently it needs boosting. At least one 43-passenger bus carried only two people between Los Angeles and Phoenix earlier this month — and one of them was a company employee.

Meanwhile, if you haven't done much bus riding lately, you might like to know some of the specifics in over-the-road travel.

A new, nine-day Ameripass good for unlimited travel in any direction anywhere has been added by both Greyhound and Continental Trailways. However, Greyhound also throws in an Ameripass booklet good for discounts on a number of hotel, meal and sight-seeing rates.

New resort on Maui taking play from Waikiki

Wailea, Hawaii

We're picking up a little sun and surf on the island of Maui. ("Here today, gone to Maui," is printed on the T-shirt of the little brown girl.)

We drink rummy maitais. Learn some island pidgin: "Red Riding Hood holo holo to gran'ma house. Whassamatta? Gran'ma no stop. Wolf fix kau kau gran'ma. Put on gran'ma muumuu. Red Riding Hood spik him: 'Gran'ma too much big teet' you got.' Wolf spik: 'Mo' bettah fo' fix you kau kau, keed.'"

stan delaplane

In the evening we watch the sun plunge into the sea between here and Lanai. And the guitars sing, "Maui no ka oi. Maui is the best."

Wailea is the biggest — and most talked about — resort project in Hawaii. Three times the size of Waikiki. Five white sand beaches. A million dollars worth of tennis courts. Three million of golf course.

THERE'S an Inter-Continental Maui hotel of 600 rooms that cost $27 million. And so far, 350 condominiums — the medium priced ones go for $94,000.

When it's finished there's to be three hotels. A shopping center planned around a village green. And 3600 living units: Condominiums. Duplexes. Cottages.

It's built on marginal farming land — (but ideal resort living) — owned by Alexander & Baldwin, sugar growers of Hawaii's Big Five.

The final cost will be $100 million. You can bet it's being planned so every dollar buys a dollar's worth.

"No high rise. No house closer than a long stone's throw to the beach. All building to be screened by our own Environmental Committee."

Last year Hawaii drew 3.2 million tourists. (Tourists now bring more outside money than any other product. Seven times what Hawaii gets for sugar, for example.)

FOR THE first time, Maui cracked the million tourists mark.

The State has grown double the national average — now 865,000 people. Four of five live in Honolulu.

Governor Ariyoshi has asked the Federal government to stop immigration from the mainland. The Supreme Court ruled that you can live anywhere you like. And Hawaiians say mainlanders come here to live on Hawaiian welfare and the easy life on golden beaches.

Wailea will certainly not bring welfare people. But Ariyoshi thinks ANY more people threatens the fragile state of the limited land.

How do you go about getting your share of this Paradise of the Pacific?

A Wailea sales girl worked it out for me: For a $94,000 condo with a couple of bedrooms, baths and outdoor lanai, you must put down $18,800. Take a loan at 9½ per cent and you'll pay $840 a month for the next 30 years.

IF YOU'VE got $94,000 in your pocket, you pay $207 a month for maintenance, electricity and taxes.

"It's not low cost housing," a Wailea man admits. "But your investment is assured. You're not going to have a McDonald's going up alongside you."

It's a lovely island. Only 25 minutes by air from Honolulu. (Some people commute to work.)

There's shady old Lahaina town where whalers wintered with dusky wahines — and New England missionaries prayed for their souls.

travel

"You must hang your conscience on Cape Horn," said the whalers, "and pick it up on your way back to Nantucket."

If you don't have $94,000 in your foxy pocket, you can fly here in six hours. (From the West Coast round-trip, $300.) A sea view double room at the Inter-Continental Maui (four restaurants) goes for $45.

Or you can rent a condominium for $40. Maid service goes with it.

You can phone free for a brochure: (800)525-4200.

What's wrong with it? All I could find was the lanais in the hotel rooms. They put a foot-wide rail that's right at eye level when you're sitting down. You have to sit up straight to see the sunset.

(So sit up, brudda. You alla time lying down? Wasetime.)

POSH club sets nostalgia cruise

George Turner, retired president of P&O Lines, North America, will host a POSH Seafarers Club Nostalgia Cruise aboard Prudential Lines' Santa Mariana, sailing from Los Angeles March 10 to South America.

The POSH Club is composed of former passengers of P&O cruise ships that regularly sailed from the West Coast to ports around the word. P&O now primarily operates out of European ports.

Turner, a recognized authority on historical as well as modern passenger ships, first went to sea more than 40 years ago as an assistant purser on a 4,000-ton passenger-cargo ship sailing from Australia to New Guinea.

The Santa Mariana will cruise for 53 days from Los Angeles to Mexico, the Caribbean and completely around South America, transiting both the Panama Canal and the Strait of Magellan. During the voyage Turner will discuss with passengers the history and romance of the great passenger liners of the past.

The cruise is an opportunity for members of the POSH Club to increase their traveling experiences. P&O ships never sailed to the South American destinations.

Seafarers Club members may contact Turner at P.O. Box 326, Burlingame, Calif. 94010, or in care of Prudential Lines, One California Street, San Francisco, Calif 94111.

Complete tour, 10 days, $729.

That $729 isn't just for air fare.

Rather it's for air fare plus hotels for 5 nights in Tahiti and 6 nights in Moorea.

Plus transportation between Tahiti and Moorea by motor yacht. And transportation back by air taxi.

We also include a circle-the-island tour of Tahiti. And, in Moorea, the use of outrigger canoes, snorkel equipment, and glass-bottom paddleboats.

All for $729.

Ask your travel agent for Pan Am's Tahitian Escape, PAH 540.

Of course, maybe you have more money to spend. And more time to spend. In which case, we have another tour that might interest you.

14 days, $998.

This vacation takes you to Tahiti, Moorea, Huahine, Raiatea, and Bora Bora. Like the first tour, it includes round trip air fare and your hotels for the length of your stay.

On each island, we take you on an introductory sightseeing tour. On the outer islands, we'll supply you with snorkel equipment, outrigger canoes, and some bicycles. In Tahiti, we'll also treat you to an outdoor Tahitian feast.

Call your travel agent and ask for Pan Am's Tahitian 5 Islands, PAH 540.

We can offer these prices for what normally would be very expensive vacations because of how we base the prices.

The air fares are based on round trip GIT economy air fare. The hotels are based on double occupancy. The tours are for groups of 10 or more and are available on selected departure dates. But if a group is not formed we'll try to arrange an alternate date. And only one other thing: you pay for the trip at least 30 days in advance.

New resort on Maui taking play from Waikiki

Wailea, Hawaii

We're picking up a little sun and surf on the island of Maui. ("Here today, gone to Maui," is printed on the T-shirt of the little brown girl.)

We drink rummy maitais. Learn some island pidgin: "Red Riding Hood holo holo to gran'ma house. Whassamatta? Gran'ma no stop. Wolf fix kau kau gran'ma. Put on gran'ma muumuu. Red Riding Hood spik him: 'Gran'ma too much big teet' you got.' Wolf spik: 'Mo' bettah fo' fix you kau kau, keed.'"

travel

stan delaplane

In the evening we watch the sun plunge into the sea between here and Lanai. And the guitars sing, "Maui no ka oi. Maui is the best."

Wailea is the biggest — and most talked about — resort project in Hawaii. Three times the size of Waikiki. Five white sand beaches. A million dollars worth of tennis courts. Three million of golf course.

THERE'S an Inter-Continental Maui hotel of 600 rooms that cost $27 million. And so far, 350 condominiums — the medium priced ones go for $94,000.

When it's finished there's to be three hotels. A shopping center planned around a village green. And 3600 living units: Condominiums. Duplexes. Cottages.

It's built on marginal farming land — (but ideal resort living) — owned by Alexander & Baldwin, sugar growers of Hawaii's Big Five.

The final cost will be $100 million. You can bet it's being planned so every dollar buys a dollar's worth.

"No high rise. No house closer than a long stone's throw to the beach. All building to be screened by our own Environmental Committee."

Last year Hawaii drew 3.2 million tourists. (Tourists now bring more outside money than any other product. Seven times what Hawaii gets for sugar, for example.)

FOR THE first time, Maui cracked the million tourists mark.

The State has grown double the national average — now 865,000 people. Four of five live in Honolulu.

Governor Ariyoshi has asked the Federal government to stop immigration from the mainland. The Supreme Court ruled that you can live anywhere you like. And Hawaiians say mainlanders come here to live on Hawaiian welfare and the easy life on golden beaches.

Wailea will certainly not bring welfare people. But Ariyoshi thinks ANY more people threatens the fragile state of the limited land.

How do you go about getting your share of this Paradise of the Pacific?

A Wailea sales girl worked it out for me: For a $94,000 condo with a couple of bedrooms, baths and outdoor lanai, you must put down $18,800. Take a loan at 9½ per cent and you'll pay $840 a month for the next 30 years.

IF YOU'VE got $94,000 in your pocket, you pay $207 a month for maintenance, electricity and taxes.

"It's not low cost housing," a Wailea man admits. "But your investment is assured. You're not going to have a McDonald's going up alongside you."

It's a lovely island. Only 25 minutes by air from Honolulu. (Some people commute to work.)

There's shady old Lahaina town where whalers wintered with dusky wahines — and New England missionaries prayed for their souls.

"You must hang your conscience on Cape Horn," said the whalers, "and pick it up on your way back to Nantucket."

If you don't have $94,000 in your foxy pocket, you can fly here in six hours. (From the West Coast round-trip, $300.) A sea view double room at the Inter-Continental Maui (four restaurants) goes for $45.

Or you can rent a condominium for $40. Maid service goes with it.

You can phone free for a brochure: (800)525-4200.

What's wrong with it? I could find was the lanais hotel rooms. They put a foot rail that's right at eye level when you're sitting down. You have to sit up straight to see the sunset.

(So sit up, brudda. You alla time lying down? Wasetime.)

SURF, SAND AND SUN COMBINE TO MAKE WAILEA A PACIFIC PARADISE

Everyone dreams, at one time or another, of running off to Tahiti.

For $729 why not fly instead?

POSH club sets nostalgia cruise

George Turner, retired president of P&O Lines, North America, will host a POSH Seafarers Club Nostalgia Cruise aboard Prudential Lines' Santa Mariana, sailing from Los Angeles March 10 to South America.

The POSH Club is composed of former passengers of P&O cruise ships that regularly sailed from the West Coast to ports around the word. P&O now primarily operates out of European ports.

Turner, a recognized authority on historical as well as modern passenger ships, first went to sea more than 40 years ago as an assistant purser on a 4,000-ton passenger-cargo ship sailing from Australia to New Guinea.

The Santa Mariana will cruise for 53 days from Los Angeles to Mexico, the Caribbean and completely around South America, transiting both the Panama Canal and the Strait of Magellan. During the voyage Turner will discuss with passengers the history and romance of the great passenger liners of the past.

The cruise is an opportunity for members of the POSH Club to increase their traveling experiences. P&O ships never sailed to the South American destinations.

Seafarers Club members may contact Turner at P.O. Box 326, Burlingame, Calif. 94010, or in care of Prudential Lines, One California Street, San Francisco, Calif 94111.

Dear Abby

Pill preferable to pregnancy

DEAR ABBY: I don't know who to turn to. I just found out that my 18-year-old daughter is on the Pill. I am nearly crazy with heartbreak, disappointment and shame. She has a steady boyfriend I thought was nice. I never dreamed this was going on.

Should I confront her and tell her I know? I'm so upset I can hardly sleep or eat. My daughter works steady and lives at home, and she's always been a clean and decent girl. Please help me. — NEARLY CRAZY IN PA.

DEAR NEARLY: What are your alternatives? Confront her and demand that she stop having sex? It won't work. Once a girl becomes sexually active, she's not likely to abstain from sex because her mother asks her to. Besides, she's of age. You could kick her out of the house, but what would that accomplish?

As long as she has chosen to be sexually active, isn't it better that she is taking precautions to prevent pregnancy that could lead to a premature marriage, and abortion or an unwanted child?

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to Paul for only six months, but one of his habits is really driving me out of my mind.

When he sits down to eat (whether we are at home, dining out or are guests in someone's home), the first thing Paul does is to salt everything that requires seasoning — and I mean he salts it up but good! Abby, he doesn't even TRY it first; he just pours the salt on.

People look at him in disbelief. At the home of friends, I'm sure they think there's something wrong with their food.

abigail van buren

Shouldn't he take a little taste first? And then if he likes things saltier, he could add a bit more salt instead of doing it in these great broad gestures.

Or am I wrong to criticize him? — PAUL'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: If your husband likes salt, he should be a little more subtle in applying it, especially when he's a dinner guest.

Paul's craving for salt may be embarrassing for you, but it could have more serious implications. Tell him to mention this to his physician.

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible for a man to be in love with two women at the same time? I'm a divorcee, and this man I'm dating has never been married. When we met, he told me quite honestly that he had been seeing another woman, but that he wanted to date me anyway.

I agreed, thinking that if anything serious developed between us, he'd quit seeing her. Well, something serious DID develop, but he's still seeing her.

I am not insisting on marriage, but I would like a man who's mine exclusively. Should I give him an ultimatum?

I really love him and don't want to lose him, but his running between me and this other woman is getting me down. What's wrong with him anyway? — FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: How far "down" you are willing to get before demanding exclusive rights is up to you. The quickest way to lose him is to give him an ultimatum, so don't go that route unless you're willing to surrender your 50 per cent of this illusive Romeo.

Birthday party for George W.

Promises, promises

Mayva popped into my utility room the other morning and said, "So, you've switched to the new laundry detergent ALL NEW SCUM FIGHTER?"

"No, it's the one I've been using for 9 years. It's just had sparkle added to the second rinse."

"I thought they added sparkle last year?"

"No, last year it was Improved with the bleach built in and before that they

added an Advanced Formula so I could see the difference."

"Wasn't that the year my detergent was called Revolutionary Clean?"

"No, yours was Power Boosted to eliminate the odor. Remember? People were fainting a lot."

"I remember, but I liked it better when it was Reborn."

"That was the year mine was Streamlined, but when the ecologists screamed and they came out with a low sudser called Perfected."

"Remember the year HMQ was added?" smiled Mayva.

"I certainly do. Incidentally, what was HMQ?"

"I don't know, but their advertising campaign had a fuzzy monster coming out of the washer and grabbing the clothes right off your back."

"YOU'VE USED your detergent a long time too, haven't you?"

"Yep," said Mayva. "I've stuck with it through Renovated, Futurized, Upgraded and Reinforced to Fight Grease."

"Me too," I said. "I've hung in there through Newly-Developed, Renewed, Revised and Enriched."

"I was going to buy mine when it was All Modern, but before I could buy a box, it had changed to Advanced."

"You've got to move fast or you miss a step," I said, opening the dryer.

"Was yours ever All Purpose?"

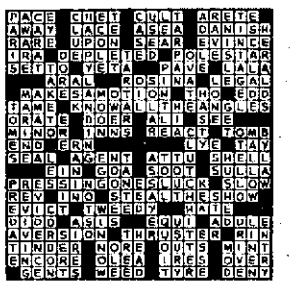

"Oh sure, at one time my laundry detergent was so powerful it could clean without water and would take the liver spots off your hands."

"I wonder where they go from here," asked Mayva. "I mean where do you go after Better! Better! All New! and Ultimate Perfection!"

"Funny you should say that, I just got a new box of my detergent in the cupboard. It reads, "The Original Scum Fighter!"

"We've been had," said Mayva.

"I know."

Dear Abby

Pill preferable to pregnancy

DEAR ABBY: I don't know who to turn to. I just found out that my 18-year-old daughter is on the Pill. I am nearly crazy with heartbreak, disappointment and shock. She has a steady boyfriend I like, it was nice. I never dreamed this was going on.

Should I confront her and tell her I know? I'm so upset I can hardly sleep or eat. My daughter works steady and lives at home, and she's always been a clean and decent girl. Please help me. — NEARLY CRAZY IN PA.

DEAR NEARLY: What are your alternatives? Confront her and demand that she stop having sex? It won't work. Once a girl becomes sexually active, she's not likely to abstain from sex because her mother asks her to. Besides, she's of age. You could kick her out of the house, but what would that accomplish?

As long as she has chosen to be sexually active, isn't it better that she is taking precautions to prevent pregnancy that could lead to a premature marriage, and abortion or an unwanted child?

DEAR ABBY: I have been married to Paul for only six months, but one of his habits is really driving me out of my mind.

When he sits down to eat (whether we are at home, dining out or are guests in someone's home), the first thing Paul does is to salt everything that requires seasoning — and I mean he salts it up but good! Abby, he doesn't even TRY it first; he just pours the salt on.

People look at him in disbelief. At the home of friends, I'm sure they think there's something wrong with their food.

abigail van buren

Shouldn't he take a little taste first? And then if he likes things saltier, he could add a bit more salt instead of doing it in these great broad gestures.

Or am I wrong to criticize him? — PAUL'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: If your husband likes salt, he should be a little more subtle in applying it, especially when he's a dinner guest.

Paul's craving for salt may be embarrassing for you, but it could have more serious implications. Tell him to mention this to his physician.

DEAR ABBY: Is it possible for a man to be in love with two women at the same time? I'm a divorcee, and this man I'm dating has never been married. When we met, he told me quite honestly that he had been seeing another woman, but that he wanted to date me anyway.

I agreed, thinking that if anything serious developed between us, he'd quit seeing her. Well, something serious DID develop, but he's still seeing her.

I am not insisting on marriage, but I would like a man who's mine exclusively. Should I give him an ultimatum?

I really love him and don't want to lose him, but his running between me and this other woman is getting me down. What's wrong with him anyway? — FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: How far "down" you are willing to get before demanding exclusive rights is up to you. The quickest way to lose him is to give him an ultimatum, so don't go that route unless you're willing to surrender your 50 per cent of this illusive Romeo.

Promises, promises

Mayva popped into my utility room the other morning and said, "So, you've switched to the new laundry detergent ALL NEW SCUM FIGHTER?"

"No, it's the one I've been using for years. It's just had sparkle added to the second rinse."

"I thought they added sparkle last year."

"No, last year it was improved with oxybleach built in and before that they added an Advanced Formula so I could see the difference."

"Wasn't that the year my detergent was called Revolutionary Clean?"

"No, yours was Power Boosted to eliminate the odor. Remember? People were fainting a lot."

"I remember, but I liked it better when it was Reborn."

"That was the year mine was Streamlined, but when the ecologists screamed and they came out with a low sudser called Perfected."

"Remember the year HMQ was added?" smiled Mayva.

"I certainly do. Incidentally, what was HMQ?"

"I don't know, but their advertising campaign had a fuzzy monster coming out of the washer and grabbing the clothes right off your back."

"YOU'VE USED your detergent a long time too, haven't you?"

"Yep," said Mayva. "I've stuck with it through Renovated, Futurized, Upgraded and Reinforced to Fight Grease."

"Me too," I said. "I've hung in there through Newly-Developed, Renewed, Revised and Enriched."

"I was going to buy mine when it was All Modern, but before I could buy a box, it had changed to Advanced."

"You've got to move fast or you miss a step," I said, opening the dryer.

"Was yours ever All Purpose?"

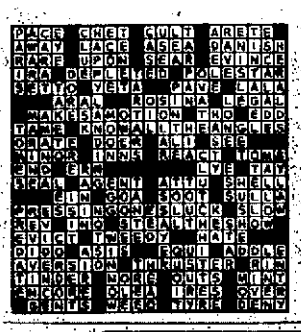

"Oh sure, at one time my laundry detergent was so powerful it could clean without water and would take the liver spots off your hands."

"I wonder where they go from here," asked Mayva. "I mean where do you go after Better! Better! All New! and Ultimate Perfection!"

"Funny you should say that. I just got a new box of my detergent in the cupboard. It reads, "The Original Scum Fighter!"

"We've been had," said Mayva.

"I know."

Purtzer leads Wadkins by three

Unknown nears L.A. win

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

Riviera Country Club is supposed to be an energy-sapping, treacherous course that only veterans with flossy credentials are able to master for four rounds.

But a young unknown named Tom Purtzer posted a wildly exciting 5-under-par 66 Saturday — his third successive round in the 60s — to grab a three-stroke lead over Lanny Wadkins, a 27-year-old who is making a comeback after great years in 1971 and 1972.

A non-winner in 2½ years on the tour, the 25-year-old Purtzer, a former Arizona State golfer from Phoenix, has already matched Hale Irwin's tournament record of 12-under-par set last year.

"I was very nervous starting today and I'll probably be a little shaky tomorrow," admitted the leader who, like last week's winner Rik Massengale, draws his faith from God.

Purtzer's card was a strange one, but then Riviera is the type of course which produces lots of birdies and bogeys. Purtzer had six birdies, an eagle and three bogeys. On the incoming nine, his card showed only one par.

"I'm looking forward to tomorrow," Purtzer confessed. "It's true that I don't have much experience being on top; but when you are driving the ball well and putting good, that's just as important."

The Riviera greens are lightning-fast, but Purtzer had the touch from the start. He rolled in seven putts ranging from 12 to 35 feet and didn't make a mistake until he three-putted the awesome, 454-yard 18th hole.

At one time Purtzer held a six-stroke lead. However, any hole is double-bogey potential on this course. There is no way to play it safe and try to protect a lead.

Purtzer was paired with Massengale Saturday and called him a steadying influence. It could be the same today. One of his partners will be his best friend, Bob Gilder, his former Arizona State teammate and tour roommate.

Featured pairings

10:42 a.m. — Roger Maltbie, Dale Hayes, Bobby Walzel.
10:50 a.m. — Graham Marsh, Fuzzy Zoeller, Joe Inman.
10:58 a.m. — Lanny Wadkins, Craig Stadler, Howard Twitty.
11:06 a.m. — Tom Purtzer, Bob Gilder, Jim Masserio.

Gilder will be rooting for his buddy, but also will be trying to beat him. Gilder (70) stands alone in third place at 7-under-par, five shots off the pace.

"If I can't win, I hope Tom does," Gilder said.

Purtzer and Wadkins say they are drained from seven consecutive weeks on the tour. They claim it won't be easy to keep the thought processes going on every shot of every hole, which is required on this course.

A first prize of $40,000 goes to the winner and that is more than Purtzer has won in his career.

Precedent is in his favor, however. In all six tournaments this year the man who led or was tied after three rounds hung on to win at the finish.

If Purtzer makes it he will be the second unheralded golfer to win this prestigious event in three years. Pat Fitzsimons won in 1975, pulling away from the pack with a 64 in the third round.

For awhile Saturday it appeared that Purtzer was heading for a 64 and a six-stroke lead. But he bogeyed two of the last three holes. Still, his score was the best of the day in a field which lost many of the glamour players after the Friday cut.

The loss of the big names did not, surprisingly, hurt the Saturday gate too much. There were 26,340 in attendance, only a few thousand less than a year ago on the third round.

Purtzer made par from out of the trees on the first hole and said it was significant.

"My nearves were on edge when I started," he said. "That settles me down.

He went on to birdie the toughest hole on the course, the par-4, 467-yard second with a drive, 2-iron and 12-foot putt. For the next seven holes he was a model of perfection, parring six times and sinking a 12-foot putt.

The incoming nine was another story.

Fullerton stymies LBSU 'bye' hopes

Close normally counts only in horseshoes and hand grenades.

Saturday night it meant something to Long Beach State in a basketball game.

The 49ers were beaten, 78-73, by Cal State Fullerton, but the margin of defeat could prove significant in determining who receives the first-round bye in the post-season tournament that will determine the Pacific Coast Athletic Association's representative in the NCAA tournament.

Presently, there are four teams tied, in the loss column, for first place in the PCAA — Long Beach State, Cal State Fullerton, San Jose State and San Diego State.

Long Beach concludes its conference season Saturday night in the Long Beach Arena against Fresno State. Fullerton and San Diego are on the road with games at Pacific and San Jose.

If two or more teams tie for the league crown, the recipient of the bye will be determined first by series records between the teams involved and then by margin of victory in the two games if the series is tied.

Long Beach State beat San Diego twice, an after Saturday night's defeat, has a one-point edge over Fullerton in a two-game series the teams split.

Whew!

"What it means," offered 49er coach Dwight Jones, "is that if we beat Fresno State Saturday we are the league champion, or co-champion, and we have the tournament bye regardless of what anyone else does."

he-e-re's Bowie!

CHICAGO (AP) — Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley sold relief pitcher Paul Lindblad to the Texas Rangers for $400,000 Saturday and set up another possible confrontation with baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

In making the deal, Finley ignored a telegram he said he received a day earlier from Kuhn asking that the commissioner be notified of any deal involving a star player and a substantial amount of money before it is consummated.

Minutes before completing the sale, Finley vowed to defy Kuhn's request and, in announcing the deal, said: "I'm not telling the commissioner nothing . . . let him read about it in the paper like the rest of the fans."

Earlier Saturday, Finley charged that Kuhn was meddling in his negotiations to sell lefthanded pitchers Vida Blue and Lindblad, a 12-year veteran who had a 6-5 record and a 3.05 earned run average last season.

Lindblad, 35, was with Texas in 1972, when he led the league in appearances with 66. He was traded to Oakland after the season. In 1974, he had a 2.05 ERA with the A's, the best of his career. He had a 9-1 record in 1975.

Finley said he would use the $400,000 "to build my ball club."

Finley, who has sued Kuhn for voiding three other big-money deals, said that last week he received substantial cash offers from Montreal general manager Charlie Fox for Blue and from Texas president Brad Corbett for Lindblad.

Finley said Kuhn sent him and all major league club owners a telegram Friday saying the commissioner's office had been given information "indicating that certain clubs may be considering a

Oregon hands UCLA another Pac-8 shiner

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) -They will remember Greg Ballard at UCLA.

The 6-7 forward, whose two free throws with one second remaining gave Oregon a 61-60 basketball victory in Westwood last month, did it again Saturday.

He scored 28 points, 16 of them in the first nine minutes of the second half, as the Ducks dumped the third-ranked Bruins, 64-55, leaving the two teams tied for the lead in the Pacic-8 Conference at 8-3 with three games remaining.

"Greg Ballard is the best player in the Pac-8. I've said it all along," said Oregon coach Dick Harter. "It's just that the press up here isn't as powerful as the press in Southern California and he hasn't gotten the recognition that he should have."

Harter was referring to the attention given UCLA's all-America forward Marques Johnson, who led the Bruins with 22 points.

"I've been hot before, but never anything like eight for eight," said Ballard, wearing only a net from one of the baskets as he talked to reporters in the dressing room.

Actually, Ballard was seven for seven and all came in the first nine minutes as the Ducks battled back from a 37-29 halftime deficit.

Unheralded Kelvin Small scored all eight of his points down the stretch as Oregon (17-7) pulled away from the harassed Bruins, who didn't score in the last 4:46 of the game.

It was UCLA's fourth loss in 24 games.

Oregon grabbed the lead for good on Small's tip-in with 8:55 remaining.

UCLA closed to within two, 57-55, with 4:46 to go as Johnson scored two quick baskets. Small scored from inside with 3:45 left and the Bruins never scored again.

"We had some defensive breakdowns in the second half," said UCLA coach Gene Bartow. "The guards today weren't quite as alert as they were against Oregon State and Washington State."

Harter, who was called for a technical foul for saying something to Bartow in front of the UCLA bench in the first half, praised his team's defense.

The Bruins were just seven for 23 from the floor in the second half. Oregon was 14 for 21 in the same span.

"The story of the ball game was defense," Harter said. "We played their basketball in the first half, just chuck and duck, NBA-style. In the second half we took over the attack."

Freshman John Murray kept Oregon in the game with 12 first-half points. He finished with 14.

UCLA's Roy Hamilton scored all 11 of his points in the first half. Hamilton and fellow guard Jim Spillane were 5 of 17 from the field

Rogie not too ill to score shutout

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

Rogie Vachon was a sick winner Saturday night.

Climbing out of sick bay, the Kings' gutty, little goaltender notched his second shutout of the week and the fourth in the last 10 games as coach Bob Pulford's skaters defeated the Boston Bruins, 2-0, before an enthusiastic crowd of 14,178 at the Forum.

The two-point victory, coupled with Pittsburgh's 6-6 draw in Toronto, enabled the Kings to creep within eight points of the second-place Penguins in the Norris Division.

Mike Murphy's 22nd goal of the season, a 30-foot blast at 10:46 of the first period, and Butch Goring's 24th goal with 1:02 remaining accounted for the scoring in which the Kings were outshot by the Bruins, 29-27.

The Kings also enjoyed their first penalty-free game in their 10-year history as referee Wally Harris didn't see fit to whistle a single infraction during the frantic 60 minutes of sustained action.

The defeat knocked Boston out of a first-place tie in the Adams Division since Buffalo beat Detroit, 2-1, to regain a two-point lead.

Vachon's shutout was the 38th of his NHL career and 25th as a King. It didn't come easy, either. Considered by many hockey observers as the best goaltender on a one-on-one situation, Vachon made a big save on Stan Jonathan's breakaway in the first period.

Jean Ratelle, who had a five-game scoring streak going, saw his sweeping shot repulsed with 8:10 left in the game and Vachon then brought the crowd to its feet when he stopped away Wayne Cashman's blast with 2:56 remaining.

Following his fifth shutout of the season which boosted his won-loss record to 21-20-9, Vachon said, "I felt good enough to play tonight so I decided to give it a go.

Fullerton stymies LBSU 'bye' hopes

Close normally counts only in horseshoes and hand grenades.

Saturday night it meant something to Long Beach State in a basketball game.

The 49ers were beaten, 78-73, by Cal State Fullerton, but the margin of defeat could prove significant in determining who receives the first-round bye in the post-season tournament that will determine the Pacific Coast Athletic Association's representative in the NCAA tournament.

Presently, there are four teams tied, in the loss column, for first place in the PCAA — Long Beach State, Cal State Fullerton, San Jose State and San Diego State.

Long Beach concludes its conference season Saturday night in the Long Beach Arena against Fresno State. Fullerton and San Diego are on the road with games at Pacific and San Jose.

If two or more teams tie for the league crown, the recipient of the bye will be determined first by series records between the teams involved and then by margin of victory in the two games if the series is tied.

Long Beach State beat San Diego twice, an after Saturday night's defeat, has a one-point edge over Fullerton in a two-game series the teams split.

Whew!

"What it means," offered 49er coach Dwight Jones, "is that if we beat Fresno State Saturday we are the league champion, or co-champion, and we have the tournament bye regardless of what anyone else does."

Finley sells...and he-e-re's Bowie!

CHICAGO (AP) — Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley sold relief pitcher Paul Lindblad to the Texas Rangers for $400,000 Saturday and set up another possible confrontation with baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

In making the deal, Finley ignored a telegram he said he received a day earlier from Kuhn asking that the commissioner be notified of any deal involving a star player and a substantial amount of money before it is consummated.

Minutes before completing the sale, Finley vowed to defy Kuhn's request and, in announcing the deal, said: "I'm not telling the commissioner nothing . . . let him read about it in the paper like the rest of the fans."

Earlier Saturday, Finley charged that Kuhn was meddling in his negotiations to sell lefthanded pitchers Vida Blue and Lindblad, a 12-year veteran who had a 6-5 record and a 3.05 earned run average last season.

Lindblad, 35, was with Texas in 1972, when he led the league in appearances with 66. He was traded to Oakland after the season. In 1974, he had a 2.05 ERA with the A's, the best of his career. He had a 9-1 record in 1975.

Finley said he would use the $400,000 "to build my ball club."

Finley, who has sued Kuhn for voiding three other big-money deals, said that last week he received substantial cash offers from Montreal general manager Charlie Fox for Blue and from Texas president Brad Corbett for Lindblad.

Finley said Kuhn sent him and all major league club owners a telegram Friday saying the commissioner's office had been given information "indicating that certain clubs may be considering a

Oregon hands UCLA another Pac-8 shiner

EUGENE, Ore. (AP)—They will remember Greg Ballard at UCLA.

The 6-7 forward, whose two free throws with one second remaining gave Oregon a 61-60 basketball victory in Westwood last month, did it again Saturday.

He scored 28 points, 16 of them in the first nine minutes of the second half, as the Ducks dumped the third-ranked Bruins, 64-55, leaving the two teams tied for the lead in the Pacic-8 Conference at 8-3 with three games remaining.

"Greg Ballard is the best player in the Pac-8. I've said it all along," said Oregon coach Dick Harter. "It's just that the press up here isn't as powerful as the press in Southern California and he hasn't gotten the recognition that he should have."

Harter was referring to the attention given UCLA's all-America forward Marques Johnson, who led the Bruins with 22 points.

"I've been hot before, but never anything like eight for eight," said Ballard, wearing only a net from one of the baskets as he talked to reporters in the dressing room.

Actually, Ballard was seven for seven and all came in the first nine minutes as the Ducks battled back from a 37-29 halftime deficit.

Unheralded Kelvin Small scored all eight of his points down the stretch as Oregon (17-7) pulled away from the harassed Bruins, who didn't score in the last 4:46 of the game.

It was UCLA's fourth loss in 24 games.

Oregon grabbed the lead for good on Small's tip-in with 8:55 remaining.

UCLA closed to within two, 57-55, with 4:46 to go as Johnson scored two quick baskets. Small scored from inside with 3:45 left and the Bruins never scored again.

"We had some defensive breakdowns in the second half," said UCLA coach Gene Bartow. "The guards today weren't quite as alert as they were against Oregon State and Washington State."

Harter, who was called for a technical foul for saying something to Bartow in front of the UCLA bench in the first half, praised his team's defense.

The Bruins were just seven for 23 from the floor in the second half. Oregon was 14 for 21 in the same span.

"The story of the ball game was defense," Harter said. "We played their basketball in the first half, just chuck and duck, NBA-style. In the second half we took over the attack."

Freshman John Murray kept Oregon in the game with 12 first-half points. He finished with 14.

UCLA's Roy Hamilton scored all 11 of his points in the first half. Hamilton and fellow guard Jim Spillane were 5 of 17 from the field

Rogie not too ill to score shutout

By AL LARSON
Staff Writer

Rogie Vachon was a sick winner Saturday night.

Climbing out of sick bay, the Kings' gutty, little goaltender notched his second shutout of the week and the fourth in the last 10 games as coach Bob Pulford's skaters defeated the Boston Bruins, 2-0, before an enthusiastic crowd of 14,178 at the Forum.

The two-point victory, coupled with Pittsburgh's 6-6 draw in Toronto, enabled the Kings to creep within eight points of the second-place Penguins in the Norris Division.

Mike Murphy's 22nd goal of the season, a 30-foot blast at 10:46 of the first period, and Butch Goring's 24th goal with 1:02 remaining accounted for the scoring in which the Kings were outshot by the Bruins, 29-27.

The Kings also enjoyed their first penalty-free game in their 10-year history as referee Wally Harris didn't see fit to whistle a single infraction during the frantic 60 minutes of sustained action.

The defeat knocked Boston out of a first-place tie in the Adams Division since Buffalo beat Detroit, 2-1, to regain a two-point lead.

Vachon's shutout was the 38th of his NHL career and 25th as a King. It didn't come easy, either. Considered by many hockey observers as the best goaltender on a one-on-one situation, Vachon made a big save on Stan Jonathan's breakaway in the first period.

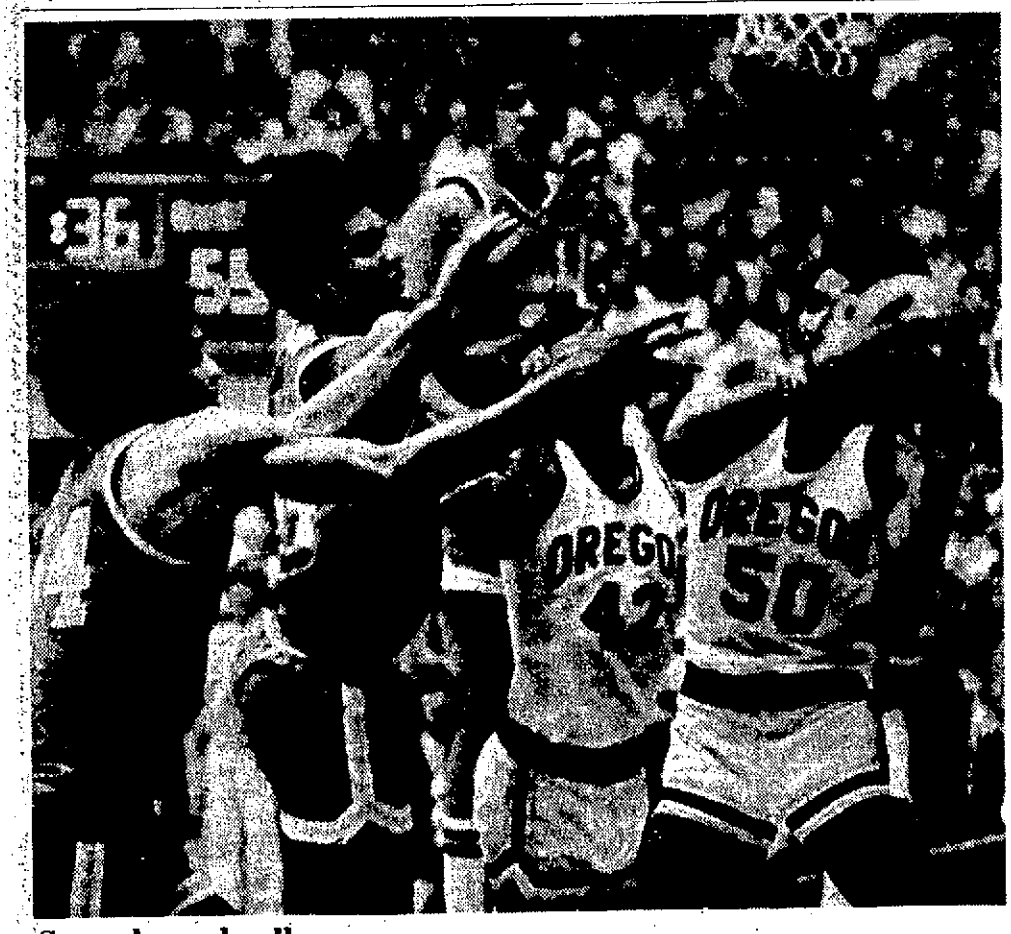

Jean Ratelle, who had a five-game scoring streak going, saw his sweeping shot repulsed with 8:10 left in the game and Vachon then brought the crowd to its feet when he stopped away Wayne Cashman's blast with 2:56 remaining.

Following his fifth shutout of the season which boosted his won-loss record to 21-20-9, Vachon said, "I felt good enough to play tonight so I decided to give it a go.

College highlights

Tennessee 92, Alabama 89: Mike Jackson hit a 15-foot jumper with four minutes to play to break an 81-81 tie and send the 14th-ranked Vols past fourth-rated Alabama. The score was knotted seven times but Alabama held a 39-38 lead at intermission.

Virginia 81, Notre Dame 68: Despite a height disadvantage Virginia outrebounded the Irish 43-39 and, coupled with its hot shooting, jumped out to an early lead and never trailed. The Mountaineers led 40-27 at intermission and their biggest lead was 15 points.

Kentucky 90, LSU 76: Host LSU led 39-38 at intermission but both of its forwards fouled out in the second half. Second-ranked Kentucky moved to a 10-point lead early in the second half and LSU was unable to catch up.

Wichita St. 75, Marquette 64: Wichita St. nearly squandered all of an 11-point first half lead, then regained momentum early in the second half with the help of two technical fouls on Marquette coach Al McGuire. It was Marquette's third loss in a row.

Oral Roberts 110, N. Carolina A&T 64: The Titans' Anthony Roberts outscored the visiting Aggies by totaling 66 points for a school record. Roberts scored 10 of his points in a five minute stretch early in the second half when Oral Roberts blitzed North Carolina 17-0 to take a 73-39 lead.

Va. Tech 98, Wake Forest 97: Duke Thorpe scored on a follow-up, then sank two foul shots with 38 seconds left in overtime for the upset of the seventh-ranked Deacons.

Duquesne 95, Detroit 88: Duquesne upset the nation's fifth-ranked team by opening the overtime period with four consecutive baskets. The Dukes nearly won the game in regulation but Detroit's Terry Duerod extended the contest with a basket with three seconds to go.

UN-Las Vegas 112, Portland St. 96: The sixth-ranked Rebels led 54-45 at the half before outscoring Portland 17-3 in the first four minutes of the second half to grab a 71-48 lead and put the game away.

Beavers blitz Trojans with first-half punch

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP)—Oregon State stayed in the mixed-up Pacific-8 Conference basketball race with an easy, 80-65 win over Southern California Saturday night.

The win put the Beavers at 7-4, a game off the pace of leaders UCLA and Oregon, but OSU now faces road games against Washington, Washington State and Oregon. The Trojans dropped to 1-10.

OSU was led by senior guard Rocky Smith who had 25 points. Senior guard George Tucker and junior forward Ricky Lee added 14 each.

Forward Paul Henderson scored 15 and guard Marv Safford had 13 for the Trojans who were not in the contest after the first five minutes.

Smith's jumper from the corner capped 10 successive Beaver points for their biggest lead of the night, 40-21, with 2:01 to go in the first half. The Beavers outscored the visitors 21-8 in the final nine minutes of the half for a 41-24 lead at intermission.

The Trojans, behind the shooting of Henderson and Cleve Porter, rallied to get within 11 points several times in the second half, the last time at 66-55 with 6:07 remaining.

Two free throws by Henderson sparked the Beaver homestretch surge that put it out of the Trojans' reach.

49ERS LOSE—

From a medical standpoint, they were a mess. For example:

• Freshman guard Donnie Martin was on the sidelines with a broken index finger on his right hand.

• Lloyd McMillian, the team's leading rebounder and scorer, saw only 18 minutes of playing time because he is suffering from a badly sprained right wrist, injured in Thursday's win over San Diego State.

Additionally, the 49ers were without 6-10 Mark Stell, who is presently ineligible, and starting forward Larry Hudson, who "missed the team bus."

"I don't know where he is," Jones said of Hudson. "He was at practice yesterday, but he wasn't there when the bus left and I haven't heard from him."

That forced Jones to use reserves extensively against the Titans, and he got quality responses from Michael Wiley, Francois Wise, Tony McGee and Danny Marques.

Their efforts weren't enough, however, to offset the fine play by three unsung members of the Titan team — guard Kevin Heenan, forward Kerry Davis and center Steve Shaw.

That threesome combined for 49 of Fullerton's points and neutralized a subpar performance by junior Greg Bunch, last year's conference player of the year.

It was Heenan's baseline bombing that bent, then broke the 49er zone late in the first half.

"We broke down defensively late in the first half, and that turned out to be the difference in the game," said Jones.

"They made something like 10 of their last 12 shots, and Heenan had four of them."

The Titans led by eight at intermission, and threatened on several occasions to blow the 49ers out of the gym in the second half.

But each time Long Beach would struggle to get back into the contest.

The last comeback proved significant.

The Titans were leading by 11 with 2:50 to play on a spectacular driving shot by Heenan when consecutive baskets by Richard Johnson, Dale Dillon and McMillian got Long Beach within five, 74-69, with 1:20 to play.

The Titans' Keith Anderson calmed that burst with a pair of free throws and then Anderson and Shaw each hit one charity toss to offset baskets by Johnson and Wise.

Jones had his team playing for a win until the final seven seconds, when Marques fouled Anderson.

Anderson hit his first free throw, but missed the second, which would have tied the so-called "series point spread."

The 49ers rebounded and Marques casually brought the ball upcourt as time expired.

Heenan finished with 17 points, but, as significantly, his outside pounding opened up the inside for Shaw, who had 13 points, and Davis, who had 19.

Wiley led Long Beach with 18, followed by Johnson (17) and Clarence Ruffen (13). Johnson (13) and Ruffen (12) also sparked the 49ers to a 52-39.

It falls in the category of old news, but the 49ers had trouble at the foul line again, missing 10 of 21 free throws.

Millikan, St. Anthony post shutouts

Millikan senior Jim Estes paced a day of fine pitching performances by throwing a one-hitter at Miraleste Saturday for a 3-0 victory in the El Segundo baseball tournament.

Estes, who fanned eight and walked three, surrendered the only hit with two out in the first inning. Centerfielder Brian Rookey provided all the needed offense with a two-run single in the fifth.

In other tournament action, St. Anthony blanked Artesia, 7-0, on the strength of Joe Plummer's three-hitter and Jordan fell victim to a three-hit job by Excelsior's Mark Rankin, losing 4-0.

Plummer was staked to a 2-0 lead after one inning and protected it by striking out 13 batters. He walked five.

Evert comes back to topple Casals in L.A. tennis play

Chris Evert pulled her faltering game together and stormed back from an 0-4 deficit in the third set to defeat Rosemary Casals, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, in the semifinals of the $100,000 Los Angeles women's pro tennis tournament Saturday night at the L.A. Sports Arena.

In the other semi, Martina Navratilova defeated Margaret Court, 5-7, 6-4, 6-4.

Miss Evert, ranked No. 1 in the world, suffered from a poor first serve throughout the match and was also inconsistent with her ususaily deadly ground strokes until the fifth game of the final set.

With Ms. Casals serving, Miss Evert racked up three straight points on a drop volley, a breathtaking passing shot on return of serve and one of Ms. Casals' errors. Then, at 15-40, Miss Evert moved across to the wrong side of the service lane to deliver a two-handed backhand that passed the charging Ms. Casals, who stared at her in wonder.

But it was only 4-1, and only Miss Evert's first break since the sixth game of the second set.

The Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., player ripped off 20 of the next 25 points to win the match.

KINGS WIN—

"It was like food poisoning—I won't mention the restaurant. I didn't feel good enough to go into the morning practice today. I only ate toast and tea, but when I stopped the breakaway I felt a lot better," said Vachon.

"We made some mistakes in the first period, but we got through it. I've had a lot of confidence in the last 10 games. I'm playing my game now.

"The name of the game for a goalie is to make the big save. If you do, you can take it the other way. I think I'm playing the best I've played all year in the last 10 games. But the team is, too. It's a good time to start building up. Even if we do not finish second we'll be ready for the playoffs."

Vachon wasn't the only hero for the Kings. Defensemen Gary Sargent, Bob Murdoch and Larry Brown turned in strong performances while centerman Vic Venasky turned in an outstanding checking game.

Marcel Dionne, who saw his five-game goal scoring streak snapped, fell back in his pursuit for the scoring title. Montreal's Guy Lafleur picked up a goal and assist to push his point total to 93—seven ahead of Dionne.

Boston coach Don Cherry said, "We've gone six periods in a row without a penalty being called against the opposing team. It's rather unusual to say the least. We're setting records for the least powerplay goals in 80 games."

College highlights

Tennessee 92, Alabama 89: Mike Jackson hit a 15-foot jumper with four minutes to play to break an 81-81 tie and send the 14th-ranked Vols past fourth-rated Alabama. The score was knoted seven times but Alabama held a 39-38 lead at intermission.

Virginia 81, Notre Dame 68: Despite a height disadvantage, Virginia outrebounded the Irish 43-39 and, coupled with its hot shooting, jumped out to an early lead and never trailed. The Mountaineers led 40-27 at intermission and their biggest lead was 15 points.

Kentucky 90, LSU 76: Host LSU led 39-38 at intermission but both of its forwards fouled out in the second half. Second-ranked Kentucky moved to a 10-point lead early in the second half and LSU was unable to catch up.

Wichita St. 75, Marquette 64: Wichita St. nearly squandered all of an 11-point first half lead, then regained momentum early in the second half with the help of two technical fouls on Marquette coach Al McGuire. It was Marquette's third loss in a row.

Oral Roberts 110, N. Carolina A&T 64: The Titans' Anthony Roberts outscored the visiting Aggies by totaling 66 points for a school record. Roberts scored 10 of his points in a five minute stretch early in the second half when Oral Roberts blitzed North Carolina 17-0 to take a 73-36 lead.

Va. Tech 98, Wake Forest 97: Duke Thorpe scored on a follow-up, then sank two foul shots with 38 seconds left in overtime for the upset of the seventh-ranked Deacons.

Duquesne 95, Detroit 88: Duquesne upset the nation's fifth-ranked team by opening the overtime period with four consecutive baskets. The Dukes nearly won the game in regulation but Detroit's Terry Duerod extended the contest with a basket with three seconds to go.

UN-Las Vegas 112, Portland St. 96: The sixth-ranked Rebels led 54-45 at the half before outscoring Portland 17-3 in the first four minutes of the second half to grab a 71-48 lead and put the game away.

Beavers blitz Trojans with first-half punch

CORVALLIS, Ore. (AP)—Oregon State stayed in the mixed-up Pacific-8 Conference basketball race with an easy, 80-65 win over Southern California Saturday night.

The win put the Beavers at 7-4, a game off the pace of leaders UCLA and Oregon, but OSU now faces road games against Washington, Washington State and Oregon. The Trojans dropped to 1-10.

OSU was led by senior guard Rocky Smith who had 25 points. Senior guard George Tucker and junior forward Ricky Lee added 14 each.

Forward Paul Henderson scored 15 and guard Marv Safford had 13 for the Trojans who were not in the contest after the first five minutes.

Smith's jumper from the corner capped 10 successive Beaver points for their biggest lead of the night, 40-21, with 2:01 to go in the first half. The Beavers outscored the visitors 21-8 in the final nine minutes of the half for a 41-24 lead at intermission.

The Trojans, behind the shooting of Henderson and Cleve Porter, rallied to get within 11 points several times in the second half, the last time at 66-55 with 6:07 remaining.

Two free throws by Henderson sparked the Beaver homestretch surge that put it out of the Trojans' reach.

49ERS LOSE—

From a medical standpoint, they were a mess. For example:

• Freshman guard Donnie Martin was on the sidelines with a broken index finger on his right hand.

• Lloyd McMillian, the team's leading rebounder and scorer, saw only 18 minutes of playing time because he is suffering from a badly sprained right wrist, injured in Thursday's win over San Diego State.

Additionally, the 49ers were without 6-10 Mark Stefl, who is presently ineligible, and starting forward Larry Hudson, who "missed the team bus."

"I don't know where he is," Jones said of Hudson. "He was at practice yesterday, but he wasn't there when the bus left and I haven't heard from him."

That forced Jones to use reserves extensively against the Titans, and he got quality responses from Michael Wiley, Francois Wise, Tony McGee and Danny Marques.

Their efforts weren't enough, however, to offset the fine play by three unsung members of the Titan team — guard Kevin Heenan, forward Kerry Davis and center Steve Shaw.

That threesome combined for 49 of Fullerton's points and neutralized a subpar performance by junior Greg Bunch, last year's conference player of the year.

It was Heenan's baseline bombing that bent, then broke the 49er zone late in the first half.

"We broke down defensively late in the first half, and that turned out to be the difference in the game," said Jones.

"They made something like 10 of their last 12 shots, and Heenan had four of them."

The Titans led by eight at intermission, and threatened on several occasions to blow the 49ers out of the gym in the second half.

But each time Long Beach would struggle to get back into the contest.

The last comeback proved significant.

The Titans were leading by 11 with 2:50 to play on a spectacular driving shot by Heenan when consecutive baskets by Richard Johnson, Dale Dillon and McMillian got Long Beach within five, 74-69, with 1:20 to play.

The Titans' Keith Anderson calmed that burst with a pair of free throws and then Anderson and Shaw each hit one charity toss to offset baskets by Johnson and Wise.

Jones had his team playing for a win until the final seven seconds, when Marques fouled Anderson.

Anderson hit his first free throw, but missed the second, which would have tied the so-called "series point spread."

The 49ers rebounded and Marques casually brought the ball upcourt as time expired.

Heenan finished with 17 points, but, as significantly, his outside pounding opened up the inside for Shaw, who had 13 points, and Davis, who had 19.

Wiley led Long Beach with 18, followed by Johnson (17) and Clarence Ruffen (13). Johnson (13) and Ruffen (12) also sparked the 49ers to a 52-39.

It falls in the category of old news, but the 49ers had trouble at the foul line again, missing 10 of 21 free throws.

Millikan, St. Anthony post shutouts

Millikan senior Jim Estes paced a day of fine pitching performances by throwing a one-hitter at Miraleste Saturday for a 3-0 victory in the El Segundo baseball tournament.

Estes, who fanned eight and walked three, surrendered the only hit with two out in the first inning. Centerfielder Brian Rookey provided all the needed offense with a two-run single in the fifth.

In other tournament action, St. Anthony blanked Artesia, 7-0, on the strength of Joe Plummer's three-hitter and Jordan fell victim to a three-hit job by Excelsior's Mark Rankin, losing 4-0.

Plummer was staked to a 2-0 lead after one inning and protected it by striking out 13 batters. He walked five.

Evert comes back to topple Casals in L.A. tennis play

Chris Evert pulled her faltering game together and stormed back from an 0-4 deficit in the third set to defeat Rosemary Casals, 4-6, 6-3, 6-4, in the semifinals of the $100,000 Los Angeles women's pro tennis tournament Saturday night at the L.A. Sports Arena.

In the other semi, Martina Navratilova defeated Margaret Court, 5-7, 6-4, 6-4.

Miss Evert, ranked No. 1 in the world, suffered from a poor first serve throughout the match and was also inconsistent with her ususally deadly ground strokes until the fifth game of the final set.

With Ms. Casals serving, Miss Evert racked up three straight points on a drop volley, a breathtaking passing shot on return of serve and one of Ms. Casals' errors. Then, at 15-40, Miss Evert moved across to the wrong side of the service lane to deliver a two-handed backhand that passed the charging Ms. Casals, who stared at her in wonder.

But it was only 4-1, and only Miss Evert's first break since the sixth game of the second set.

The Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., player ripped off 20 of the next 25 points to win the match.

KINGS WIN—

"It was like food poisoning—I won't mention the restaurant. I didn't feel good enough to go into the morning practice today. I only ate toast and tea, but when I stopped the breakaway I felt a lot better," said Vachon.

"We made some mistakes in the first period, but we got through it. I've had a lot of confidence in the last 10 games. I'm playing my game now.

"The name of the game for a goalie is to make the big save. If you do, you can take it the other way. I think I'm playing the best I've played all year in the last 10 games. But the team is, too. It's a good time to start building up. Even if we do not finish second we'll be ready for the playoffs."

Vachon wasn't the only hero for the Kings. Defensemen Gary Sargent, Bob Murdoch and Larry Brown turned in strong performances while centerman Vic Venasky turned in an outstanding checking game.

Marcel Dionne, who saw his five-game goal scoring streak snapped, fell back in his pursuit for the scoring title. Montreal's Guy Lafleur picked up a goal and assist to push his point total to 93—seven ahead of Dionne.

Boston coach Don Cherry said, "We've gone six periods in a row without a penalty being called against the opposing team. It's rather unusual to say the least. We're setting records for the least powerplay goals in 80 games."

Kings' goalie No. 2—and happy

Simmons tattoos legend . . . or does he?

He comes off the ice flushed, sweating and breathing heavily, and before he settles down to talk he asks for some cigarettes and soda pop.

Gary Simmons doesn't drink and plays about as much, which is his lot with the Kings as backup goaltender to Rogie Vachon. He is Wally Pipp to Lou Gehrig, Terry Hanratty wherever he may be.

So Simmons works hard in practice because he doesn't get much exercise on game nights, save to skate around in circles between periods. It's too bad, because most fans will never appreciate him. Simmons is the stuff from which legends are made.

First, there are the tattoos.

"I've got about 10," he says, "and I'm not getting anymore. I suppose most people, after they get 'em, are ashamed of 'em, so when they're asked why they got 'em they'll say, well, I was drunk at the time.

"I was 16 and stone-cold sober. Three of us went up to Calgary to join the (Canadian) Navy. We did all the stuff you have to do and then we went to the tattoo parlor."

Simmons' explanation is simple: "All sailors have tattoos."

Almost immediately, Simmons changed his mind and backed out of the Navy, although he couldn't do anything about the tattoos. His buddies stayed in and will retire in four years.

"But I'll have a better pension," Gary says.

SIMMONS IS a partner in two pizza restaurants in northern California.

But he says, "I don't eat pizza. I hate pizza."

Nevertheless, he adds, "We can use the plug."

His nickname is "Cobra," bestowed by minor league veteran Bob Barlow when Simmons was at Phoenix. But Gary is terrified of snakes.

He has done some bull riding in rodeos and loves horses, although they don't like him. They make him sneeze and wheeze.

"I'm asthmatic," he explains. "I'm going to take some shots."

That's good, because he owns a 20-acre ranch near Angels Camp and plans to buy horses for his wife and daughter.

IT SAYS SOMETHING about professional goalies that the National Hockey League Guide lists them separately from the other players, in the back.

"When I think about it," Gary muses, "there are a lot of goofy goaltenders. The nature of the job, if you'll let it, will get to you.

"I realize that because I'm playing behind the best goalkeeper in the world I'm not going to play much, so I have to work hard and be ready when I do play . . . and I'm enjoying it."

"The goalie with the Rangers, (Gilles) Gratton, streaked in a restaurant where they were playing one night.

"A few years ago a coach walked into the dressing room and heard somebody talking. Looked in the bathroom and the goaltender was in there shaving and going over the Scriptures to the mirror."

Simmons allows that "he was a Christian, and if you have to have habits, that's probably the best one to get into. But you don't see it very often.

"I remember reading about the old-timer Wilfie Cude. His wife was just trying to make conversation about the weather and he threw a steak against the wall. By the time it hit the floor, he'd retired.

"What about the guy the other night—Al Smith in Buffalo? In warmups, he waved to the crowd, skated off the ice and nobody's seen him since."

GARY SIMMONS
He's No. 1—in practice

DESPITE HIS unusual variety of interests, Simmons believes he is nearer normalcy than most goalies.

"I'm probably more easy going than most of them," he says. "My partner here, Rogie, is too."

There are those who would believe he is too lackadaisical because, even with expansion and two leagues, Simmons, now 32, didn't reach the bigs until he was 30.

"Maybe I got that reputation," he says, "but I didn't have it in Phoenix when I played there. We won two championships. I worked hard. I did get in a rut with the Seals. They had been losers for so long that maybe after awhile I got lazy and adopted a loser's attitude."

Then the NHL shipped Simmons and the poverty stricken Seals from Oakland to Cleveland, which he calls "Mistake-On-The-Lake."

"That had to be the worst three months of my life," he says.

HE CAME to the Kings on Jan. 21, along with forward Jim Moxey, in exchange for Juha Widing and Gary Edwards, Vachon's previous understudy who was not happy at all playing a supporting role.

Presumably, Edwards is no happier in Cleveland, where nobody gets paid.

Simmons prefers his position.

"I realize that because I'm playing behind the best goalkeeper in the world I'm not going to play much, so I have to work hard and be ready when I do play . . . and I'm enjoying it.

"It makes it much easier knowing you're playing with the best. Rogie is the best. I love to win and I hate to lose, but I'm very much for the team aspect. I pull just as hard for Rogie as I do for myself. It's a tall order, but when I play I have to give the club the same goalkeeping they get when Rogie plays."

SEE, Gary Byrne Simmons can be serious. Although he seldom plays and he drinks nothing stronger than ginger ale, he will receive his share of publicity because he is a colorful personality.

Perhaps the first media person to discover this was the radio announcer who once interviewedim between periods of an obscure game in Newfoundland, which even Canadians consider to be two blocks from the ends of the earth.

"Well, Gary," the announcer said, "in your short time here what do you think of Newfoundland?"

Simmons: "Not much."

Announcer: "Well, er, this has been quite a game so far, don't you think?"

Simmons: "I couldn't say. It's so dark in this rink you can't see a thing. It's hard to tell if you're playing hockey or getting mugged."

The announcer, laughing hysterically, broke for a commercial.

Arriving in L.A. last month, Simmons was greeted by a longtime acquaintance who is a well-known Southland TV sports personality. The man mentioned Gary's abstinence from alcohol.

RICH ROBERTS

"Then he said something about his abstinence. I told him right on the air that I didn't know he drank until I saw him sober once."

SIMMONS WILL admit to the truth of most of the stories about him, but a few are apocryphal. For example, following each season he does not depart civilization to live with the Indians in Arizona.

"I don't know where that got started," he says. "When I was playing in Phoenix I had a friend on the team, Howie Young, who was a reformed alcoholic and knew the problems Indians have with booze. Two or three times I went out with him to an Indian school, and that's all we'd talk about."

Are there any tales left untold?

Gary ponders the question.

"One thing I've never told anybody," he begins, "is about how I really got into hockey. My whole career in hockey stemmed from when I went to a strip show at the Calgary Stampede . . ."

BUD TUCKER

Ram 'family' will survive, may even adopt Joe Willie

In the event you have remained abreast of the ridiculous saga involving the Los Angeles Rams, it is likely you are either (a) amused by absurdity or (b) concerned about the welfare of the franchise.

In either case, rest assured. The soiled linen of the Ram "family" will doubtless continue to be laundered in public and there is really no danger of the operation going down three times and coming up twice.

For openers, it apparently makes no particularly difference who is the coach. At least, there now seems some reason to believe the major decisions, such as who will play quarterback, can be made elsewhere if necessary.

Therefore, if one coach departs for more desirable surroundings, so be it. There is a waiting list willing to endure the hardships of earning $100,000 a year listening to the rantings of the owner.

MORE IMPORTANT, the implications of the Rams quarterback situation should not create dismay.

Admittedly, a sufferer of the Rams might grow despondent over the departure of Ron Jaworski and the reduction of James Harris to a nervous wreck and malcontent wishing to be traded. However, any panic at this point is premature.

To begin with, Pat Haden will be back more capable and confident than he was throughout the season of 1976 when only such weird developments as blocked kicks kept the Rams out of Super Bowl XI. This is gratifying, to be sure, but only part of the good news.

The cataclysmic bulletin is that Joe Willie Namath has again informed the Rams that he will not stand idly aside while harm befalls the franchise. Joe feels an inherent devotion to the Rams for various reasons, not the least of which is geography.

THE RAMS operation is located near Hollywood Boulevard, the Sunset Strip and the Polo Lounge.

Joe Willie is ready. In fact, when reciting his annual resignation from the New York Jets the first thing Joe says is that the Rams made a terrible mistake in not snatching him a year ago.

Joe is willing. He has gone so far as let it be known his salary would be open to negotiation.

The only question is whether Joe is able. His knees are not such that you would back him financially in the Boston Marathon or, for that matter, an all-night crap game.

But Namath says there may be as much as two year's tread remaining on his knees, stressing that no small difference would be made by an offensive line other than the one protecting him during the past few seasons.

IF NAMATH is enamored of the Rams, it is no secret the Rams feel kindly toward Joe. This is particularly true in the case of owner Carroll Rosenbloom who is also known as "C.R." and "Great White Father."

A family man football-wise, Great White Father would not be a party to Joe Namath somehow being exiled to Denver or New England or, God forbid, Seattle or Tampa Bay.

Rosenbloom is as aware as the rest of us of such historic tragedies as Rusty Staub being traded out of Montreal, Deacon Jones being banished to San Diego and Golden Boy Paul Hornung spending an entire career in Green Bay.

Moreover, it is not likely Great White Father will take points away from Broadway Joe for being the sort of oddity that sells tickets. Neither does C.R. object to being surrounded by a crowd of show biz guys and the addition of one more won't hurt.

Much seems about to transpire within the Ram family, including the adoption of Joe Willie.

Meanwhile, Namath prepares for football by playing golf in warm climates in deference to his wheels. Also, Joe says he is continuing his lessons in drama, speech, music and dancing.

Dancing?

It was Fred Astaire who said the knees are the first to go.

Dick Weber tops K.C. pin tourney

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Dick Weber, the all-time high money winner from St. Louis, captured his 26th professional bowling title Saturday by defeating top-seeded Gary Mage of Seattle 227-191 in the payoff game of this week's $75,000 tournament on the PBA tour.

Weber won $8,000 and pulled into a tie with Don Johnson for second place on the all-time victory list. Earl Anthony leads with 27.

California riddles Stanford aquas

BERKELEY (AP)—The California Bears won a Pacific-8 Conference dual swimming meet with Stanford for the first time in 38 years Saturday, 73-40, in spite of an outstanding performance by Stanford Olympian Mike Bruner, who set three meet records.

Bruner's marks were in the 200-yard freestyle (1:39.3), 200-butterfly (1:48.9) and 500-freestyle (4:35.3). His butterfly time is a national best this year.

Dave Fairbank of Stanford had the best time this year nationally in setting a meet record of 20.5 seconds in the 50-yard freestyle. He also won the 100-freestyle in 46.1.

Cal won both diving events and the two relays and got a meet-record time of 1:54.2 from Peter Rocca in the 200-backstroke.

Ashe caught, Namath still No. 1

Sports bachelor list dwindles

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP)—The capture of Arthur Ashe by a pretty free-lance photographer takes another of sport's eligible bachelors out of circulation, leaving Broadway Joe Namath as chief of a vanishing breed.

Ashe, 33, former Wimbledon tennis champion and long a resister of the wedding march, finally was brought to heel by Jeanne Marie Moutoussamy, who will become his bride today. They will be married by U.S. ambassador Andrew Young, who is a minister.

"There aren't too many eligible bachelors left," a TV model remarked after reading the latest news. "They are going fast.

"Must be the big contracts."

ONE OF the younger set, 20-year-old Bjorn Borg of Sweden, recently signed for $1.5 million with the Cleveland Nets of World Team Tennis and took himself off the Sadie Hawkins market by declaring that he was bringing along a fiancee, Mariana Simionescu of Romania.

It was a day of mourning for the yelling, tugging teeny-boppers of the tennis world.

Meanwhile, an informal poll of some of the nation's most attractive bachelorettes—magazine cover girls, television models and actresses—revealed that the No. 1 marriage target now is Namath, the swarthy football quarterback who doubles as a screen lover and TV shill for popcorn and pantyhose.

"Most of the girls agree that Broadway Joe would be a terrific catch," said Gene Barakat of New Zealand, who represents the television department for Ford Models, Inc.

"As a carryover from their school days, they still love a football hero. Joe has a strong masculine appeal plus a boyish bashfulness which the girls all love. He also is extremely rich."

Here's the scorecard on the top remaining sports bachelors, with credentials, as chosen by the models:

• Joe Namath, 33, Jets quarterback, last salary $450,000 a year, makes more than twice that much in TV appearances. Likes popcorn. Has bad knees.

• Jimmy Connors, 25, tennis champion, made more than $600,000 last year. Hot temper. Dominated by mother. Present girl friend, Miss World, Margie Wallace.

• Walt Frazier, 31, basketball star for New York Knicks, $400,000 a year. Expensive tastes, fetish for rainbow attire, mink coats and flashy cars. Should be good for dunking doughnuts.

• Dave Kingman, 28, baseball player. Tall, handsome type. Hits long ball. Best await developments. Asking more than $2 million and may be unemployed. Also, like Garbo, wants to be left alone.

• Bruce Lietzke, 25, pro golfer. Has banked $123,000 plus change this year and still going. Eager. "Remember, I'm a bachelor," he said after winning one of his two tournaments this year.

The modern sports star has replaced the old Hollywood movie heart throb as the matinee idol. He leads a glamorous life. He is constantly in the public eye, both on the playing field and on the TV screens. He swings with the jet set and normally is seen in the smart places with a bejeweled doll on each arm. In negotiating contracts, his starting point is $1 million.

"It's fashionable and prestigious to date a sports celebrity such as Namath and Kingman," Barakat, a spokesman for the models, said. "The pickings still are fairly good.

"Take Vitas Gerulaitis, a very attractive tennis player from Long Island—handsome, intelligent, charming. Craig Morton is an unmarried quarterback. Rusty Staub is a confirmed baseball bachelor. Don Murdoch, the rookie hockey player with the New York Rangers, has his own fan club. The Amritraj brothers from India are very popular among the tennis set."

There are some pretty fancy retreads—Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench, just divorced, and Reggie Jackson, the Yankees' $2.9-million commodity, who could be caught on second bounce.

Then there's 16-year-old Steve Cauthen, who is wowing 'em on the race track. Give him time to finish his Wheaties.

It's Mr. & Mrs. Ashe

• PAUL WESTPHAL, Phoenix guard on the triple-overtime game against Boston in last year's NBA finals: "In the second overtime I thought, 'Maybe history is being made.' By the end of the third overtime I knew it was. John Havlicek was sweating."

• ALAN KING, MC at the NBA All-Star banquet. "I'm about as happy to be here as Jabbar will be to get the hell out."

• ALEX METREVELLI, Soviet tennis star, explaining the difference between the Georgia in the Soviet Union and the Georgia in the United States: "There's not a single peanut in all of our Georgia."

• TERRY ALBRITTON, shot-putter, who borrows the tool of his trade from competitors, on why he does not own his own shot: "I've never really felt the need to own my own shot. I've always found it difficult to develop any real attachment to a 16-pound ball of iron."

• GEORGE RAVELING, Washington State basketball coach, asked how he would stop UCLA's Marques Johnson: "With the 82nd Airborne."

• CHARLES JOHNSON, Golden State guard, on breaking out of his two-month scoring slump: "Shooting is just like toenails. They may fall off occasionally, but you always know they'll come back."

• BILL FOSTER, Clemson basketball coach, on dislocating a shoulder during an upset victory: "I threw up my arms and one just kept on going."

• DICK KEFFER, Vanderbilt basketball captain, on being one of the nation's shorter collegiate cagers at 5-10: "The main thing is that you get elbowed a lot on top of the head."

• NORM STEWART, Missouri basketball coach who has lost five players for the season and is now down to an eight-man squad: "One thing about it, if we get to a tournament, we'll be able to go in a Volkswagen."

Presumably, Edwards is no happier in Cleveland, where nobody gets paid.

Simmons prefers his position.

"I realize that because I'm playing behind the best goalkeeper in the world I'm not going to play much, so I have to work hard and be ready when I do play . . . and I'm enjoying it.

"It makes it much easier knowing you're playing with the best. Rogie is the best. I love to win and I hate to lose, but I'm very much for the team aspect. I pull just as hard for Rogie as I do for myself. It's a tall order, but when I play I have to give the club the same goalkeeping they get when Rogie plays."

SEE, Gary Byrne Simmons can be serious. Although he seldom plays and he drinks nothing stronger than ginger ale, he will receive his share of publicity because he is a colorful personality.

Perhaps the first media person to discover this was the radio announcer who once interviewedim between periods of an obscure game in Newfoundland, which even Canadians consider to be two blocks from the ends of the earth.

"Well, Gary," the announcer said, "in your short time here what do you think of Newfoundland?"

Simmons: "Not much."

Announcer: "Well, er, this has been quite a game so far, don't you think?"

Simmons: "I couldn't say. It's so dark in this rink you can't see a thing. It's hard to tell if you're playing hockey or getting mugged."

The announcer, laughing hysterically, broke for a commercial.

Arriving in L.A. last month, Simmons was greeted by a longtime acquaintance who is a well-known Southland TV sports personality. The man mentioned Gary's abstinence from alcohol.

RICH ROBERTS

"Then he said something about his abstinence. I told him right on the air that I didn't know he drank until I saw him sober once."

SIMMONS WILL admit to the truth of most of the stories about him, but a few are apocryphal. For example, following each season he does not depart civilization to live with the Indians in Arizona.

"I don't know where that got started," he says. "When I was playing in Phoenix I had a friend on the team, Howie Young, who was a reformed alcoholic and knew the problems Indians have with booze. Two or three times I went out with him to an Indian school, and that's all we'd talk about."

Are there any tales left untold?

Gary ponders the question.

"One thing I've never told anybody," he begins, "is about how I really got into hockey. My whole career in hockey stemmed from when I went to a strip show at the Calgary Stampede . . ."

Ram 'family' will survive, may even adopt Joe Willie

In the event you have remained abreast of the ridiculous saga involving the Los Angeles Rams, it is likely you are either (a) amused by absurdity or (b) concerned about the welfare of the franchise.

In either case, rest assured. The soiled linen of the Ram "family" will doubtless continue to be laundered in public and there is really no danger of the operation going down three times and coming up twice.

For openers, it apparently makes no particularly difference who is the coach. At least, there now seems some reason to believe the major decisions, such as who will play quarterback, can be made elsewhere if necessary.

Therefore, if one coach departs for more desirable surroundings, so be it. There is a waiting list willing to endure the hardships of earning $100,000 a year listening to the rantings of the owner.

MORE IMPORTANT, the implications of the Rams quarterback situation should not create dismay.

Admittedly, a sufferer of the Rams might grow despondent over the departure of Ron Jaworski and the reduction of James Harris to a nervous wreck and malcontent wishing to be traded. However, any panic at this point is premature.

To begin with, Pat Haden will be back more capable and confident than he was throughout the season of 1976 when only such weird developments as blocked kicks kept the Rams out of Super Bowl XI. This is gratifying, to be sure, but only part of the good news.

The cataclysmic bulletin is that Joe Willie Namath has again informed the Rams that he will not stand idly aside while harm befalls the franchise. Joe feels an inherent devotion to the Rams for various reasons, not the least of which is geography.

THE RAMS operation is located near Hollywood Boulevard, the Sunset Strip and the Polo Lounge.

Joe Willie is ready. In fact, when reciting his annual resignation from the New York Jets the first thing Joe says is that the Rams made a terrible mistake in not snatching him a year ago.

Joe is willing. He has gone so far as let it be known his salary would be open to negotiation.

The only question is whether Joe is able. His knees are not such that you would back him financially in the Boston Marathon or, for that matter, an all-night crap game.

But Namath says there may be as much as two year's tread remaining on his knees, stressing that no small difference would be made by an offensive line other than the one protecting him during the past few seasons.

IF NAMATH is enamored of the Rams, it is no secret the Rams feel kindly toward Joe. This is particularly true in the case of owner Carroll Rosenbloom who is also known as "C.R." and "Great White Father."

A family man football-wise, Great White Father would not be a party to Joe Namath somehow being exiled to Denver or New England or, God forbid, Seattle or Tampa Bay.

Rosenbloom is as aware as the rest of us of such historic tragedies as Rusty Staub being traded out of Montreal, Deacon Jones being banished to San Diego and Golden Boy Paul Hornung spending an entire career in Green Bay.

Moreover, it is not likely Great White Father will take points away from Broadway Joe for being the sort of oddity that sells tickets. Neither does C.R. object to being surrounded by a crowd of show biz guys and the addition of one more won't hurt.

Much seems about to transpire within the Ram family, including the adoption of Joe Willie.

Meanwhile, Namath prepares for football by playing golf in warm climates in deference to his wheels. Also, Joe says he is continuing his lessons in drama, speech, music and dancing.

Dancing?

It was Fred Astaire who said the knees are the first to go.

Dick Weber tops K.C. pin tourney

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Dick Weber, the all-time high money winner from St. Louis, captured his 26th professional bowling title Saturday by defeating top-seeded Gary Mage of Seattle 227-191 in the payoff game of this week's $75,000 tournament on the PBA tour.

Weber won $8,000 and pulled into a tie with Don Johnson for second place on the all-time victory list. Earl Anthony leads with 27.

California riddles Stanford aquas

BERKELEY (AP)—The California Bears won a Pacific-8 Conference dual swimming meet with Stanford for the first time in 36 years Saturday, 73-40, in spite of an outstanding performance by Stanford Olympian Mike Bruner, who set three meet records.

Bruner's marks were in the 200-yard freestyle (1:39.3), 200-butterfly (1:48.9) and 500-freestyle (4:35.3). His butterfly time is a national best this year.

Dave Fairbank of Stanford had the best time this year nationally in setting a meet record of 20.5 seconds in the 50-yard freestyle. He also won the 100-freestyle in 46.1.

Cal won both diving events and the two relays and got a meet-record time of 1:54.2 from Peter Rocca in the 200-backstroke.

Ashe caught, Namath still No. 1

Sports bachelor list dwindles

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP)—The capture of Arthur Ashe by a pretty free-lance photographer takes another of sport's eligible bachelors out of circulation, leaving Broadway Joe Namath as chief of a vanishing breed.

Ashe, 33, former Wimbledon tennis champion and long a resister of the wedding march, finally was brought to heel by Jeanne Marie Moutoussamy, who will become his bride today. They will be married by U.S. ambassador Andrew Young, who is a minister.

"There aren't too many eligible bachelors left," a TV model remarked after reading the latest news. "They are going fast.

"Must be the big contracts."

ONE OF the younger set, 20-year-old Bjorn Borg of Sweden, recently signed for $1.5 million with the Cleveland Nets of World Team Tennis and took himself off the Sadie Hawkins market by declaring that he was bringing along a fiancee, Mariana Simionescu of Romania.

It was a day of mourning for the yelling, tugging teeny-boppers of the tennis world.

Meanwhile, an informal poll of some of the nation's most attractive bachelorettes—magazine cover girls, television models and actresses—revealed that the No.1 marriage target now is Namath, the swarthy football quarterback who doubles as a screen lover and TV shill for popcorn and pantyhose.

"Most of the girls agree that Broadway Joe would be a terrific catch," said Gene Barakat of New Zealand, who represents the television department for Ford Models, Inc.

"As a carryover from their school days, they still love a football hero. Joe has a strong masculine appeal plus a boyish bashfulness which the girls all love. He also is extremely rich."

Here's the scorecard on the top remaining sports bachelors, with credentials, as chosen by the models:

• Joe Namath, 33, Jets quarterback, last salary $450,000 a year, makes more than twice that much in TV appearances. Likes popcorn. Has bad knees.

• Jimmy Connors, 25, tennis champion, made more than $600,000 last year. Hot temper. Dominated by mother. Present girl friend, Miss World, Margie Wallace.

• Walt Frazier, 31, basketball star for New York Knicks, $400,000 a year. Expensive tastes, fetish for rainbow attire, mink coats and flashy cars. Should be good for dunking doughnuts.

• Dave Kingman, 28, baseball player. Tall, handsome type. Hits long ball. Best await developments. Asking more than $2 million and may be unemployed. Also, like Garbo, wants to be left alone.

• Bruce Lietzke, 25, pro golfer. Has banked $123,000 plus change this year and still going. Eager. "Remember, I'm a bachelor," he said after winning one of his two tournaments this year.

The modern sports star has replaced the old Hollywood movie heart throb as the matinee idol. He leads a glamorous life. He is constantly in the public eye, both on the playing field and on the TV screens. He swings with the jet set and normally is seen in the smart places with a bejeweled doll on each arm. In negotiating contracts, his starting point is $1 million.

"It's fashionable and prestigious to date a sports celebrity such as Namath and Kingman," Barakat, a spokesman for the models, said. "The pickings still are fairly good.

"Take Vitas Gerulaitis, a very attractive tennis player from Long Island—handsome, intelligent, charming. Craig Morton is an unmarried quarterback. Rusty Staub is a confirmed baseball bachelor. Don Murdoch, the rookie hockey player with the New York Rangers, has his own fan club. The Amritraj brothers from India are very popular among the tennis set."

There are some pretty fancy retreads—Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench, just divorced, and Reggie Jackson, the Yankees' $2.9-million commodity, who could be caught on second bounce.

Then there's 16-year-old Steve Cauthen, who is wowing 'em on the race track. Give him time to finish his Wheaties.

It's Mr. & Mrs. Ashe

Wadkins: 'Please, don't ask how's my ——'

BY DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

Everywhere a Lanny Wadkins plays, someone asks him about his arm, his wrist, his back, his leg or his stomach.

It seems that golf fans remember that he was ailing some years ago but can't recall which part of the body was affected. It wasn't his head. But he did lose a gall bladder.

"I think I'll pass out a mimeographed medical bulletin before each interview," the 27-year-old North Carolinian said Saturday as he recounted for the umpteenth time his misfortune.

The gall bladder may be missing, but not the gall.

Despite his two-year slump, the confidence remains. He knows the day isn't far off when he will visit the winner's circle again.

It could be today in the Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open. Wadkins is in second place, three strokes behind Tom Purtzer.

It was in December of 1974 that he underwent surgery that was to short-circuit his career. At the time he was a ringleader of the "young lions," having established a rookie earnings record with $116,616 in 1972 and backed that up with a sophomore mark of $200,455 in 1973.

His earnings dipped to $51,124 in 1974, still respectable considering that he was in and out of the doctor's office and on and off the tour trying to find out why he was so weak. It took six months before the diagnosis turned up the gall bladder problem.

The next season was a nightmare for the former U.S. Amateur champion. He earned only $23,582 in 1975 and lost his exempt status. After a fast start in 1976, he fizzled and again missed the top 60 — the cutoff point for exempt status.

"I just pooped out," Wadkins recalls. "I decided I had to get in better condition, so I started running four or five miles a week to get my legs in shape. I've been doing that ever since."

Wadkins is off to another quick start, having earned $9,527 in six tournaments, placing him 31st. A win or high finish today could elevate him into the top 10.

For Wadkins to play poorly was a new experience.

"I'd never known anything but success all my life," said 5-8, 160-pounder. "I didn't know golf was a hard game. I made a lot of money from the start and I lived high. I still do. I've never been the type to pinch pennies."

Surprisingly, Wadkins has never had to qualify on Monday despite failing to reach the top 60s two years in a row.

"My past reputation carried me," he confessed. "When I didn't make cuts, I got sponsors' exemptions. I've been lucky in that regard. But I expect to win again soon. I had some good contracts that are still in effect," he said. "I probably earned as much in 1975 and 1976 as I did in my big years. But, to keep those contracts, I'll have to start winning again."

Wadkins is regarded as one of the best ball strikers on the tour. What may keep him from matching the glory years of the past is his putting — especially the short ones.

"I always seem to miss one or two short putts a round," he admitted. "I can't tell you why, I just do."

MARK PFEIL, the former USC star and Walker Cupper, is finding life on the PGA tour more rewarding the second time around.

Pfeil earned less than $1,000 last year and was forced to try the players' school again to regain his touring card. He already is far ahead of 1976, when he failed to qualify for the first 10 tournaments.

"It's just a matter of confidence," the Palos Verdes youngster says. "I've made a round $1,600 so far and that's pretty good for six weeks."

Pfeil says he has a "game plan" for the tour now that was impossible to implement as a rookie. "Just knowing how the tour works, where to stay, how to pace yourself and so on has built my confidence."

Pfeil, who is sponsored by some friends, including his father, got a nice stake when he won ammini-tour event in the Carmel area prior to the start of the tour. His winning check was $12,000.

After three rounds of the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open at Riviera, he is in a tie for 54th place. A par round today could earn him $500 or more.

THERE ARE 442 card-carrying PGA pros eligible for any tour event and an average of 275 try each week for the 144 to 156 spots. The traffic jam is such that the Tournament Players Division has instituted a new policy that could trim the eligibles by 20 per cent or more in 1978.

Rookies have to win $5,000 the first year, $7,080 the second to remain on tour. Now the veterans will have to reach at least $7,000 or their cards probably will be pulled.

for a bird on the 10th, eagled the 599-yard 11th with a drive, 3-iron and 25-foot putt and then canned a 35-footer to go 13-under on the 12th. That's when his lead stretched to six strokes.

"The hole looked six inches wide," he said.

Purtzer lost a stroke on the 13th, birdied the 14th from 15 feet, parred the 15th, bogeyed the 16th, birdied the 17th from 18 feet and then three-putted the final hole.

"It was kind of wild," he understated.

Wadkins shot 69 and was unhappy.

"I was in-between clubs all day," he said. "I never struggled so hard in my life. I was pleased that I hung in the way I did. My putting was excellent."

Wadkins had five birdies and three bogies. All of his birdie putts were 10 feet or longer and two of his bogeys came when he missed short taps of 3½ and 2½ feet.

"Being three back isn't too bad on this course," said Wadkins, who last won a tournament in 1973. He has been a non-exempt player for two years, following a gall bladder operation, after winning more than $300,000 in his first two years on the tour.

"I'm beat to a pulp," Wadkins said. "Any hole here can nail you if you don't concentrate.

Wadkins wasn't sure if having a non-winner in front of him was an advantage.

"Tom is a capable player and I think he will decide his own fate tomorrow," said Watkins. "If he can shoot 1 or 2-under he will be hard to catch. This isn't a course you can charge and shoot 66 very easy."

No other golfer appears to be within striking distance.

Former USC star Craig Stadler is in fourth place at 6-under following a 70. Jim Masserio, who hasn't won a penny this year, is next. He posted a 68 which included eagles on the first and fifth holes.

Twelve players shot in the 60s Saturday, a noteworthy achievement, but not everyone enjoyed the day. Curtis Sifford posted an 88 with a 10 on the second hole when he hit four out of the bunker.

The only man he leads is veteran Bob Wynn, who signed the wrong scorecard and was disqualified. It was the second week in a row he signed an incorrect card.

Two aces can't halt J. Rankin

ST. PETERSBURG (AP) — Two separate holes-in-one by challengers didn't distract Judy Rankin as she stretched her lead to two strokes Saturday in the $50,000 Orange Blossom Classic on the ladies golf tour.

Mrs. Rankin shot a two-under-par 70 for a second-round total of 139 in the Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Joyce Kazmierski scored a hole-in-one on the 135-yard third hole to give her a second-round 71. She was alone in second with 141. Bonnie Bryant also carded an ace on the third hole in Saturday's play for a 70 and a 147 total.

MRS. RANKIN bogied the last two holes of the front nine but then birdied four holes in the final nine for her two under par.

"I drove the ball a whole lot better today than yesterday," said Mrs. Rankin. "I put it where I wanted to more often and hit it longer. I didn't three-putt a green which is a major accomplishment for me."

Miss Kazmierski lost the gain she had made with her hole-in one when she double bogied the seventh and ninth holes. She had two bogies and a birdie on the back nine to finish at one under par.

"It was my very first one," she said of her hole-in-one. "A hole-in-one is kind of like a bad hole, you have to forget about it and continue playing. I couldn't enjoy it for too long."

Sandra Palmer was third with a 143 after shooting a 70 on the 6,109-yard Pasadena Country Club course.

Tied for fourth at 144 were Judy Kimball and Sally Little.

Miss Kimball had the day's low round, a 68, while Miss Little shot her second successive 72.

Cerritos rallies to tumble OC

Trailing 39-31 at halftime, Cerritos College poured in 53 second half points to overhaul visiting Orange Coast, 84-72, in South Coast Conference action Saturday night.

A large measure of the Falcons' second-half success could be traced to the free throw line, where Cerritos sank 17 of 20 attempts in the game's final 20 minutes. During the same span Orange Coast hit only three of four and lost three players on fouls.

Freshman Brian Lumsden topped all scorers with 20 points and three other Falcons tallied in double figures as Cerritos improved its lifetime record against Orange Coast to 23-4 since 1962.

transaction involving the assignment of a star player's contract for a very large sum of money."

The A's owner said Kuhn asked any club seriously contemplating such a deal to "advise this office concerning the details prior to making any commitment."

Finley said he sent his own telegram to Kuhn and the other club owners Saturday, saying the commissioner's request was "a shocking interference in the business activities of the clubs."

He said baseball rules do not require the commissioner to be notified of transactions until they are completed and added, "The negotiations between clubs concerning proposed assignments of player contracts are the exclusive private business concern of the clubs."

Minutes before selling Lindblad, Finley said he would not complete deals for him and Blue before U.S. District Court Judge Frank McGarr rules on his $3.5 million suit against Kuhn.

Finley filed the suit after Kuhn voided his sales last June of Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million and outfielder Joe Rudi and pitcher Rollie Fingers to Boston for $1 million each. Kuhn said the deals were not in the best interests of baseball.

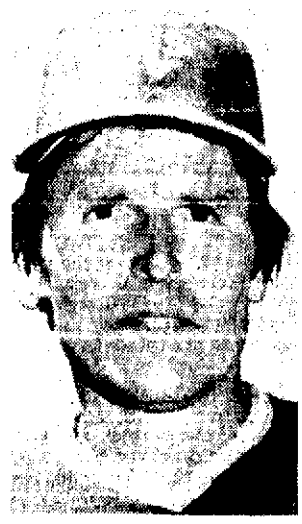

Testimony wound up Jan. 13. Attorneys are due to file briefs by Feb. 28 and Finley said he expects a decision in March. McGarr said the issue before him is whether Kuhn had the power to void the deals.

AFTER THE 1976 season, Rudi and Fingers became free agents and were signed by the Angels and San Diego respectively.

In his telegram, Finley said, "Your previous interference with Oakland's business affairs has almost completely destroyed the franchise. Any player transactions contemplated by Oakland are matters of absolute necessity to repair the damage you have already done and to allow Oakland to remain as a significant franchise in the American League."

In a telephone interview, Finley said he was certain that Kuhn's telegram resulted from the offers for Blue and Lindblad.

"Bowie Kuhn is continuously harassing Charles O. Finley," the A's owner claimed. "I think my telegram speaks for itself. Frankly, you can tell the commissioner where to go."

Morgan, Foster, Griffey in fold

CINCINNATI (AP)—All-Star second baseman Joe Morgan, only the second National League player to win consecutive most valuable player awards, came to terms Saturday for what he called the largest contract in Cincinnati Reds' history.

He said the contract was for more than a $1 million and made him the highest-paid player in the Reds' 108-year existence.

The Reds simultaneously announced that star outfielders Ken Griffey and George Foster also agreed to multi-year contracts.

All three signed for three years, according to Dick Wagner, Reds' general manager. No other figures were disclosed.

Wagner said it was the first time the club agreed to three-year pacts. Six Reds remained unsigned. They were 10-time All-Star Pete Rose, relief ace Rawly Eastwick, starting pitcher Gary Nolan, shortstop Dave Concepcion, utilityman Mike Lum and minor league pitcher Pat Darcy.

The signings came after three days of negotiations between the Reds and player agent Tom Reich of Pittsburgh, who represented the trio.

Morgan, 33, said he was relieved to get the contract stalemate over and predicted the Reds would win their sixth National League West title in seven years.

"I never really gave any thought to playing out my option," said Morgan, whose rise as a hitter coupled with his speed and defense were key factors in the Reds' successive world titles.

"I said five years ago that I hoped to finish my career in Cincinnati and I feel the same way now. It's my kind of town and my kind of team," said the 5-8 infielder who was the first second baseman since Jackie Robinson to drive in more than 100 runs. He had 111 while slugging a career-high 27 home runs.

Griffey, 27, hit a team-leading .336 last season, losing the National League batting title on the final day of the season to Chicago's Bill Madlock. It was his second successive .300 season.

The 28-year-old Foster, who led the majors with 121 runs batted in, called his agreement "a fair contract." He said the Reds' front office has "become more liberal" involving long-term contracts. "They realized they have to hold on to their good players."

Wagner said the Reds "have adjusted our thinking to meet the needs of the time."

Foster has emerged as one of baseball's top run producers since moving into leftfield in 1975. His insertion in the lineup moved Rose to third.

He voiced optimism that the Reds will be able to sign Concepcion, but indicated concern that Rose "might be serious about playing out his option."

Morgan has compiled a .303 batting average in five years with the Reds since arriving after the celebrated trade with Houston. He has averaged 22 home runs, 85 runs batted in and 62 stolen bases per season since then.

AL finally beats NL— in softball

INNISBROOK, Fla. (AP) — Boston Red Sox slugger Jim Rice salved American League pride Saturday, hitting a home run in the final inning to beat the National League, 10-9, in the second all-star softball championship.

The seven-inning game between the stars of both leagues highlighted a weekend of charity sports events at the Innisbrook Resort Club.

The National League jumped to 2-0 lead in the first inning on a home run by Cincinnati Reds catcher Johnny Bench. Pittsburgh Pirate Willie Stargell hit a two-run homer in the second to stretch the lead.

The American League tied the score 5-5 in the fourth on a home run by Graig Nettles of New York and went ahead in the fifth inning on consecutive singles by the Minnesota Twins' Rod Carew, Yankee Thurman Munson and Chris Chambliss and Carl Yastrzemski of the Red Sox.

THE NATIONAL League tied the game 9-9 in the seventh on a two-out homer by National League home run champion Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phillies.

But Rice clinched the game for the American League with his second home run of the day. Rice received the game's most valuable player award from baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn. Kuhn announced the game for the crowd of 3,300 and a national televison audience.

The losing pitcher was Tom Seaver of the New York Mets. Cy Young Award winner Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles took the win after coming in in the sixth inning for Mark Fydrich of the Detroit Tigers.

Proceeds of the event went to the Sickle Cell Disease Foundation and the Civitan International, a fund for the the mentally retarded.

Wadkins: 'Please, don't ask how's my ——'

BY DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

Everywhere a Lanny Wadkins plays, someone asks him about his arm, his wrist, his back, his leg or his stomach.

It seems that golf fans remember that he was ailing some years ago but can't recall which part of the body was affected. It wasn't his head. But he did lose a gall bladder.

"I think I'll pass out a mimeographed medical bulletin before each interview," the 27-year-old North Carolinian said Saturday as he recounted for the umpteenth time his misfortune.

The gall bladder may be missing, but not the gall.

Despite his two-year slump, the confidence remains. He knows the day isn't far off when he will visit the winner's circle again.

It could be today in the Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open. Wadkins is in second place, three strokes behind Tom Purtzer.

It was in December of 1974 that he underwent surgery that was to short-circuit his career. At the time he was a ringleader of the "young lions," having established a rookie earnings record with $116,616 in 1972 and backed that up with a sophomore mark of $200,455 in 1973.

His earnings dipped to $51,124 in 1974, still respectable considering that he was in and out of the doctor's office and on and off the tour trying to find out why he was so weak. It took six months before the diagnosis turned up the gall bladder problem.

The next season was a nightmare for the former U.S. Amateur champion. He earned only $23,582 in 1975 and lost his exempt status. After a fast start in 1976, he fizzled and again missed the top 60 — the cutoff point for exempt status.

"I just pooped out," Wadkins recalls. "I decided I had to get in better condition, so I started running four or five miles a week to get my legs in shape. I've been doing that ever since."

Wadkins is off to another quick start, having earned $9,527 in six tournaments, placing him 31st. A win or high finish today could elevate him into the top 10.

For Wadkins to play poorly was a new experience.

"I'd never known anything but success all my life," said 5-8, 160-pounder. "I didn't know golf was a hard game. I made a lot of money from the start and I lived high. I still do. I've never been the type to pinch pennies."

Surprisingly, Wadkins has never had to qualify on Monday despite failing to reach the top 60s two years in a row.

"My past reputation carried me," he confessed. "When I didn't make cuts, I got sponsors' exemptions. I've been lucky in that regard. But I expect to win again soon. I had some good contracts that are still in effect," he said. "I probably earned as much in 1975 and 1976 as I did in my big years. But, to keep those contracts, I'll have to start winning again."

Wadkins is regarded as one of the best ball strikers on the tour. What may keep him from matching the glory years of the past is his putting — especially the short ones.

"I always seem to miss one or two short putts a round," he admitted. "I can't tell you why, I just do."

MARK PFEIL, the former USC star and Walker Cupper, is finding life on the PGA tour more rewarding the second time around.

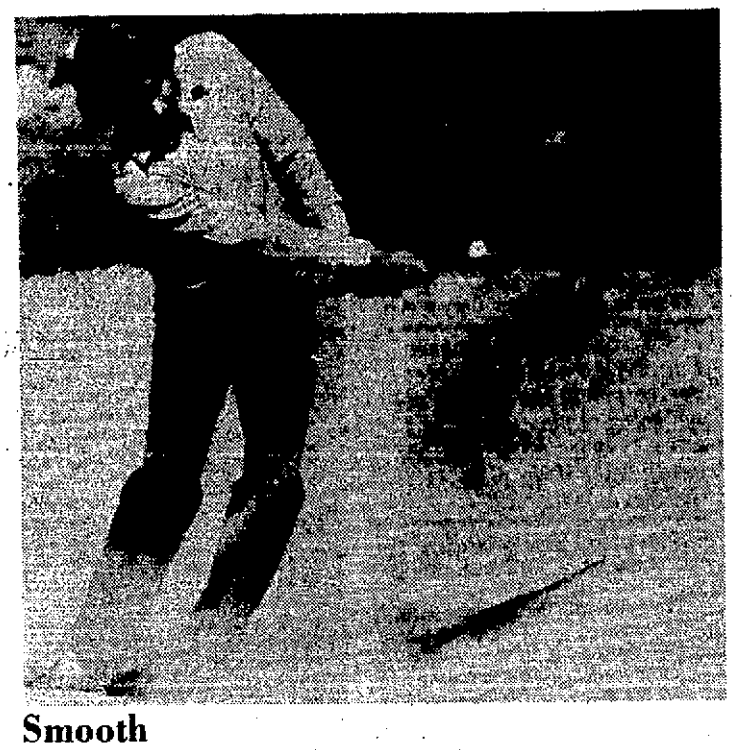

Pfeil earned less than $1,000 last year and was forced to try the players' school again to regain his touring card. He already is far ahead of 1976, when he failed to qualify for the first 10 tournaments.

"It's just a matter of confidence," the Palos Verdes youngster says. "I've made a round $1,600 so far and that's pretty good for six weeks."

Pfeil says he has a "game plan" for the tour now that was impossible to implement as a rookie. "Just knowing how the tour works, where to stay, how to pace yourself and so on has built my confidence."

Pfeil, who is sponsored by some friends, including his father, got a nice stake when he won ammini-tour event in the Carmel area prior to the start of the tour. His winning check was $12,000.

After three rounds of the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open at Riviera, he is in a tie for 54th place. A par round today could earn him $500 or more.

THERE ARE 442 card-carrying PGA pros eligible for any tour event and an average of 275 try each week for the 144 to 156 spots. The traffic jam is such that the Tournament Players Division has instituted a new policy that could trim the eligibles by 20 per cent or more in 1978.

Rookies have to win $5,000 the first year, $7,000 the second to remain on tour. Now the veterans will have to reach at least $7,000 or their cards probably will be pulled.

for a bird on the 10th, eagled the 599-yard 11th with a drive, 3-iron and 25-foot putt and then canned a 35-footer to go 13-under on the 12th. That's when his lead stretched to six strokes.

"The hole looked six inches wide," he said.

Purtzer lost a stroke on the 13th, birdied the 14th from 15 feet, parred the 15th, bogeyed the 16th, birdied the 17th from 18 feet and then three-putted the final hole.

"It was kind of wild," he understated.

Wadkins shot 69 and was unhappy.

"I was in-between clubs all day," he said. "I never struggled so hard in my life. I was pleased that I hung in the way I did. My putting was excellent."

Wadkins had five birdies and three bogies. All of his birdie putts were 10 feet or longer and two of his bogeys came when he missed short taps of 3½ and 2½ feet.

"Being three back isn't too bad on this course," said Wadkins, who last won a tournament in 1973. He has been a non-exempt player for two years, following a gall bladder operation, after winning more than $300,000 in his first two years on the tour.

"I'm beat to a pulp," Wadkins said. "Any hole here can nail you if you don't concentrate.

Wadkins wasn't sure if having a non-winner in front of him was an advantage.

"Tom is a capable player and I think he will decide his own fate tomorrow," said Watkins. "If he can shoot 1 or 2-under he will be hard to catch. This isn't a course you can charge and shoot 66 very easy."

No other golfer appears to be within striking distance.

Former USC star Craig Stadler is in fourth place at 6-under following a 70. Jim Masserio, who hasn't won a penny this year, is next. He posted a 68 which included eagles on the first and fifth holes.

Twelve players shot in the 60s Saturday, a noteworthy achievement, but not everyone enjoyed the day. Curtis Sifford posted an 88 with a 10 on the second hole when he hit four out of the bunker.

The only man he leads is veteran Bob Wynn, who signed the wrong scorecard and was disqualified. It was the second week in a row he signed an incorrect card.

Two aces can't halt J. Rankin

ST. PETERSBURG (AP) — Two separate holes-in-one by challengers didn't distract Judy Rankin as she stretched her lead to two strokes Saturday in the $50,000 Orange Blossom Classic on the ladies golf tour.

Mrs. Rankin shot a two-under-par 70 for a second-round total of 139 in the Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Joyce Kazmierski scored a hole-in-one on the 135-yard third hole to give her a second-round 71. She was alone in second with 141. Bonnie Bryant also carded an ace on the third hole in Saturday's play for a 70 and a 147 total.

MRS. RANKIN bogied the last two holes of the front nine but then birdied four holes in the final nine for her two under par.

"I drove the ball a whole lot better today than yesterday," said Mrs. Rankin. "I put it where I wanted to more often and hit it longer. I didn't three-putt a green which is a major accomplishment for me."

Miss Kazmierski lost the gain she had made with her hole-in-one when she double bogied the seventh and ninth holes. She had two bogies and a birdie on the back nine to finish at one under par.

"It was my very first one," she said of her hole-in-one. "A hole-in-one is kind of like a bad hole; you have to forget about it and continue playing. I couldn't enjoy it for too long."

Sandra Palmer was third with a 143 after shooting a 70 on the 6,109-yard Pasadena Country Club course.

Tied for fourth at 144 were Judy Kimball and Sally Little.

Miss Kimball had the day's low round, a 68, while Miss Little shot her second successive 72.

Cerritos rallies to tumble OC

Trailing 39-31 at halftime, Cerritos College poured in 53 second half points to overhaul visiting Orange Coast, 84-72, in South Coast Conference action Saturday night.

A large measure of the Falcons' second-half success could be traced to the free throw line, where Cerritos sank 17 of 20 attempts in the game's final 20 minutes. During the same span Orange Coast hit only three of four and lost three players on fouls.

Freshman Brian Lumsden topped all scorers with 20 points and three other Falcons tallied in double figures as Cerritos improved its lifetime record against Orange Coast to 23-4 since 1962.

ORANGE COAST (72): Bolden 18, Boldt 12, Golden 12, Carkut 8, Oman 6, Berry 6, Vogelsang 6, Holland 4, Liscott 2.

transaction involving the assignment of a star player's contract for a very large sum of money."

The A's owner said Kuhn asked any club seriously contemplating such a deal to "advise this office concerning the details prior to making any commitment."

Finley said he sent his own telegram to Kuhn and the other club owners Saturday, saying the commissioner's request was "a shocking interference in the business activities of the clubs."

He said baseball rules do not require the commissioner to be notified of transactions until they are completed and added, "The negotiations between clubs concerning proposed assignments of player contracts are the exclusive private business concern of the clubs."

Minutes before selling Lindblad, Finley said he would not complete deals for him and Blue before U.S. District Court Judge Frank McGarr rules on his $3.5 million suit against Kuhn.

Finley filed the suit after Kuhn voided his sales last June of Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million and outfielder Joe Rudi and pitcher Rollie Fingers to Boston for $1 million each. Kuhn said the deals were not in the best interests of baseball.

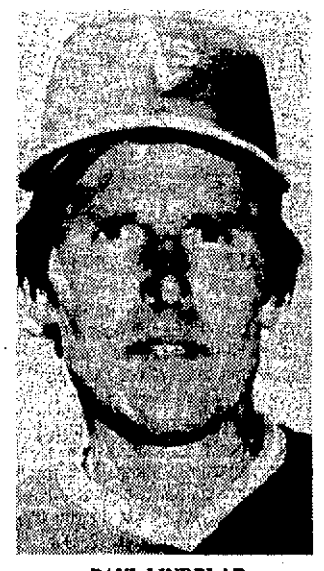

Testimony wound up Jan. 13. Attorneys are due to file briefs by Feb. 28 and Finley said he expects a decision in March. McGarr said the issue before him is whether Kuhn had the power to void the deals.

AFTER THE 1976 season, Rudi and Fingers became free agents and were signed by the Angels and San Diego respectively.

In his telegram, Finley said, "Your previous interference with Oakland's business affairs has almost completely destroyed the franchise. Any player transactions contemplated by Oakland are matters of absolute necessity to repair the damage you have already done and to allow Oakland to remain as a significant franchise in the American League."

In a telephone interview, Finley said he was certain that Kuhn's telegram resulted from the offers for Blue and Lindblad.

"Bowie Kuhn is continuously harassing Charles O. Finley," the A's owner claimed. "I think my telegram speaks for itself. Frankly, you can tell the commissioner where to go."

Morgan, Foster, Griffey in fold

CINCINNATI (AP)—All-Star second baseman Joe Morgan, only the second National League player to win consecutive most valuable player awards, came to terms Saturday for what he called the largest contract in Cincinnati Reds' history.

He said the contract was for more than a $1 million and made him the highest-paid player in the Reds' 108-year existence.

The Reds simultaneously announced that star outfielders Ken Griffey and George Foster also agreed to multi-year contracts.

All three signed for three years, according to Dick Wagner, Reds' general manager. No other figures were disclosed.

Wagner said it was the first time the club agreed to three-year pacts. Six Reds remained unsigned. They were 10-time All-Star Pete Rose, relief ace Rawly Eastwick, starting pitcher Gary Nolan, shortstop Dave Concepcion, utilityman Mike Lum and minor league pitcher Pat Darcy.

The signings came after three days of negotiations between the Reds and player agent Tom Reich of Pittsburgh, who represented the trio.

Morgan, 33, said he was relieved to get the contract stalemate over and predicted the Reds would win their sixth National League West title in seven years.

"I never really gave any thought to playing out my option," said Morgan, whose rise as a hitter coupled with his speed and defense were key factors in the Reds' successive world titles.

"I said five years ago that I hoped to finish my career in Cincinnati and I feel the same way now. It's my kind of town and my kind of team," said the 5-8 infielder who was the first second baseman since Jackie Robinson to drive in more than 100 runs. He had 111 while slugging a career-high 27 home runs.

Griffey, 27, hit a team-leading .336 last season, losing the National League batting title on the final day of the season to Chicago's Bill Madlock. It was his second successive .300 season.

The 28-year-old Foster, who led the majors with 121 runs batted in, called his agreement "a fair contract." He said the Reds' front office has "become more liberal" involving long-term contracts. "They realized they have to hold on to their good players."

Wagner said the Reds "have adjusted our thinking to meet the needs of the time."

Foster has emerged as one of baseball's top run producers since moving into leftfield in 1975. His insertion in the lineup moved Rose to third.

He voiced optimism that the Reds will be able to sign Concepcion, but indicated concern that Rose "might be serious about playing out his option."

Morgan has compiled a .303 batting average in five years with the Reds since arriving after the celebrated trade with Houston. He has averaged 22 home runs, 85 runs batted in and 62 stolen bases per season since then.

AL finally beats NL—in softball

INNISBROOK, Fla. (AP) — Boston Red Sox slugger Jim Rice salved American League pride Saturday, hitting a home run in the final inning to beat the National League, 10-9, in the second all-star softball championship.

The seven-inning game between the stars of both leagues highlighted a weekend of charity sports events at the Innisbrook Resort Club.

The National League jumped to 2-0 lead in the first inning on a home run by Cincinnati Reds catcher Johnny Bench. Pittsburgh Pirate Willie Stargell hit a two-run homer in the second to stretch the lead.

The American League tied the score 5-5 in the fourth on a home run by Graig Nettles of New York and went ahead in the fifth inning on consecutive singles by the Minnesota Twins' Rod Carew, Yankee Thurman Munson and Chris Chambliss and Carl Yastrzemski of the Red Sox.

THE NATIONAL League tied the game 9-9 in the seventh on a two-out homer by National League home run champion Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phillies.

But Rice clinched the game for the American League with his second home run of the day. Rice received the game's most valuable player award from baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn. Kuhn announced the game for the crowd of 3,300 and a national televison audience.

The losing pitcher was Tom Seaver of the New York Mets. Cy Young Award winner Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles took the win after coming in in the sixth inning for Mark Fydrich of the Detroit Tigers.

Proceeds of the event went to the Sickle Cell Disease Foundation and the Civitan International, a fund for the the mentally retarded.

In $414,000 Daytona '500'

Petty: The man to beat—again

DAYTONA BEACH (AP) — With two racing victories already in his Speed Weeks satchel, Cale Yarborough says he's going after the "triple crown of Daytona" in the $414,000 Daytona 500 today.

He beat half the late-model stock car field in his swift Chevrolet in Thursday's qualifying races, then turned around and whipped a classy field of nine in the International Race of Champions Friday.

Yarborough nosed out the richest winner in all of racing, A.J. Foyt, in the IROC race and Foyt will be one of the top favorites today.

FOYT qualified his own Chevrolet second fastest and starts in the front row alongside Donnie Allison, winner of Saturday's late-model sportsman race. Allison, also in a Chevy, won the pole position at 188.048 miles an hour.

But the man to beat in every Daytona 500 is Richard Petty. He's won it five times. No one else had done so more than once.

Petty, in a Dodge, is even more the driver on the spot as a result of his convincing runaway in the companion 125-mile race to Yarborough's winning qualifier on Thursday.

"Everbody's car was losing the track except Petty's on Thursday," Allison said. "Unless everybody else improves the handling, he can run away from all of us again."

Petty and his friendly rival, David Pearson, will start close together near the front of the field, as usual. Petty's easy victory over second-place Pearson, in a Mercury, over the 125-mile route indicates they won't be together at the finish for a duplication of last year's slambang finish.

A year ago they came out of the final turn headed for the checkered flag side by side. Suddenly smashing together and against the concrete outer wall, they went spinning wildly. Pearson kept his engine running and struggled across the finish line while Petty sat helplessly 100 yas short, trying to restart.

PETTY and Yarborough start on the second row behind Allison and Foyt. Pearson and 1975 winner Benny Parsons in a Chevrolet start in the third row.

Bobby Allison, Donnie's brother, starts his Matador along with Buddy Baker's Ford in the fourth row, and right behind them are Dave Marcis in a Mercury and Darrell Waltrip in a Chevrolet.

The winner of the top prize of $49,900 plus bonus money probably will come from that group. The other 32 starters will be going for the leftovers.

"I'd like to hook up with Foyt in another draft just like the one Friday, in the same order," said Yarborough, referring to the practice of running nose-to-tail which improves the speed of both cars.

"Not me," Foyt said. "I want to reverse the order of finish."

Foyt could make it a $100,000 weekend if he wins. He collected $50,000 as over-all winner of the IROC four-race series for the second straight year. Including three Indy 500 victories, Foyt has won nearly $3 million on race tracks around the world.

One down . . .

Donnie Allison shows off trophy in victory lane after winning Saturday's Permatex 300, a prelude to today's $414,000 Daytona 500 in Daytona Beach. Allison will start on pole for today's race.

Allison 'tunes up' for '500'

DAYTONA BEACH (AP) — Minutes after boldly charging to victory on the last lap of Saturday's late-model sportsman race, Donnie Allison was a lot more cautious in speculating about how he'd run in today's $414,000 Daytona 500 stock car classic in which he'll start from the pole.

"I don't make predictions," Allison said after edging Darrell Waltrip by eight feet for the $16,325 first prize in the 300-mile Permatex race.

"I'll just wait and see what happens Sunday. You have to plan it as it goes.

"I just know that my car's running good and I don't plan to destroy it in the early part of the race. I want to be around when 500 miles is up."

The 37-year-old racing veteran from Hueytown, Ala., should be hoping that racing's variables and his skills produce the same kind of result they did Saturday.

THE battle for first place was between Allison and Waltrip for the last third of the 120 laps. Waltrip, of Franklin, Tenn., pitted on the 101st lap but took on only gas—no tires—and was moving again in 8.2 seconds.

Allison needed more gas, too, but he couldn't afford to take the time for tires. So he pitted on lap 109, got the gas and was out in 8.1 seconds.

Waltrip and Allison were running 1-2 when Ray Hendrick caught the wall coming out of turn four, spun wildly and also took Jack Ingram onto the track's apron.

Waltrip and Allison squeaked through that danger on the 115th lap, then held their positions until the caution flag was pulled in with three laps to go.

At that point, Allison's strategy came into play. He followed Waltrip for two laps, then passed him on the last straightaway and held the lead to the checkered flag.

"When Darrell didn't take on tires, we knew we couldn't afford to take on tires," Allison said. "Any time you run on this track that long without a change of tires, it gets pretty hectic.

"I knew I couldn't wait to come off turn four to catch him, because I saw how much both cars were sliding on the tires. I knew I had to be leading going into turn three. I felt like if I got ahead of him by then, I could stay ahead to the line."

Waltrip wasn't surprised by Allison's plan.

"I knew what looked like a thrilling finish was never going to take place," he said. "Donnie knew I couldn't get through three and four.

"He just waited. He could have passed me the lap before had he wanted to. I guess he waited until the final lap just to make sure."

Midwinter Regatta lures 1,199 yachts

By DON CULPEPPER
Staff Writer

The 48th Midwinter Regatta of the the Southern California Yachting Association got under way shortly before noon Saturday with 1,199 yachts competing. That was just one boat short of the number the general chairman, Don Brown, had predicted.

Alamitos Bay Yacht Club of Long Beach had the largest number of entries—75 boats, a record for any year. Seal Beach Yacht Club also had a record number of yachts competing in a dozen classes.

The fast and hot Lasers, a class that appeals to the younger set, almost caught up with the Naples Sabots in numbers. There were 97 lasers competing out of AYBC, plus five Tazers, a new boat that is called an oversized Laser.

Naples Sabots were competing in Newport Harbor, and there were 118 of those. Of that number, 21 were manned by seniors, well over the 40-year mark. Newport Harbor and LBYC were host to the Salbots that sailed inside the harbor.

In addition, Seal Beach, Alamitos Bay and Newport, here is the way the other clubs reported:

YACHTS competing at Dana Point and Capistrano Yacht Club combined for 49, Long Beach YC 25, Los Angeles 88, Cabrillo Beach 114, Balboa and La Bahia Corinthian 66, California Yacht Club 85, Del Rey Yacht Club 105, Langdon Harbour 18, King Harbor 88, Low Ships Fleet of Long Beach 67. Also in competition at California YC were 14 power boats in a predicted log race.

Along with the various committee and official boats, there were well over 1250 boa s engaged in the midwinter, which will conclude today at all clubs except Los Angeles YC, which goes through Monday.

Saturday's winds were gentle and from 8 to 10 knots and there were few problems. One large yacht brought to LAYC by a Mexican skipper and crew lost a mast at the start of one of the events and had to withdraw.

In $414,000 Daytona '500'

Petty: The man to beat—again

DAYTONA BEACH (AP) — With two racing victories already in his Speed Weeks satchel, Cale Yarborough says he's going after the "triple crown of Daytona" in the $414,000 Daytona 500 today.

He beat half the late-model stock car field in his swift Chevrolet in Thursday's qualifying races, then turned around and whipped a classy field of nine in the International Race of Champions Friday.

Yarborough nosed out the richest winner in all of racing, A.J. Foyt, in the IROC race and Foyt will be one of the top favorites today.

FOYT qualified his own Chevrolet second fastest and starts in the front row alongside Donnie Allison, winner of Saturday's late-model sportsman race. Allison, also in a Chevy, won the pole position at 188.048 miles an-hour.

But the man to beat in every Daytona 500 is Richard Petty. He's won it five times. No one else had done so more than once.

Petty, in a Dodge, is even more the driver on the spot as a result of his convincing runaway in the companion 125-mile race to Yarborough's winning qualifier on Thursday.

"Everbody's car was losing the track except Petty's on Thursday," Allison said. "Unless everybody else improves the handling, he can run away from all of us again."

Petty and his friendly rival, David Pearson, will start close together near the front of the field, as usual. Petty's easy victory over second-place Pearson, in a Mercury, over the 125-mile route indicates they won't be together at the finish for a duplication of last year's slambang finish.

A year ago they came out of the final turn headed for the checkered flag side by side. Suddenly smashing together and against the concrete outer wall, they went spinning wildly. Pearson kept his engine running and struggled across the finish line while Petty sat helplessly 100 yas short, trying to restart.

PETTY and Yarborough start on the second row behind Allison and Foyt. Pearson and 1975 winner Benny Parsons in a Chevrolet start in the third row.

Bobby Allison, Donnie's brother, starts his Matador along with Buddy Baker's Ford in the fourth row, and right behind them are Dave Marcis in a Mercury and Darrell Waltrip in a Chevrolet.

The winner of the top prize of $49,000 plus bonus money probably will come from that group. The other 32 starters will be going for the leftovers.

"I'd like to hook up with Foyt in another draft just like the one Friday, in the same order," said Yarborough, referring to the practice of running nose-to-tail which improves the speed of both cars.

"Not me," Foyt said. "I want to reverse the order of finish."

Foyt could make it a $100,000 weekend if he wins. He collected $50,000 as over-all winner of the IROC four-race series for the second straight year. Including three Indy 500 victories, Foyt has won nearly $3 million on race tracks around the world.

One down . . .

Donnie Allison shows off trophy in victory lane after winning Saturday's Permatex 300, a prelude to today's $414,000 Daytona 500 in Daytona Beach. Allison will start on pole for today's race.

Cauthen takes on 'Shoe' today in rich San Antonio

The old master, Bill Shoemaker, will try to show the young whiz, Steve Cauthen, how a veteran does it today when the two jockeys hook up in the $117,500 San Antonio Stakes at Santa Anita Park.

Cauthen, the 16-year-old sensation who has ridden 114 winners this year, including seven at Santa Anita, will be gunning for his first triumph in a $100,000 race. The 45-year-old Shoemaker will be attempting to bring home his 121st winner in a hundred-grander.

Cauthen will be aboard Sharif, while Shoemaker has the mount on early-line favorite Riot In Paris. Sharif gave Cauthen one of his seven victories at Santa Anita, when the two teamed for an allowance test victory Feb. 6.

Riot In Paris is assigned top weight of 123 pounds for the 1⅛-mile event for 4-year-olds and older which has drawn a field of 10.

OWNED BY Mary Jones Bradley and trainer Charlie Whittingham. Riot in Paris won last summer's $100,000-added Del Mar Invitational and then came back to Santa Anita to take the San Gabriel Handicap.

Kirby Lane, winner of the Strub Stakes, the first $100,000 race of the year for thoroughbreds, also is in the field at 122 pounds.

If the 10 entries all go to the post, the San Antonio will be worth $72,500 to the winner with second valued at $20,000.

In post-position order, the field for the San Antonio will have Double Discount, 115 with Francisco Mena riding; Ancient Title, 119, Sandy Hawley; Sharif; Properantes, Angel Cortero Jr., 114; Distant Land, Darrel McHargue, 118; Uniformity, Fernando Toro, 119; Featherfoot, Jose Vargas, 115; Kirby Lane, Laffit Pincay; Riot in Paris, and Pisistrato, Donald Pierce, 119.

Ancient Title has been shut out this meeting, but the two-time California-bred horse of the year is expected to draw a great deal of wagering support.

Glen Hill Farm's Uniformity, carrying the same 119-pound impost as Ancient Title, has twice won stakes at Santa Anita this season. The 5-year-old son of Maris captured the San Carlos and San Pasqual Handicaps.

DARREL McHargue, who broke a five-day winless string Saturday by bringing home four winners, said riding Replant, the winner of the $55,300 San Jacinto Stakes — a stepping stone to the Santa Anita Derby — was getting easier all the time.

"This horse gets a little smarter each race," said McHargue after the 3-year-old Replant's third stakes victory of the current Santa Anita meeting.

"He was so sharp today, he placed himself behind the leaders and I simply waited for them to tire before making my move. He was running pretty hard at the end, but was well clear of the winners."

Saturday's racing was marred by an injury to jockey Steve Valdez, who was hurt when his mount, Stet, fell in the fourth race.

Valdez was admitted to Arcadia Hospital, where doctors said X-rays revealed fractures of Valdez' nose and uppper jaw.

Stet, who had to be destroyed, broke the large bone in his upper leg as the field rounded the clubhouse turn. The horse fell and threw Valdez, who was struck by another horse.

Doctors said they were uncertain when Valdez could ride again.

In the feature race, Replant, part of the favored Elmendorf entry with Highland Light, carried 122 pounds and covered the mile distance of the event for 3-year-olds in 1:35⅘. The winner returned $3.80, $2.80 and $2.20.

Smasher, also carrying 122 pounds and with Fernando Toro aboard, finished nearly five lengths back and paid $4 and $2.60.

McHARGUE kept Replant just off the pace in the early going, then coaxed him past Current Concept and into the lead for good early in the stretch.

McHargue began his day by riding the winner on both ends of the daily double, bringing home $4.40 winner Let's Get Lucky in the opening race, then scoring a $12.40 triumph on Theologist in the second. The daily double payoff was $32.40.

McHargue then came back to bring home $4 winner Money Or Eats in the sixth before the victory aboard Replant in the feature.

L.B. State drops doubleheader

Long Beach State amassed 13 hits while yielding 23 Saturday in dropping a 12-3, 6-1 doubleheader to visiting UC Irvine.

Catcher Don Landry socked a solo home run for Long Beach in the ninth inning of the opener. Shortstop Robbie Day drove in the only 49er run in the nightcap.

Racing roundup

GOLDEN GATE FIELDS — Crafty Native, a 30-1 outsider, won by a length over favored Cojak in the $40,000 feature race. With Mike James up and currying 112 pounds, 10 less than Cojak, Crafty Native ran the mile in 1:38⅖. Roberto Pineda brought Cojak in a half length ahead of third-place Money Lender. Cojak and Money Lender were head-and-head entering the stretch, leading a field of eight 3-year-olds and up. Crafty Native swung from the rail to the outside for his winning rally, worth $26,350. Crafty Native paid $68.20, $17.60 and $5.80.

AQUEDUCT — Road Princess, the 8-to-5 favorite, overtook Maria's Baby and Sweet Alliance in the stretch drive to win the $53,650 Ruthless Stakes for 3-year-old fillies. It was the second successive stakes success for the daughter of Gallant Man owned by Elmendorf Farm and trained by John Campo. Sweet Alliance, fresh from a nine-length victory in the Jersey Belle Stakes at Garden State a week ago, rallied along the rail under Chris McCarron, to take second place, 1¼ lengths behind the winner and half a length over Maria's Baby. Steve Cauthen, the sensational 16-year-old apprentice jockey who was trying for his third win of the afternoon, got the lead atop Maria's Baby at the eighth pole but could not withstand the closing rush of Road Princess and Sweet Alliance, who led until the head of the stretch, on the rail. Road Princess paid $5.20.

GULFSTREAM PARK — Gravelines came from between horses to win the first division of the Canadian Turf Handicap and Gay Jitterbug, was a decisive winner in the second division. Both were heavy favorites. Gravelines, a French-bred 5-year-old, was three-quarters of a length ahead of Proponent. Lord Layabout was third. Gravelines paid $4.40. Gay Jitterbug was winning his fifth successive race and paid $4.60. The first division was worth $55,700, with $33,420 going to Gravelines. Gay Jitterbug took $32,120 of the $54,700 second division purse.

Sulkies ready to roll at Los Alamitos

The sixth Southern California Racing Association spring harness meeting gets under way at Los Alamitos Race Course Wednesday night with an 8 p.m. post time for the first-race $2 exacta.

New SCRA racing secretary Jim. Ewart promises a big opening week of racing action for what promises to be a record season on the five-eighths mile oval. Highlighting the opening four nights of the meeting will be Saturday's $10,000 Silkwood Race. Friday's card will feature the $10,000 Long Beach Trot.

Defending driving champ Gene Vallandingham, who set a single season record with 54 triumphs last year, heads a list of top drivers set for the local season.

All-time Los Alamitos leader Robert Williams, Jim Dennis, Gerry Longo, George Cliff, Steve Desomer, Larry Gregory and a pair of newcomers to Los Alamitos, Shelly Goudreau and Australian Vic Frost, figure to be among the drivers competing for the crown during the 58-night season.

Harness action will be six nights a week, Monday through Saturday, until April 30 and SCRA will be offering five exactas each program. The $2 exacta will be available on the first race with $5 exactas on for the third, fifth, seventh and ninth events every night.

The Silkwood Pace is named in honor of Orange County's first harness racing star. Driven by 70-year-old Jacob Willits, Silkwood drew crowds that outnumbered the population of the county just prior to the turn of the century and was a local hero when he easily defeated the best pacers Los Angeles County had to send to Santa Ana.

This year's Silkwood Pace promises to be one of the best ever with such outstanding horses as B.C. Count, Royal Grenadier, Dakota Star, J.R. Decker and possibly Majestic Skipper or Proud Baron coming out for the mile event.

B.C. Count was picked Top Development of the meeting here last spring after becoming the first pacer ever to record three magic miles in a single Los Alamitos season.

Wadkins: 'Please, don't ask how's my ——'

BY DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

Everywhere a Lanny Wadkins plays, someone asks him about his arm, his wrist, his back, his leg or his stomach.

It seems that golf fans remember that he was ailing some years ago but can't recall which part of the body was affected. It wasn't his head. But he did lose a gall bladder.

"I think I'll pass out a mimeographed medical bulletin before each interview," the 27-year-old North Carolinian said Saturday as he recounted for the umpteenth time his misfortune.

The gall bladder may be missing, but not the gall.

Despite his two-year slump, the confidence remains. He knows the day isn't far off when he will visit the winner's circle again.

It could be today in the Glen Campbell Los Angeles Open. Wadkins is in second place, three strokes behind Tom Purtzer.

It was in December of 1974 that he underwent surgery that was to short-circuit his career. At the time he was a ringleader of the "young lions," having established a rookie earnings record with $116,616 in 1972 and backed that up with a sophomore mark of $200,455 in 1973.

His earnings dipped to $51,124 in 1974, still respectable considering that he was in and out of the doctor's office and on and off the tour trying to find out why he was so weak. It took six months before the diagnosis turned up the gall bladder problem.

The next season was a nightmare for the former U.S. Amateur champion. He earned only $23,582 in 1975 and lost his exempt status. After a fast start in 1976, he fizzled and again missed the top 60 — the cutoff point for exempt status.

"I just pooped out," Wadkins recalls. "I decided I had to get in better condition, so I started running four or five miles a week to get my legs in shape. I've been doing that ever since."

Wadkins is off to another quick start, having earned $9,527 in six tournaments, placing him 31st. A win or high finish today could elevate him into the top 10.

For Wadkins to play poorly was a new experience.

"I'd never known anything but success all my life," said 5-8, 160-pounder. "I didn't know golf was a hard game. I made a lot of money from the start and I lived high. I still do. I've never been the type to pinch pennies."

Surprisingly, Wadkins has never had to qualify on Monday despite failing to reach the top 60s two years in a row.

"My past reputation carried me," he confessed. "When I didn't make cuts, I got sponsors' exemptions. I've been lucky in that regard. But I expect to win again soon. I had some good contracts that are still in effect," he said. "I probably earned as much in 1975 and 1976 as I did in my big years. But, to keep those contracts, I'll have to start winning again."

Wadkins is regarded as one of the best ball strikers on the tour. What may keep him from matching the glory years of the past is his putting — especially the short ones.

"I always seem to miss one or two short putts a round," he admitted. "I can't tell you why, I just do."

MARK PFEIL, the former USC star and Walker Cupper, is finding life on the PGA tour more rewarding the second time around.

Pfeil earned less than $1,000 last year and was forced to try the players' school again to regain his touring card. He already is far ahead of 1976, when he failed to qualify for the first 10 tournaments.

"It's just a matter of confidence," the Palos Verdes youngster says. "I've made a round $1,600 so far and that's pretty good for six weeks."

Pfeil says he has a "game plan" for the tour now that was impossible to implement as a rookie. "Just knowing how the tour works, where to stay, how to pace yourself and so on has built my confidence."

Pfeil, who is sponsored by some friends, including his father, got a nice stake when he won ammini-tour event in the Carmel area prior to the start of the tour. His winning check was $12,000.

After three rounds of the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open at Riviera, he is in a tie for 54th place. A par round today could earn him $500 or more.

Smooth

THERE ARE 442 card-carrying PGA pros eligible for any tour event and an average of 275 try each week for the 144 to 156 spots. The traffic jam is such that the Tournament Players Division has instituted a new policy that could trim the eligibles by 20 per cent or more in 1978.

Rookies have to win $5,000 the first year, $7,000 the second to remain on tour. Now the veterans will have to reach at least $7,000 or their cards probably will be pulled.

This means players like Curtis Sifford, Cesar Sanudo, Art McNickle, Jim Weichers, Monty Kaser, Bob Lunn, Pete Brown, Steve Taylor, Steve Spray, Terry Small and dozens of others face losing their cards if they don't improve. None reached $7,000 in 1976.

Southpaw swinger

Roger Maltie, normally a righthander, is forced to work his way out of the rough on No. 2 Saturday at Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open by turning lefthander. He is nine strokes behind leader Tom Purtzer entering the final round today at Riviera Country Club.

PURTZER LEADS—

for a bird on the 10th, eagled the 599-yard 11th with a drive, 3-iron and 25-foot putt and then canned a 35-footer to go 13-under on the 12th. That's when his lead stretched to six strokes.

"The hole looked six inches wide," he said.

Purtzer lost a stroke on the 13th, birdied the 14th from 15 feet, parred the 15th, bogeyed the 16th, birdied the 17th from 18 feet and then three-putted the final hole.

"It was kind of wild," he understated.

Wadkins shot 69 and was unhappy.

"I was in-between clubs all day," he said. "I never struggled so hard in my life. I was pleased that I hung in the way I did. My putting was excellent."

Wadkins had five birdies and three bogies. All of his birdie putts were 10 feet or longer and two of his bogeys came when he missed short taps of 3½ and 2½ feet.

"Being three back isn't too bad on this course," said Wadkins, who last won a tournament in 1973. He has been a non-exempt player for two years, following a gall bladder operation, after winning more than $300,000 in his first two years on the tour.

"I'm beat to a pulp," Wadkins said. "Any hole here can nail you if you don't concentrate.

Wadkins wasn't sure if having a non-winner in front of him was an advantage.

"Tom is a capable player and I think he will decide his own fate tomorrow," said Watkins. "If he can shoot 1 or 2-under he will be hard to catch. This isn't a course you can charge and shoot 66 very easy."

No other golfer appears to be within striking distance.

Former USC star Craig Stadler is in fourth place at 6-under following a 70. Jim Masserio, who hasn't won a penny this year, is next. He posted a 68 which included eagles on the first and fifth holes.

Twelve players shot in the 60s Saturday, a noteworthy achievement, but not everyone enjoyed the day. Curtis Sifford posted an 88 with a 10 on the second hole when he hit four out of the bunker.

The only man he leads is veteran Bob Wynn, who signed the wrong scorecard and was disqualified. It was the second week in a row he signed an incorrect card.

Two aces can't halt J. Rankin

ST. PETERSBURG (AP) — Two separate holes-in-one by challengers didn't distract Judy Rankin as she stretched her lead to two strokes Saturday in the $50,000 Orange Blossom Classic on the ladies golf tour.

Mrs. Rankin shot a two-under-par 70 for a second-round total of 139 in the Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament.

Joyce Kazmierski scored a hole-in-one on the 135-yard third hole to give her a second-round 71. She was alone in second with 141. Bonnie Bryant also carded an ace on the third hole in Saturday's play for a 70 and a 147 total.

MRS. RANKIN bogied the last two holes of the front nine but then birdied four holes in the final nine for her two under par.

"I drove the ball a whole lot better today than yesterday," said Mrs. Rankin. "I put it where I wanted to more often and hit it longer. I didn't three-putt a green which is a major accomplishment for me."

Miss Kazmierski lost the gain she had made with her hole-in-one when she double bogied the seventh and ninth holes. She had two bogies and a birdie on the back nine to finish at one under par.

"It was my very first one," she said of her hole-in-one. "A hole-in-one is kind of like a bad hole, you have to forget about it and continue playing. I couldn't enjoy it for too long."

Sandra Palmer was third with a 143 after shooting a 70 on the 6,109-yard Pasadena Country Club course.

Tied for fourth at 144 were Judy Kimball and Sally Little.

Miss Kimball had the day's low round, a 68, while Miss Little shot her second successive 72.

Washington State riddles Stanford

STANFORD (AP) — Guard Harold Rhodes scored 22 points to lift Washington State to a 69-52 Pacific-8 victory over Stanford Saturday night.

Washington State is now 6-5 in the Pac-8 and 17-7 over-all. The loss dropped Stanford of 28 in the conference and 10-13.

transaction involving the assignment of a star player's contract for a very large sum of money."

The A's owner said Kuhn asked any club seriously contemplating such a deal to "advise this office concerning the details prior to making any commitment."

Finley said he sent his own telegram to Kuhn and the other club owners Saturday, saying the commissioner's request was "a shocking interference in the business activities of the clubs."

He said baseball rules do not require the commissioner to be notified of transactions until they are completed and added, "The negotiations between clubs concerning proposed assignments of player contracts are the exclusive private business concern of the clubs."

Minutes before selling Lindblad, Finley said he would not complete deals for him and Blue before U.S. District Court Judge Frank McGarr rules on his $3.5 million suit against Kuhn.

Finley filed the suit after Kuhn voided his sales last June of Blue to the New York Yankees for $1.5 million and outfielder Joe Rudi and pitcher Rollie Fingers to Boston for $1 million each. Kuhn said the deals were not in the best interests of baseball.

Testimony wound up Jan. 13. Attorneys are due to file briefs by Feb. 28 and Finley said he expects a decision in March. McGarr said the issue before him is whether Kuhn had the power to void the deals.

AFTER THE 1976 season, Rudi and Fingers became free agents and were signed by the Angels and San Diego respectively.

In his telegram, Finley said, "Your previous interference with Oakland's business affairs has almost completely destroyed the franchise. Any player transactions contemplated by Oakland are matters of absolute necessity to repair the damage you have already done and to allow Oakland to remain as a significant franchise in the American League."

In a telephone interview, Finley said he was certain that Kuhn's telegram resulted from the offers for Blue and Lindblad.

"Bowie Kuhn is continuously harassing Charles O. Finley," the A's owner claimed. "I think my telegram speaks for itself. Frankly, you can tell the commissioner where to go."

Cerritos rallies to tumble OC

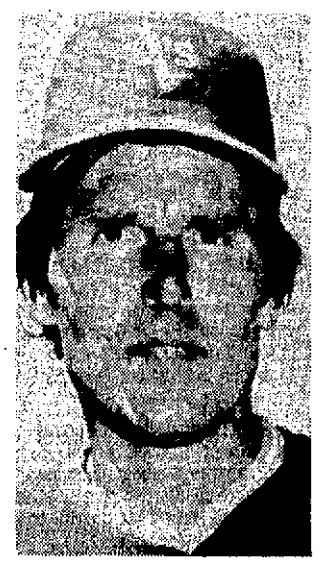

Trailing 39-31 at halftime, Cerritos College poured in 53 second half points to overhaul visiting Orange Coast, 84-72, in South Coast Conference action Saturday night.

A large measure of the Falcons' second-half success could be traced to the free throw line, where Cerritos sank 17 of 20 attempts in the game's final 20 minutes. During the same span Orange Coast hit only three of four and lost three players on fouls.

Freshman Brian Lumsden topped all scorers with 20 points and three other Falcons tallied in double figures as Cerritos improved its lifetime record against Orange Coast to 23-4 since 1962.

ORANGE COAST (72): Bolden 18, Boldt 12, Golden 12, Carkuf 8, Oman 6, Berry 6, Vogelsang 6, Holland 4, Liscoit 2.
CERRITOS (84): Lumsden 20, Chavez 15, Riphagen 12, Sonsma 11, Day 8, Kincaid 6, Homsher 6, Swaving 4.
Halftime score: Orange Coast 39, Cerritos 31.

Morgan, Foster, Griffey in fold

CINCINNATI (AP)—All-Star second baseman Joe Morgan, only the second National League player to win consecutive most valuable player awards, came to terms Saturday for what he called the largest contract in Cincinnati Reds' history.

He said the contract was for more than a $1 million and made him the highest-paid player in the Reds' 108-year existence.

The Reds simultaneously announced that star outfielders Ken Griffey and George Foster also agreed to multi-year contracts.

All three signed for three years, according to Dick Wagner, Reds' general manager. No other figures were disclosed.

Wagner said it was the first time the club agreed to three-year pacts. Six Reds remained unsigned. They were 10-time All-Star Pete Rose, relief ace Rawly Eastwick, starting pitcher Gary Nolan, shortstop Dave Concepcion, utilityman Mike Lum and minor league pitcher Pat Darcy.

The signings came after three days of negotiations between the Reds and player agent Tom Reich of Pittsburgh, who represented the trio.

Morgan, 33, said he was relieved to get the contract stalemate over and predicted the Reds would win their sixth National League West title in seven years.

"I never really gave any thought to playing out my option," said Morgan, whose rise as a hitter coupled with his speed and defense were key factors in the Reds' successive world titles.

"I said five years ago that I hoped to finish my career in Cincinnati and I feel the same way now. It's my kind of town and my kind of team," said the 5-8 infielder who was the first second baseman since Jackie Robinson to drive in more than 100 runs. He had 111 while slugging a career-high 27 home runs.

Griffey, 27, hit a team-leading .336 last season, losing the National League batting title on the final day of the season to Chicago's Bill Madlock. It was his second successive .300 season.

The 28-year-old Foster, who led the majors with 121 runs batted in, called his agreement "a fair contract." He said the Reds' front office has "become more liberal" involving long-term contracts. "They realized they have to hold on to their good players."

Wagner said the Reds "have adjusted our thinking to meet the needs of the time."

Foster has emerged as one of baseball's top run producers since moving into leftfield in 1975. His insertion in the lineup moved Rose to third.

He voiced optimism that the Reds will be able to sign Concepcion, but indicated concern that Rose "might be serious about playing out his option."

Morgan has compiled a .303 batting average in five years with the Reds since arriving after the celebrated trade with Houston. He has averaged 22 home runs, 85 runs batted in and 62 stolen bases per season since then.

AL finally beats NL—in softball

INNISBROOK, Fla. (AP) — Boston Red Sox slugger Jim Rice salved American League pride Saturday, hitting a home run in the final inning to beat the National League, 10-9, in the second all-star softball championship.

The seven-inning game between the stars of both leagues highlighted a weekend of charity sports events at the Innisbrook Resort Club.

The National League jumped to 2-0 lead in the first inning on a home run by Cincinnati Reds catcher Johnny Bench. Pittsburgh Pirate Willie Stargell hit a two-run homer in the second to stretch the lead.

The American League tied the score 5-5 in the fourth on a home run by Graig Nettles of New York and went ahead in the fifth inning on consecutive singles by the Minnesota Twins' Rod Carew, Yankee Thurman Munson and Chris Chambliss and Carl Yastrzemski of the Red Sox.

THE NATIONAL League tied the game 9-9 in the seventh on a two-out homer by National League home run champion Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phillies.

But Rice clinched the game for the American League with his second home run of the day. Rice received the game's most valuable player award from baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn. Kuhn announced the game for the crowd of 3,300 and a national televison audience.

The losing pitcher was Tom Seaver of the New York Mets. Cy Young Award winner Jim Palmer of the Baltimore Orioles took the win after coming in in the sixth inning for Mark Fydrich of the Detroit Tigers.

Proceeds of the event went to the Sickle Cell Disease Foundation and the Civitan International, a fund for the the mentally retarded.

Water levels top angling question

The California drought has brought about new questions in places where fishermen gather and talk. It isn't How to Catch Fish or Where Do We Go to Fish? Now it goes like this: "Is there any water in the lake?" "Will the lake go dry before midsummer?"

One concessionaire at Lake Cachuma brought the lake's condition into sharp focus when I talked to him Saturday. Glenn Todd, who operates the Cachuma Lake Store, said the lake's level is down 24 feet but prospect for a full season is excellent. Most of Cachuma's water goes for domestic use in Santa Barbara. No body contact sports have ever been allowed in Cachuma.

Glenn said Santa Barbara County and the Department of Fish and Game are alternating trout plants in the lake and the temperature remains right for rainbow survival. Also, Cachuma is loaded with redear sunfish and they are big. Glenn says that lots of those fish have been caught and they weigh as much as one and one-half pounds each.

Casitas Lake, Ventura County's bright spot for fishihng and boating recreation , is in good shape even though lower than usual. However, it is expected to go through the season without any bad effects from California's parched areas. This columnist will endeavor to keep readers informed about water conditions as well as the fishing situation this year.

ALL OF THE LAKES in San Diego County are in good condition and officials are not expecting water-lowering problems. Lower Otay Lake was opened Wednesday with one of the best bass totals ever recorded. There were no huge bass, but there were numerous limits of largemouths with an average of 10 to 12 pounds for each five-fish limit. Otay will be operated through the season on Wednesdays, Saturdays, Sundays and holidays from sunrise to sunset. The lake is 20 miles southeast of San Diego and eight miles east of Chula Vista.

Trout plants are still being made at San Vicente Lake, one of the lakes in the San Diego City Parks and Recreation Department chain. It runs from Thursday through Sunday and from sunrise to sunset. Remember that this lake has produced some of the largest bass ever caught in California. Normally it closes in the spring and El Capitan is opened.

Rolla Williams, my outdoor editor friend at The San Diego Union, says that there is even a possibility that Lake Hodges may be opened this year. No date has yet been confirmed. Hodges has been closed to fishing for a long time and there should be some largemouth monsters in that lake.

In addition to bass, San Vicente has some big crappie and catfish. An opening date for Sutherland Lake has not been set, but it is due soon. Wohlford Lake, also in San Diego County but not one of those operated by the City of San Diego, is due for an opening soon. Henshaw Lake is open the year 'round.

LOOKING AT THE LAKES created by the California Water Project, the general outlook isn't so rosy. All of those lakes—Pyramid, Castaic and Downstream Pool, Silverwood, Perris and Skinner—were filled mostly with water from Oroville Lake and the huge aqueduct from the Feather River country. The operating Metropolitan Water District in an effort to help Marin County and possibly other counties in the north, has cut the flow of water to a trickle.

Naturally, those lakes are going to feel the effect as spring and summer warm days will start normal evaporation. Right now, however, there is good fishing in all of those lakes. Skinner is one lake that can be filled with either water from Oroville or from the Colorado River aqueducts.

What about the lakes on the Colorado River—Mead, Mohave, Havasu? So far, the prospects there are good for plenty of water, but there was not enough snow in the enormous watershed that feeds the Colorado to make a normal year. Also, the MWD will be drawing more water from the Colorado because of the cutback on water from Northern California.

The fishing news from Mead and Havasu was on the bright side. Herb Murphy, Long Beach, who keeps a sharp eye on everything at Temple Bar on Mead, reported another big weekend. There were many limits of stripers. Jess Harper and Ed Smith, Long Beach, fished in Iceberg Canyon, caught limits every day and their fish ranged upward to 12 pounds. They were using Hellbender lures. One Anaheim angler got two limits. His largest fish weighed 21 pounds.

Poly, Jordan Moore favorites

L.B. fives eye CIF play

By ELAINE RISINGER

With Moore League play opening March 1, local high school basketball teams have been measuring their strengths during pre-season play in preparation for their first year of CIF competition.

Both Poly High, last year's Vinnie G. Eaton League champions, and Jordan, three-time champion since 1972, hope to capture the title, also eyed by strong contenders, Millikan, Lakewood and Wilson.

Jordan, coached by Lorie Lindahl, has two returning varsity players, Judy Ransen, an aggressive guard, and Melody Roth, a forward who has "greatlimproved on the offensive boards." Five former JV players and three talented sophomores complete the roster.

Some of the names will be familiar. Two Hamilton girls are on the team replacing their sister, Adrienne, who attends Long Beach City College. Latishue, a junior, was the leading JV rebounder in 1976. Her sister,

WOMEN IN SPORTS

Katherine, is a 6-foot sophomore graduate of Hamilton Junior High.

"Katherine could develop into one of the finest players around," says Lindahl. "She was MVP at Ramona Park and played in the Southern California summer league at Los Angeles State."

TWO OTHER sophomore team members are Gaylene Ballard, guard, and Vanessa Davis, a promising forward. Gaylene, whose sister, Kerry, played for Jordan, is a sure starter. "She will be the playmaker," adds Lori.

Laura Bibbs, Robin Ruess, Launa Gaudette and Crystal Hammock were also members of the 1976 championship JV team. Laura will be looked to for outside scoring and strong defense. Lori says. Robin, another definite starter, will see a lot of playing time if not hamp ered by an early season injury.

Launa, who has lettered in basketball, softball and volleyball since attending Jordan, has been voted team captain. MVP on the B team as a sophomore, Crystal, a playmaker, will provide scoring off the bench.

Margaret Kemp of Wilson has nothing but praise for the attitude and dedication of her team. "Most of my kids live on the Westside, and they get up at 5 a.m. when we have 6 a.m. practice in the gym." The team is on a rotating sharing schedule of the facility.

Many of the members are new to the team. One "super player," Demetrece Kendrick, a senior guard, will be returning. Senior Barbara Lawrence, a forward on the C team last year, made the varsity roster.

Completing the lineup are Sherry Logan, Julie Christopherson, Vera Gartinsky, Vivian Kendrick, Yvette Logan, Carla Neasel, Victoria Orozco, Sheryl Carello and Connie Oden.

Connie, all-league in volleyball, is a center forward. "She is a good rebounder and team player," Margaret says.

Showing great promise is Sheryl Carello, a junior center. Almost 6-feet tall, Sheryl is playing her first year of basketball. With experience and teaching Margaret feels, "She could be one of the best in the state. She is Miss Grace out there on the court."

Previews of other high school teams will be run in succeeding weeks.

The powerhouse St. Joseph of Lakewood team tops the rankings in the CIF Southern Section Top 10 girls basketball poll. Led by its top scorer and rebounder, Kathy Hammond, the squad knocked off Jordan in the Garden Grove Invitational Tournament.

LONG BEACH City College softball team made up for its slow start against Cypress (7-0 loss) by tallying a 6-5 win over Santa Monica College.

The Vikings had been focusing on defense before the Orange County game.

With some added batting practice LBCC landed 11 hits and a five-run inning with Santa Monica.

Sue Osendorf singled pulling in two runs. Dawn Wiley, who played an "outstanding game," according to coach Donna Prindle, was two for two, had a stolen base and two RBI.

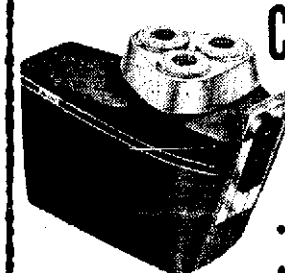

THE VIKINGS gymnastic team scored a fine 122.5 points in a tri-meet victory over El Camino and San Diego City recently. This brings their league record to 10-0.

The LBCC score is less than two points from the team mark needed to qualify for regionals.

Jeanne Teissere once again led the Vikings, winning all four individual events in addition to capturing the all-around competition, as she has in every meet this season. She also set a school record in the vault with her score of 9.1, eclipsing the old mark of 9.0 held by teammate Gayle Wilson. It was the second school record of the year for the freshman. She holds 9.0 on the uneven parallel bars.

Wilson has been the other Viking leader finishing just behind Jeanne. Susie Raap's 7.35 on the beam gave her second for the third time this year.

Viking baseballers bury Ventura, 14-5

Long Beach City College captured the championship of the Santa Barbara baseball tournament Saturday on the strength of a 17-hit attack, clobbering Ventura 14-6.

Centerfielder Danny Gausepohl collected three hits, making him 10-for-20 during the tournament, while designated hitter Mark Bonner finished the four-game set with 10 RBI.

The Vikings employed four pitchers and surrendered 11 hits but Steve Stone, who received credit for the victory, did not allow a run in his four innings of work.

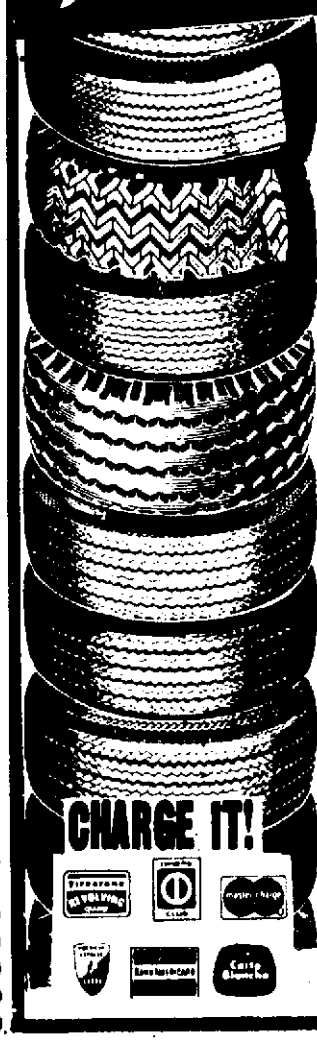

Long Beach, 10th-ranked in the Southland, is now 5-1.

In $414,000 Daytona '500'

Petty: The man to beat—again

DAYTONA BEACH (AP) — With two racing victories already in his Speed Weeks satchel, Cale Yarborough says he's going after the "triple crown of Daytona" in the $414,000 Daytona 500 today.

He beat half the late-model stock car field in his swift Chevrolet in Thursday's qualifying races, then turned around and whipped a classy field of nine in the International Race of Champions Friday.

Yarborough nosed out the richest winner in all of racing, A.J. Foyt, in the IROC race and Foyt will be one of the top favorites today.

FOYT qualified his own Chevrolet second fastest and starts in the front row alongside Donnie Allison, winner of Saturday's late-model sportsman race. Allison, also in a Chevy, won the pole position at 188.048 miles an hour.

But the man to beat in every Daytona 500 is Richard Petty. He's won it five times. No one else had done so more than once.

Petty, in a Dodge, is even more the driver on the spot as a result of his convincing runaway in the companion 125-mile race to Yarborough's winning qualifier on Thursday.

"Everbody's car was losing the track except Petty's on Thursday," Allison said. "Unless everybody else improves the handling, he can run away from all of us again."

Petty and his friendly rival, David Pearson, will start close together near the front of the field, as usual. Petty's easy victory over second-place Pearson, in a Mercury, over the 125-mile route indicates they won't be together at the finish for a duplication of last year's slambang finish.

A year ago they came out of the final turn headed for the checkered flag side by side. Suddenly smashing together and against the concrete outer wall, they went spinning wildly. Pearson kept his engine running and struggled across the finish line while Petty sat helplessly 100 yas short, trying to restart.

PETTY and Yarborough start on the second row behind Allison and Foyt. Pearson and 1975 winner Benny Parsons in a Chevrolet start in the third row.

Bobby Allison, Donnie's brother, starts his Matador along with Buddy Baker's Ford in the fourth row, and right behind them are Dave Marcis in a Mercury and Darrell Waltrip in a Chevrolet.

The winner of the top prize of $49,900 plus bonus money probably will come from that group. The other 32 starters will be going for the leftovers.

"I'd like to hook up with Foyt in another draft just like the one Friday, in the same order," said Yarborough, referring to the practice of running nose-to-tail which improves the speed of both cars.

"Not me," Foyt said. "I want to reverse the order of finish."

Foyt could make it a $100,000 weekend if he wins. He collected $50,000 as over-all winner of the IROC four-race series for the second straight year. Including three Indy 500 victories, Foyt has won nearly $3 million on race tracks around the world.

One down . . .

Donnie Allison shows off trophy in victory lane after winning Saturday's Permatex 300, a prelude to today's $414,000 Daytona 500 in Daytona Beach. Allison will start on pole for today's race.

Allison 'tunes up' for '500'

DAYTONA BEACH (AP) — Minutes after boldly charging to victory on the last lap of Saturday's late-model sportsman race, Donnie Allison was a lot more cautious in speculating about how he'd run in today's $414,000 Daytona 500 stock car classic in which he'll start from the pole.

"I don't make predictions," Allison said after edging Darrell Waltrip by eight feet for the $16,325 first prize in the 300-mile Permatex race.

"I'll just wait and see what happens Sunday. You have to plan it as it goes.

"I just know that my car's running good and I don't plan to destroy it in the early part of the race. I want to be around when 500 miles is up."

The 37-yeàr-old racing veteran from Hueytown, Ala., should be hoping that racing's variables and his skills produce the same kind of result they did Saturday.

THE battle for first place was between Allison and Waltrip for the last third of the 120 laps. Waltrip, of Franklin, Tenn., pitted on the 101st lap but took on only gas—no tires—and was moving again in 8.2 seconds.

Allison needed more gas, too, but he couldn't afford to take the time for tires. So he pitted on lap 109, got the gas and was out in 8.1 seconds.

Waltrip and Allison were running 1-2 when Ray Hendrick caught the wall coming out of turn four, spun wildly and also took Jack Ingram onto the track's apron.

Waltrip and Allison squeaked through that danger on the 115th lap, then held their positions until the caution flag was pulled in with three laps to go.

At that point, Allison's strategy came into play. He followed Waltrip for two laps, then passed him on the last straightaway and held the lead to the checkered flag.

"When Darrell didn't take on tires, we knew we couldn't afford to take on tires," Allison said. "Any time you run on this track that long without a change of tires, it gets pretty hectic.

"I knew I could't wait to come off turn four to catch him, because I saw how much both cars were sliding on the tires. I knew I had to be leading going into turn three. I felt like if I got ahead of him by then, I could stay ahead to the line."

Waltrip wasn't surprised by Allison's plan.

"I knew what looked like a thrilling finish was never going to take place," he said. "Donnie knew I couldn't get through three and four.

"He just waited. He could have passed me the lap before had he wanted to. I guess he waited until the final lap just to make sure."

The 48th Midwinter Regatta of the the Southern California Yachting Association got under way shortly before noon Saturday with 1,199 yachts competing. That was just one boat short of the number the general chairman, Don Brown, had predicted.

Alamitos Bay Yacht Club of Long Beach had the largest number of entries—75 boats, a record for any year. Seal Beach Yacht Club also had a record number of yachts competing in a dozen classes.

The fast and hot Lasers, a class that appeals to the younger set, almost caught up with the Naples Sabots in numbers. There were 97 lasers competing out of AYBC, plus five Tazers, a new boat that is called an oversized Laser.

Naples Sabots were competing in Newport Harbor, and there were 118 of those. Of that number, 21 were manned by seniors, well over the 40-year mark. Newport Harbor and LBYC were host to the Salbots that sailed inside the harbor.

In addition, Seal Beach, Alamitos Bay and Newport, here is the way the other clubs reported:

YACHTS competing at Dana Point and Capistrano Yacht Club combined for 49, Long Beach YC 25, Los Angeles 88, Cabrillo Beach 114, Balboa and La Bahia Corinthian 66, California Yacht Club 85, Del Rey Yacht Club 105, Langdon Harbour 18, King Harbor 88, Low Ships Fleet of Long Beach 67. Also in competition at California YC were 14 power boats in a predicted log race.

Along with the various committee and official boats, there were well over 1250 boa s engaged in the midwinter, which will conclude today at all clubs except Los Angeles YC, which goes through Monday.

Saturday's winds were gentle and from 8 to 10 knots and there were few problems. One large yacht brought to LAYC by a Mexican skipper and crew lost a mast at the start of one of the events and had to withdraw.

Cauthen takes on 'Shoe' today in rich San Antonio

The old master, Bill Shoemaker, will try to show the young whiz, Steve Cauthen, how a veteran does it today when the two jockeys hook up in the $117,500 San Antonio Stakes at Santa Anita Park.

Cauthen, the 16-year-old sensation who has ridden 114 winners this year, including seven at Santa Anita, will be gunning for his first triumph in a $100,000 race. The 45-year-old Shoemaker will be attempting to bring home his 121st winner in a hundred-grander.

Cauthen will be aboard Sharif, while Shoemaker has the mount on early-line favorite Riot In Paris. Sharif gave Cauthen one of his seven victories at Santa Anita, when the two teamed for an allowance test victory Feb. 6.

Riot In Paris is assigned top weight of 123 pounds for the 1⅛-mile event for 4-year-olds and older which has drawn a field of 10.

OWNED BY Mary Jones Bradley and trainer Charlie Whittingham, Riot in Paris won last summer's $100,000-added Del Mar Invitational and then came back to Santa Anita to take the San Gabriel Handicap.

Kirby Lane, winner of the Strub Stakes, the first $100,000 race of the year for thoroughbreds, also is in the field at 122 pounds.

If the 10 entries all go to the post, the San Antonio will be worth $72,500 to the winner with second valued at $20,000.

In post-position order, the field for the San Antonio will have Double Discount, 115 with Francisco Mena riding; Ancient Title, 119, Sandy Hawley; Sharif; Properantes, Angel Cortero Jr., 114; Distant Land, Darrel McHargue, 118; Uniformity, Fernando Toro, 119; Featherfoot, Jose Vargas, 115; Kirby Lane, Laffit Pincay; Riot in Paris, and Pisistrato, Donald Pierce, 119.

Ancient Title has been shut out this meeting, but the two-time California-bred horse of the year is expected to draw a great deal of wagering support.

Glen Hill Farm's Uniformity, carrying the same 119-pound impost as Ancient Title, has twice won stakes at Santa Anita this season. The 5-year-old son of Maris captured the San Carlos and San Pasqual Handicaps.

DARREL McHargue, who broke a five-day winless string Saturday by bringing home four winners, said riding Replant, the winner of the $55,300 San Jacinto Stakes — a stepping stone to the Santa Anita Derby — was getting easier all the time.

"This horse gets a little smarter each race," said McHargue after the 3-year-old Replant's third stakes victory of the current Santa Anita meeting.

"He was so sharp today, he placed himself behind the leaders and I simply waited for them to tire before making my move. He was running pretty hard at the end, but was well clear of the winners."

Saturday's racing was marred by an injury to jockey Steve Valdez, who was hurt when his mount, Stet, fell in the fourth race.

Valdez was admitted to Arcadia Hospital, where doctors said X-rays revealed fractures of Valdez' nose and uppper jaw.

Stet, who had to be destroyed, broke the large bone in his upper leg as the field rounded the clubhouse turn. The horse fell and threw Valdez, who was struck by another horse.

Doctors said they were uncertain when Valdez could ride again.

In the feature race, Replant, part of the favored Elmendorf entry with Highland Light, carried 122 pounds and covered the mile distance of the event for 3-year-olds in 1:35⅗. The winner returned $3.80, $2.80 and $2.20.

Smasher, also carrying 122 pounds and with Fernando Toro aboard, finished nearly five lengths back and paid $4 and $2.60.

McHARGUE kept Replant just off the pace in the early going, then coaxed him past Current Concept and into the lead for good early in the stretch.

McHargue began his day by riding the winner on both ends of the daily double, bringing home $4.40 winner Let's Get Lucky in the opening race, then scoring a $12.40 triumph on Theologist in the second. The daily double payoff was $32.40.

McHargue then came back to bring home $4 winner Money Or Eats in the sixth before the victory aboard Replant in the feature.

L.B. State drops doubleheader

Long Beach State amassed 13 hits while yielding 23 Saturday in dropping a 12-3, 6-1 doubleheader to visiting UC Irvine.

Racing roundup

GOLDEN GATE FIELDS — Crafty Native, a 30-1 outsider, won by a length over favored Cojak in the $40,000 feature race. With Mike James up and carrying 112 pounds, 10 less than Cojak, Crafty Native ran the mile in 1:38⅖. Roberto Pineda brought Cojak in a half length ahead of third-place Money Lender. Cojak and Money Lender were head-and-head entering the stretch, leading a field of eight 3-year-olds and up. Crafty Native swung from the rail to the outside for his winning rally, worth $26,350. Crafty Native paid $68.20, $17.60 and $5.80.

AQUEDUCT — Road Princess, the 8-to-5 favorite, overtook Maria's Baby and Sweet Alliance in the stretch drive to win the $53,650 Ruthless Stakes for 3-year-old fillies. It was the second successive stakes success for the daughter of Gallant Man owned by Elmendorf Farm and trained by John Campo. Sweet Alliance, fresh from a nine-length victory in the Jersey Belle Stakes at Garden State a week ago, rallied along the rail under Chris McCarron, to take second place, 1¼ lengths behind the winner and half a length over Maria's Baby. Steve Cauthen, the sensational 16-year-old apprentice jockey who was trying for his third win of the afternoon, got the lead atop Maria's Baby at the eighth pole but could not withstand the closing rush of Road Princess and Sweet Alliance, who led until the head of the stretch, on the rail. Road Princess paid $5.20.

GULFSTREAM PARK — Gravelines came from between horses to win the first division of the Canadian Turf Handicap and Gay Jitterbug, was a decisive winner in the second division. Both were heavy favorites. Gravelines, a French-bred 5-year-old, was three-quarters of a length ahead of Proponent. Lord Layabout was third. Gravelines paid $4.40. Gay Jitterbug was winning his fifth successive race and paid $4.60. The first division was worth $55,700, with $33,420 going to Gravelines. Gay Jitterbug took $32,420 of the $54,700 second division purse.

Sulkies ready to roll at Los Alamitos

The sixth Southern California Racing Association spring harness meeting gets under way at Los Alamitos Race Course Wednesday night with an 8 p.m. post time for the first-race $2 exacta.

New SCRA racing secretary Jim Ewart promises a big opening week of racing action for what promises to be a record season on the five-eighths mile oval. Highlighting the opening four nights of the meeting will be Saturday's $10,000 Silkwood Race. Friday's card will feature the $10,000 Long Beach Trot.

Defending driving champ Gene Vallandingham, who set a single season record with 54 triumphs last year, heads a list of top drivers set for the local season.

All-time Los Alamitos leader Robert Williams, Jim Dennis, Gerry Longo, George Cliff, Steve Desomer, Larry Gregory and a pair of newcomers to Los Alamitos, Shelly Goudreau and Australian Vic Frost, figure to be among the drivers competing for the crown during the 58-night season.

Harness action will be six nights a week, Monday through Saturday, until April 30 and SCRA will be offering five exactas each program. The $2 exacta will be available on the first race with $5 exactas on for the third, fifth, seventh and ninth events every night.

The Silkwood Pace is named in honor of Orange County's first harness racing star. Driven by 70-year-old Jacob Willits, Silkwood drew crowds that outnumbered the population of the county just prior to the turn of the century and was a local hero when he easily defeated the best pacers Los Angeles County had to send to Santa Ana.

This year's Silkwood Pace promises to be one of the best ever with such outstanding horses as B.C. Count, Royal Grenadier, Dakota Star, J.R. Decker and possibly Majestic Skipper or Proud Baron coming out for the mile event.

B.C. Count was picked Top Development of the meeting here last spring after becoming the first pacer ever to record three magic miles in a single Los Alamitos season.

Water levels top angling question

The California drought has brought about new questions in places where fishermen gather and talk. It isn't How to Catch Fish or Where Do We Go to Fish? Now it goes like this: "Is there any water in the lake?" "Will the lake go dry before midsummer?"

One concessionaire at Lake Cachuma brought the lake's condition into sharp focus when I talked to him Saturday. Glenn Todd, who operates the Cachuma Lake Store, said the lake's level is down 24 feet but prospect for a full season is excellent. Most of Cachuma's water goes for domestic use in Santa Barbara. No body contact sports have ever been allowed in Cachuma.

Glenn said Santa Barbara County and the Department of Fish and Game are alternating trout plants in the lake and the temperature remains right for rainbow survival. Also, Cachuma is loaded with redear sunfish and they are big. Glenn says that lots of those fish have been caught and they weigh as much as one and one-half pounds each.

Casitas Lake, Ventura County's bright spot for fishihng and boating recreation , is in good shape even though lower than usual. However, it is expected to go through the season without any bad effects from California's parched areas. This columnist will endeavor to keep readers informed about water conditions as well as the fishing situation this year.

ALL OF THE LAKES in San Diego County are in good condition and officials are not expecting water-lowering problems. Lower Otay Lake was opened Wednesday with one of the best bass totals ever recorded. There were no huge bass, but there were numerous limits of largemouths with an average of 10 to 12 pounds for each five-fish limit. Otay will be operated through the season on Wednesdays, Saturdays, Sundays and holidays from sunrise to sunset. The lake is 20 miles southeast of San Diego and eight miles east of Chula Vista.

Trout plants are still being made at San Vicente Lake, one of the lakes in the San Diego City Parks and Recreation Department chain. It runs from Thursday through Sunday and from sunrise to sunset. Remember that this lake has produced some of the largest bass ever caught in California. Normally it closes in the spring and El Capitan is opened.

Rolla Williams, my outdoor editor friend at The San Diego Union, says that there is even a possibility that Lake Hodges may be opened this year. No date has yet been confirmed. Hodges has been closed to fishing for a long time and there should be some largemouth monsters in that lake.

In addition to bass, San Vicente has some big crappie and catfish. An opening date for Sutherland Lake has not been set, but it is due soon. Wohlford Lake, also in San Diego County but not one of those operated by the City of San Diego, is due for an opening soon. Henshaw Lake is open the year 'round.

LOOKING AT THE LAKES created by the California Water Project, the general outlook isn't so rosy. All of those lakes—Pyramid, Castaic and Downstream Pool, Silverwood, Perris and Skinner—were filled mostly with water from Oroville Lake and the huge aqueduct from the Feather River country. The operating Metropolitan Water District in an effort to help Marin County and possibly other counties in the north, has cut the flow of water to a trickle.

Naturally, those lakes are going to feel the effect as spring and summer warm days will start normal evaporation. Right now, however, there is good fishing in all of those lakes. Skinner is one lake that can be filled with either water from Oroville or from the Colorado River aqueducts.

What about the lakes on the Colorado River—Mead, Mohave, Havasu? So far, the prospects there are good for plenty of water, but there was not enough snow in the enormous watershed that feeds the Colorado to make a normal year. Also, the MWD will be drawing more water from the Colorado because of the cutback on water from Northern California.

The fishing news from Mead and Havasu was on the bright side. Herb Murphy, Long Beach, who keeps a sharp eye on everything at Temple Bar on Mead, reported another big weekend. There were many limits of stripers. Jess Harper and Ed Smith, Long Beach, fished in Iceberg Canyon, caught limits every day and their fish ranged upward to 12 pounds. They were using Heljbender lures. One Anaheim angler got two limits. His largest fish weighed 21 pounds.

Viking baseballers bury Ventura, 14-5

Long Beach City College captured the championship of the Santa Barbara baseball tournament Saturday on the strength of a 17-hit attack, clobbering Ventura 14-6.

Centerfielder Danny Gausepohl collected three hits, making him 10-for-20 during the tournament, while designated hitter Mark Bonner finished the four-game set with 10 RBI.

The Vikings employed four pitchers and surrendered 11 hits but Steve Stone, who received credit for the victory, did not allow a run in his four innings of work.

Long Beach, 10th-ranked in the Southland, is now 5-1.

Poly, Jordan Moore favorites

L.B. fives eye CIF play

By ELAINE RESINGER
Staff Writer

With Moore League play opening March 1, local high school basketball teams have been measuring their strengths during pre-season play in preparation for their first year of CIF competition.

Both Poly High, last year's Vinnie G. Eaton League champions, and Jordan, three-time champion since 1972, hope to capture the title, also eyed by strong contenders, Millikan, Lakewood and Wilson.

Jordan, coached by Lorie Lindahl, has two returning varsity players, Judy Ransen, an aggressive guard, and Melody Roth, a forward who has "greatlimproved on the offensive boards." Five former JV players and three talented sophomores complete the roster.

Some of the names will be familiar. Two Hamilton girls are on the team replacing their sister, Adrienne, who attends Long Beach City College. Latishue, a junior, was the leading JV rebounder in 1976. Her sister,

WOMEN IN SPORTS

Katherine, is a 6-foot sophomore graduate of Hamilton Junior High.

"Katherine could develop into one of the finest players around," says Lindahl. "She was MVP at Ramona Park and played in the Southern California summer league at Los Angeles State."

TWO OTHER sophomore team members are Gaylene Ballard, guard, and Vanessa Davis, a promising forward. Gaylene, whose sister, Kerry, played for Jordan, is a sure starter. "She will be the playmaker," adds Lori.

Laura Bibbs, Robin Ruess, Launa Gaudette and Crystal Hammock were also members of the 1976 championship JV team. Laura will be looked to for outside scoring and strong defense, Lori says. Robin, another definite starter, will see a lot of playing time if not hamp ered by an early season injury.

Launa, who has lettered in basketball, softball and volleyball since attending Jordan, has been voted team captain. MVP on the B team as a sophomore, Crystal, a playmaker, will provide scoring off the bench.

Margaret Kemp of Wilson has nothing but praise for the attitude and dedication of her team. "Most of my kids live on the Westside, and they get up at 5 a.m. when we have 6 a.m. practice in the gym." The team is on a rotating sharing schedule of the facility.

Many of the members are new to the team. One "super player," Demetrece Kendrick, a senior guard, will be returning, Senior Barbara Lawrence, a forward on the C team last year, made the varsity roster.

Completing the lineup are Sherry Logan, Julie Christopherson, Vera Gartinsky, Vivian Kendrick, Yvette Logan, Carla Neasel, Victoria Orozco, Sheryl Carello and Connie Oden.

Connie, all-league in volleyball, is a center forward. "She is a good rebounder and team player," Margaret says.

Showing great promise is Sheryl Carello, a junior center. Almost 6-feet tall, Sheryl is playing her first year of basketball. With experience and teaching Margaret feels, "She could be one of the best in the state. She is Miss Grace out there on the court."

Previews of other high school teams will be run in succeeding weeks.

The powerhouse St. Joseph of Lakewood team tops the rankings in the CIF Southern Section Top 10 girls basketball poll. Led by its top scorer and rebounder, Kathy Haimond, the squad knocked off Jordan in the Garden Grove Invitational Tournament.

LONG BEACH City College softball team made up for its slow start against Cypress (7-0 loss) by tallying a 6-5 win over Santa Monica College.

The Vikings had been focusing on defense before the Orange County game.

With some added batting practice LBCC landed 11 hits and a five-run inning with Santa Monica.

Sue Osendorf singled pulling in two runs. Dawn Wiley, who played an "outstanding game," according to coach Donna Prindle, was two for two, had a stolen base and two RBI.

THE VIKINGS gymnastic team scored a fine 122.5 points in a tri-meet victory over El Camino and San Diego City recently. This brings their league record to 10-0.

The LBCC score is less than two points from the team mark needed to qualify for regionals.

Jeanne Teissere once again led the Vikings, winning all four individual events in addition to capturing the all-around competition, as she has in every meet this season. She also set a school record in the vault with her score of 9.1, eclipsing the old mark of 9.0 held by teammate Gayle Wilson. It was the second school record of the year for the freshman. She holds 9.0 on the uneven parallel bars.

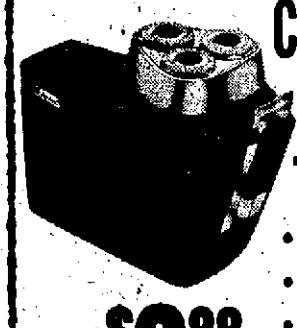

Wilson has been the other Viking leader finishing just behind Jeanne. Susie Raap's 7.35 on the beam gave her second for the third time this year.

FUN FACTS from WRIGLEY'S SPEARMINT GUM

SMALLEST STATE CAPITAL IN THE CONTIGUOUS U.S. IS CARSON CITY, NEVADA WHICH IN THE 1860's WAS LITTLE MORE THAN A PONY EXPRESS STATION, NAMED FOR KIT CARSON.

FIRST HUMAN PARACHUTE DROP FROM AN AIR VEHICLE (BALLOON) WAS MADE OCTOBER 22, 1797 BY ANDRE JACQUES GARNERIN OF FRANCE FROM OVER 2,000 FEET.

IF YOU SPENT $1,000 A DAY EVERY DAY SINCE CHRIST WAS BORN YOU WOULD NOT YET HAVE SPENT A BILLION DOLLARS.

AN ADULT HEART BEATS BETWEEN 70 AND 75 TIMES PER MINUTE TO PUMP ABOUT TEN TONS OF BLOOD EACH DAY.

You'll like the big, long-lasting flavor.

STEVE ROPER AND MIKE WOMBAT

THE REPORTED RESCUE OF A WOMAN ON A LIFE-RAFT HAS SENT STEVE ON A WILD RIDE ~

CAN'T YOU GO ANY FASTER, DRIVER? WE SHOULD HAVE REACHED THE HOSPITAL FIVE MINUTES AGO!

THIS ISLAND IS 30 MILES LONG, SIR! AND, EVEN BEFORE THE STORM, THE ROADS WERE TERRIBLE!

WHAT'S THE RUSH? YOU DON'T LOOK SICK!

THE WOMAN THEY FOUND ON THAT LIFE-RAFT MAY BE MY WIFE!

DO YOU WANT ME TO TAKE YOU BACK TO THE HOTEL, MR. ROPER?

I SUPPOSE YOU MIGHT AS WELL WAIT! THIS IS PROBABLY JUST ANOTHER DISAPPOINTMENT!

ISLAND HOSPITAL

MAY I HELP YOU, SIR?

MY NAME IS ROPER! I HAVE REASON TO BELIEVE THAT THE YOUNG WOMAN FOUND ON A LIFE-RAFT COULD BE MY WIFE!

THAT IS HARDLY LIKELY, SIR!

BUT SHE-- TRUDY -- DISAPPEARED SOME TIME AGO--AND, FROM THE DESCRIPTION IN THE PAPER, I--

I JUDGE FROM YOUR SPEECH THAT YOU ARE FROM THE STATES, MR. ROPER!

YES, YES, FROM NEW YORK! BUT--

I'M SORRY TO BLAST YOUR HOPES --- BUT THE LABEL IN THE DRESS THE YOUNG LADY WAS WEARING SHOWED THAT IT WAS PURCHASED IN LONDON, ENGLAND!

NO ONE KNOWS WHEN THE ESKIMO DOG WAS DOMESTICATED BY MANKIND, BUT APPARENTLY IT WAS SEVERAL THOUSAND YEARS AGO

SLED DOGS BELONG TO THE WOLF-SPITZ GROUP AND ARE STILL USED IN THE POLAR REGIONS

NANCY

By Ernie Bushmiller

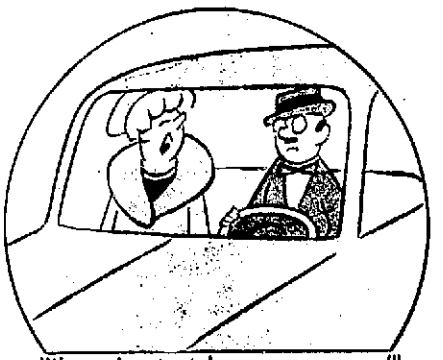

OFF THE RECORD

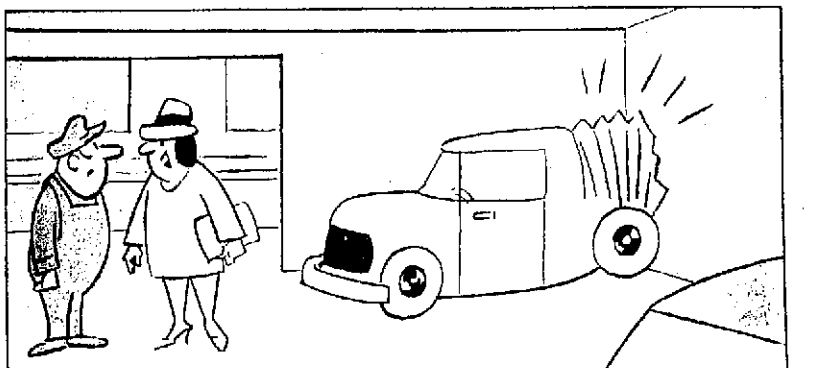

by ED REED

"Oh, Fred's just great at card tricks. Let me tell you how he made all my credit cards disappear."

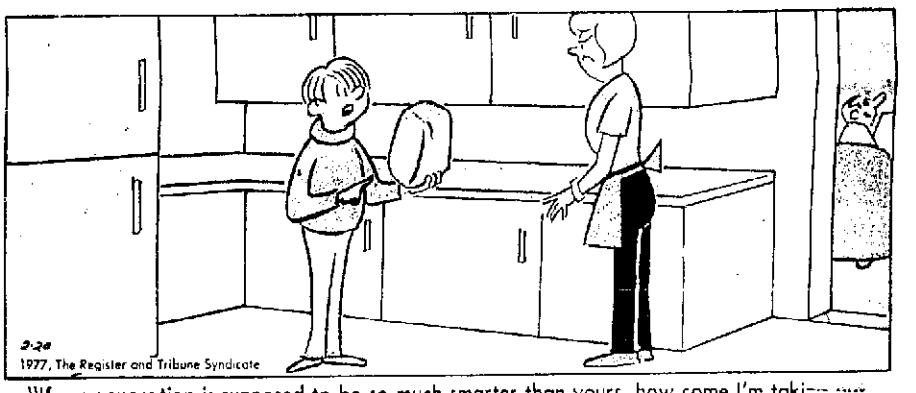

"I'm going to take a nap — you'll have to drive by yourself for awhile."

"Of course there are two answers to every problem — yours and the correct one."

"It doesn't happen all the time — only when I back up."

"If my generation is supposed to be so much smarter than yours, how come I'm taking out the garbage?"

Toni Holt — an eye-opener at '9 in the morning'

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

TONI HOLT . . . cohosts weekdays show on Channel 9

For a woman with a reputation as a "celebrity watcher," Toni Holt gets up mighty early in the morning.

Six-thirty, to be exact, or so she tells me.

Now, she'll agree that 6:30 a.m. isn't a good time for viewing celebrities. Few of them are up at that hour — unless they haven't gone to bed yet.

But Toni doesn't rise at 6:30 in hopes of spotting a famous figure. It's just that she has to be on the job at 9 — a job in which she, herself, is viewed by thousands of television fans each weekday.

Persons whose TV watching is restricted to evenings and weekends may not be familiar with Ms Holt as a TV personality. But for many people who are at home during the day, she helps to brighten their lives.

Since last July, Ms. Holt has been cohosting KHJ-TV's "Nine in the Morning" talk-and-information show with former Los Angeles Laker basketball star Tommy Hawkins and veteran newscaster George Putnam. The program airs live on Channel 9 each Monday through Friday from 9 to 11 a.m.

TONI, WHO first made a name for herself reporting on the beautiful people of showbiz, provides an entertainment news segment daily, reviews one movie and two restaurants each week and takes part in interviews and discussions with Hawkins and Putnam.

The topics can be anything from how to wallpaper a room, the price of groceries or the latest best-seller to national politics, international relations and cancer research.

"Often, Tommy and George and I get so interested in a discussion that we keep at it after the show has gone off the air," she said, adding that sometimes the exchanges can get a bit heated.

She said she loves the job, even though it cuts down on her celebrity watching.

"Sometimes I get invited to a party starting at 10, and I turn it down, saying 'I'll be in bed at 9:30 — alone,'" she told me at lunch the other day at Nickodell's, which is next door to KHJ-TV and Paramount Studios on Melrose Avenue in Hollywood.

MS. HOLT, who grew up in New York, launched her TV career in 1969 with a daily three-minute show about celebrities on KMIR-TV in Palm Springs, where she had been making her home. Earlier, she had been a successful model in New York City. She started earning such "fantastic money," she said, as a model upon graduating from high school that she dropped her plans to go to Bennington College to study for an acting career.

After just several months on the Palm Springs TV station, Toni landed a spot on a KTLA (Channel 5) morning show in Los Angeles. A short time later, she shifted to KHJ-TV (Channel 9) where she reported entertainment news twice daily (afternoon and evening). Within a year, her 3 ½-minute "Toni's Hollywood" segment was syndicated to more than 50 stations across the nation.

In the early '70s, Toni also got started as a Hollywood columnist for newspapers and magazines, including the New York Daily Mirror, Screen Stories, TV-Radio Talk, Movie Life, Modern People and the National Tattler.

When Playgirl magazine was started a few years ago, Toni spent a year traveling throughout America and Europe doing publicity for the publication.

She held the title, she told me, of "centerfold coordinator."

SHE MADE suggestions to the editors for male celebrities who might be willing to pose in the nude for the magazine's centerfold.

She emphasized, however, that she did NOT attend the photo sessions.

Toni made big headlines, especially in the major European cities, by coming to town, calling a press (and TV-radio) conference, and suggesting names of famous men for the centerfold whom she knew the magazine couldn't get.

In London, for example, she put forward the name of Anthony Armstrong Jones.

"The British papers went crazy," she recalled. "It was on the front page for days."

In other European cities, it was the same when she offered the names of actors like Delon, Belmondo, Mastroianni and Sharif.

The photogenic Ms. Holt's picture was played up prominently in newspapers all over Europe, along with those of the centerfold "possibilities." And she was interviewed on many TV shows.

"It was very much tongue-in-cheek," explained Toni. "For me, humor is the main necessity of life. And I have a great appreciation of life. Every time that I wake up and am healthy and can see the sun shining, I feel grateful to be alive."

WOULD SHE like to be called a playgirl?

"No — because I'm not a playgirl," came the reply. "I'm a very serious lady. I work 14 or 15 hours a day. I work six days a week. Working is very important to me. I love creating. I'm interested in all kinds of things and all kinds of people. Sometimes I think I'd like to go to college and major in psychology. I've read a lot, and travel's a great teacher, too."

In addition to her duties on the "Nine in the Morning" series, Ms. Holt currently writes a monthly Hollywood gossip column for Screen Stories, a monthly TV column for TV-Radio Talk, "Toni Holt's Beauty on a Budget" column for Movie Life and freelance articles. KHJ-TV recently produced a pilot for what it hopes will be a new nationally syndicated, two-minute daily Hollywood news feature with Toni as the reporter.

"And I'm writing a novel about Hollywood," she disclosed. Is it based on real people? "Sure."

The writer-TV personality has been married since last September to Tony Murray, a Paris businessman who owns fire extinguisher companies and spends part of his time in France and part of his time in Southern California. She has two sons, aged 10 and 11, from a previous marriage.

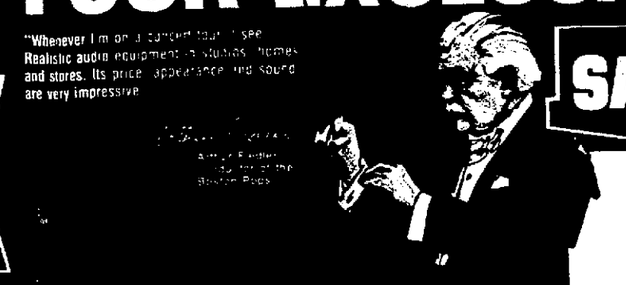

She claims a number of major celebrity news scoops, including the news of Princess Anne's engagement to Capt. Mark Phillips, straight from the mouth of Queen Elizabeth at a ball in London. Also, Frank Sinatra's impending retirement (that was before, of course, he came out of retirement); Eddie Fisher's addiction to drugs and gambling; Telly Savalas' romance with a young beauty, and Richard Burton's reasons for his divorce from Liz Taylor.

Burton, Toni pointed out, is one of the stars she asked to pose for a Playgirl centerfold.

"I'll do it if you'll label it a picture puzzle," said Dick.

SUSAN BLAKELY . . . in 'Secrets'

Susan Blakely portrays nymphomaniac in film

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press

Early in the television movie "Secrets" a puppet queen tells the princess, "Always be pure but pretend that you are not."

As a young girl, Andrea hears this at a puppet show with her mother. When she grows up, the death of her mother unleashes a hidden neurosis and she is no longer pure — but pretends she is.

Susan Blakely, in her only television appearance besides "Rich Man, Poor Man," stars as Andrea in "Secrets" on the "ABC Sunday Night Movie" at 9 tonight on Channel 7.

This movie is not a happy one and shatters some myths about nymphomania. Andrea's obsessive behavior is a rebellion against the repression she feels and a means of avoiding her mother's death.

MISS BLAKELY is excellent as Andrea as she succumbs to forces she doesn't understand. Fine performances are also turned in by Roy Thinnes as her husband, John Randolph as her father, Joanne Linville as her mother and Melody Thomas as her sister.

What's annoying about this film, however, is its use of surrealistic psychodrama. Andrea has hallucinations in which her mother is the puppet queen. It seems some other means could have been found to illustrate her mother's continued hold.

It was a difficult role, but Miss Blakely said she didn't rely on familiar acting devices.

"WHEN I do a role I don't think about it at all," she said. "I don't analyze the role. If you think about it too much you might miss something that's in you."

She sat with her bare feet folded under her on a chair in her Beverly Hills home. "I've learned all the techniques, such as thinking of a past experience to make you cry, but I don't like to use them. They become crutches. All you have to do is believe you're that woman and you're there. I become that woman."

One thing that confronted her was building sympathy for Andrea.

She said, "It was hard to make this woman pathetic. She has a good husband, a good home and life. She feels guilty about not being happy. I was worried that people wouldn't have any sympathy for her because that's necessary for understanding."

SUSAN, who will next star in the theatrical film "The Lonely Lady," said she had avoided television because of Hollywood's caste system of "television actors" and "movie actors."

"But the quality of television is coming up, and there are certain things I would prefer to do on television," she said. "When you realize that 'Rich Man' reached an audience of 50 million — I could never reach that many people the rest of my movie career."

Asner to get new series but he'll still be Lou Grant

By JAY SHARBUTT
Associated Press

Lou Grant, the sardonic, fireplug-shaped TV news director Ed Asner plays on CBS' "Mary Tyler Moore Show," began as a newspaperman. Next fall, he'll be rejoining the pad-and-pen brigade.

"Haven't seen the first script yet," said Asner, puffing on a cigarette in the den of his pleasant, sunny home in Los Angeles. "But I'm sure it'll show me as a 50-year-old man winding up in Los Angeles, looking for a new lease on life. And a job.

"And with my old newspaper contacts, I'm able to land a job on a major Southern California daily."

THE JOB, as assistant city editor on a paper run by a strong-willed woman publisher, is a step down for Grant.

But for Asner, it's a step up to star billing in his own hour-long CBS series, an as-yet-untitled newspaper show created by Allan Burns and James L. Brooks, who created "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" in 1970.

The MTM series is ending. Its last episode, on March 19, is about ... well, let's just say Lou Grant, at an age many men start their pension-time countdown, finds he needn't worry about that at WJM-TV.

Which sets the stage for Asner's return next fall to newspapering, again playing Lou Grant, the old pro with a heart of gold and liver of steel, the classic scribe with a jug of firewater in his desk drawer.

ASNER, regarded off-camera as one of this town's truly nice guys, reminds me of a few old newshawks I've known. It may be because he actually once worked on a newspaper in his home town, Kansas City, Kan.

That it was the Wyandotte High School news-

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. SMITH

THE INCOMPARABLE BOOK #2

Last week when we ran out of space, we were discussing the fact that the Old Testament and the New Testament are both inspired of God. Paul (who was speaking the things that God gave him, that inspired word) said of the Old Testament Scriptures, "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope" (Rom. 15:4).

Jesus said that the things that he spoke while here on earth were not his own, but the Father's which sent him. "For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak" (John 12:49).

When Jesus was preparing his disciples for his departure, he promised them that he would not leave them comfortless, but would send them another comforter, even the Holy Spirit. Christ said that the Holy Spirit will "teach you all things and bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have commanded you" (John 14:26). Also, Jesus said that the Holy Spirit would not speak from Himself, ". . . but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come" (John 16:13). Now here is what we have:

1. Christ spake the things which the Father gave Him (John 12:49).
2. The Holy Spirit brought to the apostles' remembrance the things that the Lord had spoken (which were the commandments of the Father, John 14:26).
3. Thus, the apostles were speaking the things commanded of the Father.

This is in complete agreement with what the apostle Paul said in Galatians 1:11-12. "But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man. For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ." Also in I Cor.2:12-13 we read, "Now we have received, not the spirit of this world, but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given us of God. Which things also we speak . . ." (Next Week We Will Discuss The Writings)

New series for Asner

paper makes no difference. You've got to start somewhere. Ed says he started as the paper's feature page editor, working with a lady co-editor.

"I handled all the gossip columns, did all the interviews," he explained. "At the same time, I was playing football. It was one of the greatest honors my journalism teacher, Bill Corporon, paid me.

"He never thought I could do both and seemed to be enormously impressed that I found a way to wear both hats at the same time."

THE EMMY award-winning actor was asked if he'd ever considered going into the newspaper dodge when he was still in high school.

"I did," he said. "It intrigued me. The idea of writing for a living, being involved in politics, current events, always possessed me.

"I mentioned to Bill that I certainly was considering that as part of my future — I actually hadn't the vaguest damn idea of what I wanted to do — and he said, 'Nope, wouldn't advise it.'

"I said, 'Why not?' He says, 'Can't make a living.'

"So," Ed said, "I'm sure I always delighted Mr. Corporon by turning my back on an insecure profession like journalism.

And picking a secure one like drama."

NEIL DIAMOND headlines his first American TV special from 9 to 10 p.m. Monday on Ch. 4. It's titled "The Neil Diamond Special," and was taped last September at the Greek Theatre in Los Angeles.

Toni Holt — an eye-opener at '9 in the morning'

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

TONI HOLT . . . cohosts weekdays show on Channel 9

For a woman with a reputation as a "celebrity watcher," Toni Holt gets up mighty early in the morning.

Six-thirty, to be exact, or so she tells me.

Now, she'll agree that 6:30 a.m. isn't a good time for viewing celebrities. Few of them are up at that hour — unless they haven't gone to bed yet.

But Toni doesn't rise at 6:30 in hopes of spotting a famous figure. It's just that she has to be on the job at 9 — a job in which she, herself, is viewed by thousands of television fans each weekday.

Persons whose TV watching is restricted to evenings and weekends may not be familiar with Ms Holt as a TV personality. But for many people who are at home during the day, she helps to brighten their lives.

Since last July, Ms. Holt has been cohosting KHJ-TV's "Nine in the Morning" talk-and-information show with former Los Angeles Laker basketball star Tommy Hawkins and veteran newscaster George Putnam. The program airs live on Channel 9 each Monday through Friday from 9 to 11 a.m.

TONI, WHO first made a name for herself reporting on the beautiful people of showbiz, provides an entertainment news segment daily, reviews one movie and two restaurants each week and takes part in interviews and discussions with Hawkins and Putnam.

The topics can be anything from how to wallpaper a room, the price of groceries or the latest best-seller to national politics, international relations and cancer research.

"Often, Tommy and George and I get so interested in a discussion that we keep at it after the show has gone off the air," she said, adding that sometimes the exchanges can get a bit heated.

She said she loves the job, even though it cuts down on her celebrity watching.

"Sometimes I get invited to a party starting at 10, and I turn it down, saying 'I'll be in bed at 9:30 — alone,'" she told me at lunch the other day at Nickodell's, which is next door to KHJ-TV and Paramount Studios on Melrose Avenue in Hollywood.

MS. HOLT, who grew up in New York, launched her TV career in 1969 with a daily three-minute show about celebrities on KMIR-TV in Palm Springs, where she had been making her home. Earlier, she had been a successful model in New York City. She started earning such "fantastic money," she said, as a model upon graduating from high school that she dropped her plans to go to Bennington College to study for an acting career.

After just several months on the Palm Springs TV station, Toni landed a spot on a KTLA (Channel 5) morning show in Los Angeles. A short time later, she shifted to KHJ-TV (Channel 9) where she reported entertainment news twice daily (afternoon and evening). Within a year, her 3 ½-minute "Toni's Hollywood" segment was syndicated to more than 50 stations across the nation.

In the early '70s, Toni also got started as a Hollywood columnist for newspapers and magazines, including the New York Daily Mirror, Screen Stories, TV-Radio Talk, Movie Life, Modern People and the National Tattler.

When Playgirl magazine was started a few years ago, Toni spent a year traveling throughout America and Europe doing publicity for the publication.

She held the title, she told me, of "centerfold coordinator."

SHE MADE suggestions to the editors for male celebrities who might be willing to pose in the nude for the magazine's centerfold.

She emphasized, however, that she did NOT attend the photo sessions.

Toni made big headlines, especially in the major European cities, by coming to town, calling a press (and TV-radio) conference, and suggesting names of famous men for the centerfold whom she knew the magazine couldn't get.

In London, for example, she put forward the name of Anthony Armstrong Jones.

"The British papers went crazy," she recalled. "It was on the front page for days."

In other European cities, it was the same when she offered the names of actors like Delon, Belmondo, Mastroianni and Sharif.

The photogenic Ms. Holt's picture was played up prominently in newspapers all over Europe, along with those of the centerfold "possibilities." And she was interviewed on many TV shows.

"It was very much tongue-in-cheek," explained Toni. "For me, humor is the main necessity of life. And I have a great appreciation of life. Every time that I wake up and am healthy and can see the sun shining, I feel grateful to be alive."

WOULD SHE like to be called a playgirl?

"No — because I'm not a playgirl," came the reply. "I'm a very serious lady. I work 14 or 15 hours a day. I work six days a week. Working is very important to me. I love creating. I'm interested in all kinds of things and all kinds of people. Sometimes I think I'd like to go to college and major in psychology. I've read a lot, and travel's a great teacher, too."

In addition to her duties on the "Nine in the Morning" series, Ms. Holt currently writes a monthly Hollywood gossip column for Screen Stories, a monthly TV column for TV-Radio Talk, "Toni Holt's Beauty on a Budget" column for Movie Life and freelance articles. KHJ-TV recently produced a pilot for what it hopes will be a new nationally syndicated, two-minute daily Hollywood news feature with Toni as the reporter.

"And I'm writing a novel about Hollywood," she disclosed. Is it based on real people? "Sure."

The writer-TV personality has been married since last September to Tony Murray, a Paris businessman who owns fire extinguisher companies and spends part of his time in France and part of his time in Southern California. She has two sons, aged 10 and 11, from a previous marriage.

She claims a number of major celebrity news scoops, including the news of Princess Anne's engagement to Capt. Mark Phillips, straight from the mouth of Queen Elizabeth at a ball in London. Also, Frank Sinatra's impending retirement (that was before, of course, he came out of retirement); Eddie Fisher's addiction to drugs and gambling; Telly Savalas' romance with a young beauty, and Richard Burton's reasons for his divorce from Liz Taylor.

Burton, Toni pointed out, is one of the stars she asked to pose for a Playgirl centerfold.

"I'll do it if you'll label it a picture puzzle," said Dick.

SUSAN BLAKELY . . . in 'Secrets'

Susan Blakely portrays nymphomaniac in film

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press

Early in the television movie "Secrets" a puppet queen tells the princess, "Always be pure but pretend that you are not."

As a young girl, Andrea hears this at a puppet show with her mother. When she grows up, the death of her mother unleashes a hidden neurosis and she is no longer pure — but pretends she is.

Susan Blakely, in her only television appearance besides "Rich Man, Poor Man," stars as Andrea in "Secrets" on the "ABC Sunday Night Movie" at 9 tonight on Channel 7.

This movie is not a happy one and shatters some myths about nymphomania. Andrea's obsessive behavior is a rebellion against the repression she feels and a means of avoiding her mother's death.

MISS BLAKELY is excellent as Andrea as she succumbs to forces she doesn't understand. Fine performances are also turned in by Roy Thinnes as her husband, John Randolph as her father, Joanne Linville as her mother and Melody Thomas as her sister.

What's annoying about this film, however, is its use of surrealistic psychodrama. Andrea has hallucinations in which her mother is the puppet queen. It seems some other means could have been found to illustrate her mother's continued hold.

It was a difficult role, but Miss Blakely said she didn't rely on familiar acting devices.

"WHEN I do a role I don't think about it at all," she said. "I don't analyze the role. If you think about it too much you might miss something that's in you."

She sat with her bare feet folded under her on a chair in her Beverly Hills home. "I've learned all the techniques, such as thinking of a past experience to make you cry, but I don't like to use them. They become crutches. All you have to do is believe you're that woman and you're there. I become that woman."

One thing that confronted her was building sympathy for Andrea.

She said, "It was hard to make this woman pathetic. She has a good husband, a good home and life. She feels guilty about not being happy. I was worried that people wouldn't have any sympathy for her because that's necessary for understanding."

SUSAN, who will next star in the theatrical film "The Lonely Lady," said she had avoided television because of Hollywood's caste system of "television actors" and "movie actors."

"But the quality of television is coming up, and there are certain things I would prefer to do on television," she said. "When you realize that 'Rich Man' reached an audience of 50 million — I could never reach that many people the rest of my theatric career."

Puppy love is killing 36,000 pets a day.

The time has come to expose the myths that have caused the American pet explosion. The myth: "Just one little litter..." The fact: Up to 10,000 kittens and puppies are now being born every hour. The myth: "She'll find a nice home..." The fact: An estimated 20 million dogs and cats are roaming free at this moment. The myth: "Well, the pound gets rid of a few strays..." The fact: 36,000 pets are slaughtered daily.

Our unwanted pet population is increasing with shocking speed. But it doesn't have to be this way. You can help.

Every night this week at 6 o'clock on Channel 7, reporter Chuck Henry will explode the myths and expose the facts behind "The Pet Explosion" on Eyewitness Closeup. You'll be horrified by the problem. And heartened by some of the solutions.

Asner to get new series — but he'll still be Lou Grant

By JAY SHARBUTT
Associated Press

Lou Grant, the sardonic, fireplug-shaped TV news director Ed Asner plays on CBS' "Mary Tyler Moore Show," began as a newspaperman. Next fall, he'll be rejoining the pad-and-pen brigade.

"Haven't seen the first script yet," said Asner, puffing on a cigarette in the den of his pleasant, sunny home in Los Angeles. "But I'm sure it'll show me as a 50-year-old man winding up in Los Angeles, looking for a new lease on life. And a job.

"And with my old newspaper contacts, I'm able to land a job on a major Southern California daily."

THE JOB, as assistant city editor on a paper run by a strong-willed woman publisher, is a step down for Grant.

But for Asner, it's a step up to star billing in his own hour-long CBS series, an as-yet-untitled newspaper show created by Allan Burns and James L. Brooks, who created "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" in 1970.

The MTM series is ending. Its last episode, on March 19, is about ... well, let's just say Lou Grant, at an age many men start their pension-time countdown, finds he needn't worry about that at WJM-TV.

Which sets the stage for Asner's return next fall to newspapering, again playing Lou Grant, the old pro with a heart of gold and liver of steel, the classic scribe with a jug of firewater in his desk drawer.

ASNER, regarded off-camera as one of this town's truly nice guys, reminds me of a few old newshawks I've known. It may be because he actually once worked on a newspaper in his home town, Kansas City, Kan.

That it was the Wyandotte High School news-

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. SMITH

THE INCOMPARABLE BOOK #2

Last week when we ran out of space, we were discussing the fact that the Old Testament and the New Testament are both inspired of God. Paul (who was speaking the things that God gave him, that inspired word) said of the Old Testament Scriptures, "For whatsoever things were written aforetime were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the scriptures might have hope" (Rom. 15:4).

Jesus said that the things that he spoke while here on earth were not his own, but the Father's which sent him. "For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak" (John 12:49).

When Jesus was preparing his disciples for his departure, he promised them that he would not leave them comfortless, but would send them another comforter, even the Holy Spirit:-Christ said that the Holy Spirit will "teach you all things and bring all things to your remembrance whatsoever I have commanded you" (John 14:26). Also, Jesus said that the Holy Spirit would not speak from Himself, " . . . but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come" (John 16:13). Now here is what we have:

1. Christ spoke the things which the Father gave Him (John 12:49).
2. The Holy Spirit brought to the apostles' remembrance the things that the Lord had spoken (which were the commandments of the Father, John 14:26).
3. Thus, the apostles were speaking the things commanded of the Father.

This is in complete agreement with what the apostle Paul said in Galatians 1:11-12. "But I certify you, brethren, that the gospel which was preached of me is not after man. For I neither received it of man, neither was I taught it, but by the revelation of Jesus Christ." Also in 1 Cor.2:12-13 we read, "Now we have received, not the spirit of this world, but the spirit which is of God; that we might know the things that are freely given us of God. Which things also we speak . . ." (Next Week We Will Discuss The Writings) paper makes no difference. You've got to start somewhere." Ed says he started as the paper's feature page editor, working with a lady co-editor.

"I handled all the gossip columns, did all the interviews," he explained. "At the same time, I was playing football. It was one of the greatest honors my journalism teacher, Bill Corporon, paid me.

"He never thought I could do both and seemed to be enormously impressed that I found a way to wear both hats at the same time."

THE EMMY award-winning actor was asked if he'd ever considered going into the newspaper dodge when he was still in high school.

"I did," he said. "It intrigued me. The idea of writing for a living, being involved in politics, current events, always possessed me.

"I mentioned to Bill that I certainly was considering that as part of my future — I actually hadn't the vaguest damn idea of what I wanted to do — and he said, 'Nope, wouldn't advise it.'

"I said, 'Why not?' He says, 'Can't make a living.'

"So," Ed said, "I'm sure I always delighted Mr. Corporon by turning my back on an insecure profession like journalism.

And picking a secure one like drama."

NEIL DIAMOND headlines his first American TV special from 9 to 10 p.m. Monday on Ch. 4. It's titled "The Neil Diamond Special," and was taped last September at the Greek Theatre in Los Angeles.

Solarian from Armstrong
the sunny floor that shines without waxing

Solarian's high shine comes from its Mirabond™ wear surface, a special formulation that will retain its gloss — without waxing — far longer than any ordinary vinyl floor.
It's also easier to keep clean. Spills, tracked-in dirt — even black heel marks — come up easily.

Puppy love is killing 36,000 pets a day.

The time has come to expose the myths that have caused the American pet explosion. The myth: "Just one little litter..." The fact: Up to 10,000 kittens and puppies are now being born every hour. The myth: "She'll find a nice home..." The fact: An estimated 20 million dogs and cats are roaming free at this moment. The myth: "Well, the pound gets rid of a few strays..." The fact: 36,000 pets are slaughtered daily.

Our unwanted pet population is increasing with shocking speed. But it doesn't have to be this way. You can help.

Every night this week at 6 o'clock on Channel 7, reporter Chuck Henry will explode the myths and expose the facts behind "The Pet Explosion" on Eyewitness Closeup. You'll be horrified by the problem. And heartened by some of the solutions.

"It Happened At The World's Fair" 3:30 p.m., Ch. 7 (1963) Elvis Presley, Joan O'Brien, Gary Lockwood, Vicky Tiu. Ten songs are included in this musical comedy about two broke bush pilots who find themselves in charge of a seven-year-old Chinese moppet at the Seattle World's Fair, where they manage to find romance and see the fair nonetheless.

"Ten Little Indians" 8 p.m., Ch. 9. Charles Aznavour, Elke Sommer, Oliver Reed, Gert Froebe. They were all invited to a party . . . but it was really an invitation to a murder . . . their own.

WEDNESDAY

"Double Trouble" 3:30 p.m., Ch. 7 (1967) Elvis Presley, Annette Day, John Williams, Yvonne Romain, The Wiere Brothers. It's a case of mistaken identity as Elvis and a beautiful girl become enmeshed in a smuggler's plot and an attempted murder in Europe.

"Wake Island" 8 p.m., Ch. 5. Brian Donlevy, Robert Preston. Story of heroic action of the U.S. Marine Corps on Wake Island during WWII.

"The Parrallax View" 9 p.m., Ch. 2. Warren Beatty, Paula Prentiss, William Daniels. The story of an investigative reporter's attempt to uncover a national conspiracy of political assassinations.

THURSDAY

"Trojan Women" 8 p.m., Ch. 9 (1972) Katharine Hepburn, Genevieve Bujold, Vanessa Redgrave, Irene Papas. Based on Euripides' Greek tragedy. Horrible plight of captured Trojan women destined to become concubines of the Greek captors.

"Seventh Avenue" 9 p.m., Ch. 4. Jay Blackman takes over as head of a major Seventh Avenue showroom but finds his life and those of people around him imperiled when a mob-instigated strike pits him against a former East Side friend who now is an underworld power. Steve Keats stars with Dori Brenner, Jane Seymour, Anne Archer and Kristoffer Tobori. (Last of three-part series.)

FRIDAY

"SST - Death Flight" 9 p.m., Ch. 7 (1977) Lorne Greene, Bert Convy, Martin Milner, Doug McClure, Burgess Meredith, Peter Graves, Tina Louise. Sabotage aboard the inaugural flight of the first American supersonic transport turns it into a nightmare.

SATURDAY

"Three Bullets For A Long Gun" 8 p.m., Ch. 9 (1973) Beau Brummell, Keith Van Der Wat, Patrick Mynhardt, Tulio Moneta. A Mexican bandit and a handsome stranger fight side by side, and then one against the other to win a hidden fortune in gold.

"The Land That Time Forgot" 9 p.m., Ch. 4 (1975). Doug McClure, John McEnery, Susan Penhaligon. Survivors of a torpedoed British ship surprise the crew of the U-boat that attacked them and commandeer the vessel, only to stray off course, landing on an uncharted island populated with prehistoric creatures and primitive men.

WALTER SCOTT'S
Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. Bob Hope is in his 70's. Yet, in all his years, I have never seen him wear a pair of eyeglasses. Surely he must need some help in reading the lines on the teleprompter.—G. H., Riverside, Cal.

A. Hope wears contact lenses. The type on the teleprompter is oversized.

A BESPECTACLED BOB HOPE: HE WEARS LENSES ONSTAGE

Q. Is it true that Jimmy Hoffa was murdered by the Mafia because, if he became head of the Teamsters Union again, he was determined to stop the flow of pension money into Nevada?—H.G., Las Vegas, Nev.

A. No one knows yet why James Hoffa was murdered. The Teamsters Central States Pension Fund has at least $269 million invested in Nevada, mostly in Las Vegas in such hotel casinos as the Stardust, Fremont, Circus Circus, Caesars Palace and Dunes.

Q. Barbara McNair, whose husband was found shot to death in Las Vegas—was she ever picked up on a heroin charge?—H. G., Los Angeles.

BARBARA McNAIR

A. Singer Barbara McNair and Rick Manzie, her late husband and manager, were arrested on charges of possessing heroin at the Playboy Club in McAfee, N.J., in 1972. Authorities claimed she had accepted delivery of a package containing half an ounce of heroin shipped from Las Vegas. Barbara McNair was cleared of the drug charge. Manzie, however, was indicted on a charge of attempting to possess heroin. He pleaded guilty, was fined $1000 and placed on a year's probation.

Q. Why is it that Jimmy Carter's Cabinet is known in Washington, D.C., as "Robert McNamara's revenge"?—H.G., McLean, Va.

A. Three members of Carter's Cabinet—Cyrus Vance, Secretary of State; Harold Brown, Secretary of Defense; and Joe Califano Jr., Secretary of HEW—all worked for McNamara in the Pentagon when he was Secretary of Defense in the Kennedy-Johnson Vietnam era. And, like McNamara, they were proved wrong about Vietnam. Undoubtedly, each has learned from his errors—as has Jimmy Carter, who also was a hawk in the early days of the Vietnam war.

Q. How many children did Eleanor Roosevelt and her husband, Franklin D. Roosevelt, have—five or six?—Judy Hillman, New York City.

A. Six: Anna, born May 3, 1906, died Dec. 1, 1975; James, born Dec. 23, 1907; Franklin Jr., born March 18, 1909, died Nov. 8, 1909; Elliott, born Sept. 23, 1910; Franklin Jr. (the first had died), born Aug. 17, 1914; and John, born March 13, 1916.

Q. Can you tell me why CBS-TV is retiring Eric Sevareid, surely one of radio and TV's most worthy commentators? Where is he from, and where may I read about him?—Francis Rafferty, Oakland, Cal.

ERIC SEVAREID

A. CBS has a mandatory retirement age of 65 for all employees except William Paley, who runs the network. Sevareid was reared in Velva, N.D. In 1946 he wrote his memoirs as a World War II correspondent, entitled "Not So Wild a Dream." Last year Atheneum republished the book.

Q. Several English publications have identified Ed Proctor as the CIA's new station chief in London. Why do they reveal the identities of our intelligence agents?—M.P., Washington, D.C.

A. Some British journalists resent the fact that American intelligence agents are stationed in England. They regard that as an infringement on their sovereignty. Others cannot understand why American intelligence agents should gather information on an ally. Still others object to CIA covert operations in Britain, strongly resent the allegation that British intelligence and security are not as good as American.

Q. A few questions about Robert Byrd, the new Senate Majority Leader: What is his real name? Was he ever leader of the Ku Klux Klan? Is it true that he has held more legislative elective offices in West Virginia than any other single person?—V.L., Charleston, W.Va.

A. Sen. Robert Byrd (D., W.Va.) was born in North Wilkesboro, N.C., on Nov. 20, 1917. He was christened Cornelius Calvin Sale Jr. His mother died during his infancy, he was abandoned by his father and adopted by a coal miner named Byrd. He joined the KKK as a young man in what he describes as "a youthful indiscretion" and briefly held the rank of kleagle. He was elected to the West Virginia House of Delegates in 1946, subsequently went on to win more legislative elective offices in West Virginia than any other person.

Q. I have been told that Gov. Jerry Brown of California plans to appoint himself a U.S. Senator. How can he possibly do this?—Lane Kantor, Los Angeles.

A. Should either of California's two Senators—Alan Cranston, who is 62, and Sam Hayakawa, who is 70—die in office, Brown has the option of appointing himself and turning over the governorship to Lieut. Gov. Mervyn Dymally.

Q. Is Kim Novak married? If so, to whom?—Cherree Kane, Boston.

A. Actress Kim Novak is married to veterinarian Robert Malloy, lives in Big Sur, Cal.

Dr. Larrian Gillespie, one of the few women urologists in U.S., with husband, Dr. Edward Cherney.

Women in urology, she says, are resented by many male doctors who see this field as only for men.

Women Doctors Are Entering All Specialties

by Lloyd Shearer

A resident at UCLA Hospital, Dr. Gillespie is supervised by Dr. Joseph J. Kaufman, urology department chairman, who terms her work "outstanding." Not embarrassed examining men, she says most accept her easily.

LOS ANGELES.

Of the 408,000 medical doctors in the United States, approximately 34,000 are women.

About 35.6 percent of these female M.D.'s are specialists, in everything from psychiatry to pediatrics.

Urology—the branch of medicine that deals with the urine, urinary tract (urethra, bladder, ureters and kidneys) and reproductive organs—is the specialty, or subspecialty, with the fewest number of distaff physicians.

Of the 6500 accredited urologists in this country, you can count the number of women on the fingers of one hand.

There is Dr. Occo Elaine Goodwin of San Francisco, whose urological patients are all female.

And then there are two young women in Iowa, Dr. Mary Gannon of Spencer and Dr. Mary Christine Webster of Iowa City. Both are graduates of the University of Iowa Medical School. Both were protégées of the late Dr. Rubin Flocks, chairman of the university's urology department, and both are general urologists whose practices consist largely of males.

Drs. Gannon and Webster are ace surgeons who perform prostatectomies (the surgical removal of the prostate gland), transurethral prostatectomy resections, kidney stone removals—the whole armory of urological surgery.

One of the latest young female physicians to specialize in urology is Dr. Larrian Gillespie, 27, a petite (5 feet 1, 100 pounds), blue-eyed, auburn-haired dynamo from Los Angeles.

Dr. Gillespie is a graduate of the UCLA Medical School and a second-year resident in urology at UCLA Hospital, where she works under the guidance of Dr. Joseph J. Kaufman, chairman of the department, and Dr. Willard Goodwin, former chairman.

'Most talented'

Both men, recognized as among the top urologists in the nation, describe Larrian as "something special."

"She is," says Dr. Kaufman, "one of the most talented, industrious, ambitious young urologists we have had on our staff in years."

"Larrian is the first woman urologist at UCLA," explains Dr. Goodwin, "and she is setting an outstanding record for those who follow her, male or female."

Dr. Gillespie—who is frequently mistaken for a nurse, a receptionist, or an actress (her sister Darlene was a Disney Mouseketeer for five years)—says, "The question I'm most frequently asked concerns my embarrassment when I examine male genital organs. The answer is that I'm not embarrassed at all. I worked for two years at Wadsworth Veterans Hospital. Practically all of my patients were men; and at the start they were more embarrassed than I.

"In fact, I've never been embarrassed. A man's reproductive organs are just parts of the human anatomy like any other parts, and when they break down or become incapacitated, then the job of the physician is to help repair and restore and cure.

Storming a male bastion

"As a matter of fact," Dr. Gillespie points out, "a girl who sets out to specialize in urology finds she gets more trouble from other doctors than from the patients. They seem to treat us as if we were storming some male bastion, and they resent it. They've always regarded urology as a field exclusively for men. That's not true at UCLA Hospital, of course, which is why I'm taking my residency here. But I know it certainly applies elsewhere."

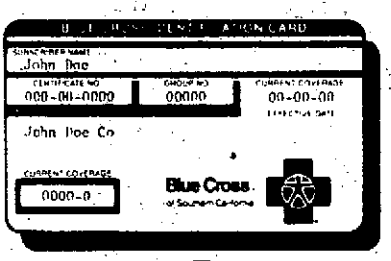

Dr. Mary Gannon, who did her undergraduate work at Drake University in Des Moines, her graduate work at the University of Iowa, and her residency at the University of Wisconsin, agrees with Dr. Gillespie: "It's not the patients who give you a bad time, it's the other doctors who want to become urologists, too. They think there's something weird about a young woman who wants to specialize in urology. The truth is we're just about as weird as the guys who want to specialize in ob-gyn [obstetrics and gynecology]."

For years a conspiracy of silence has enveloped the middle-aged American male and his urological problems. Most of these zero in on his prostate, one of the male sex glands located around the outlet of the bladder and the beginning of the urinary canal (urethra), which conveys the urine from the bladder.

The first symptom of the man in his late 50's or 60's who suffers from prostate trouble is frequency of urination. Usually this occurs in the middle of the night, and the victim finds himself making three or four sleepy trips to the bathroom. Urination and sexual activity are frequently followed by a burning sensation.

Prostate problems strike almost 50 percent of all elderly men. Sometimes the gland is inflamed as a result of infection, sometimes it is enlarged for no discernible reason so as to obstruct normal urination. The skeins of the prostate have yet to be completely unraveled. Its hormones and enzymes and lubricating fluids do more than just facilitate the passage of sperm cells throughout the urinary canal.

When the prostate swells up, the sufferer may be afflicted with what is called BPH (Benign Prostatic Hypertrophy). When not benign, it can be cancerous. Cancer of the prostate is the second-highest death-causing cancer among men. Lung cancer is first.

The removal of the entire prostate gland, including its capsule, is called a radical prostatectomy and generally infers the presence of cancer.

But for the patient who merely suffers from a benign overgrowth of the prostate, there are marvelously sophisticated surgical techniques that restore good health. One of these which eliminates all external incisions is the TUR (Trans-Urethral Resection), in which a surgeon like Larrian Gillespie uses a fiber-optics instrument called a resectoscope and an electrically operated loop (a wire of sorts), goes right through the urethra and removes the damaged portion of the gland.

Four or five days after surgery, the patient is on his feet, urinating normally and painlessly.

Potency maintained

Dr. Gillespie says many men are fearful that a prostate operation automatically means impotence, but only in the most radical of prostatectomies is that so. In most prostate operations, a man's sexual function is maintained.

Dr. Larrian Gillespie, who was born in Los Angeles, the daughter of a pair of Canadian vaudevillians, says she wanted to become a doctor since the age of 5. She's not sure exactly why, "except that my father, who was a second cousin of Thomas Alva Edison and never went to school beyond the 4th Grade, is one of the most brilliant scientists I've ever known. He taught himself everything. He was the inspector for Lindbergh's plane, he helped design the DC-9 and -10, the anti-skid mechanism for McDonnell-Douglas. He's a phenomenally brilliant man, and I think I inherited my scientific bent from him.

"When I reached my fifth birthday," she recalls, "my parents asked me what I wanted for a gift, and I said I wanted my own microscope. I guess that's what led me into medicine."

Dr. Mary Christine Webster, a urologist at Mercy Hospital in Iowa City, holds a resectoscope. The instrument is used to operate on the prostate.

No easy acceptance

As a student, Larrian was no prodigy. "I applied to 15 medical schools," she admits, "and the only one to accept me was UCLA, where I'd done my undergraduate work. And I think the only reason they accepted me was that they sort of brushed me off in the first interview and I stormed down to the dean's office and demanded a second interview. Then I explained that I was about to marry a young medical student at UCLA (Dr. Edward Cherney, an ophthalmologist) and it wouldn't be fair to separate us. Somehow, when a spot became available, they accepted me for the class of 1970. That's how I got in."

Medical school is terribly competitive and, in many instances, male chauvinism is rampant. Dr. Gillespie recalls with considerable bitterness "the way the men treated me during my surgery rotation. If a woman could do something as well as they, the general surgery residents would get upset. They treated me so negatively that I was about to give up surgery and specialize in anesthesia, which apparently meets with male approval for women physicians.

Stayed with surgery

"But then my husband said, 'You know surgery is what you really want to do. You're never going to be happy doing anesthesia.' So I went over to Wadsworth Veterans Hospital and, when I rotated on urology there, I found it very enjoyable. The residents treated me as an equal, and I decided after two years of general surgery at Wadsworth that I would specialize in urology.

"I knew UCLA had one of the best urology departments in the country, and I wanted to see what urology was like in the outside world, away from the Veterans Administration. So I applied, was accepted, and that's where I am."

Most of Dr. Gillespie's patients—about 90 percent—are men. In her medical experience thus far, only two males, both Mexican-Americans, have refused to let her examine them.

"Otherwise, there's been no trouble. Of course," she adds, "it's a little more tricky with young men in their 20's. The prospect of having a young lady examine their reproductive organs sometimes unsettles them. But I assure them that I'm a physician, that urology is my field. I adopt a no-nonsense, strictly business attitude, and they accept me quite easily."

Dr. Mary Gannon, a urologist in Spencer, Iowa, treats mostly male patients. Of doctors who think women urologists "weird," she says, "We're about as weird as the guys who specialize in obstetrics and gynecology."

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Drug Stabilization

Some weeks ago, the National Institute on Drug Abuse announced the results of three nationwide surveys suggesting that drug use in the U.S. may have stabilized at a rather wide plateau.

After cigarettes and alcohol, Americans use more marijuana than any other psychoactive substance. Among many young people, marijuana use has become a way of life:

- 53 percent of those aged 18-25 have used marijuana, and 25 percent are current users;
- 22 percent of those aged 12-17 have used marijuana, and 15 percent consider themselves regular or occasional users;
- 53 percent of the high school seniors surveyed have tried marijuana, and 32 percent are current users.

Cocaine, better known as "coke," continues to circulate widely among the young:

- 3 percent of those aged 12-17 have experimented with it;
- 13 percent of those 18-25 have used it at least once, 2 percent using it in the past month.

Drug use, the studies conclude, is related to both sex and education—with men using drugs more than women, and college students and graduates showing the highest experiment rate.

Geographically, the West, Northeast and North Central states have the most regular drug users and the South has the fewest.

Regarding tobacco and alcohol use, about a fourth of all those aged 12-17 and four out of 10 adults remain smokers. Roughly a third of the youths and six out of 10 adults remain drinkers.

SUE HALPERN IS ONE OF THREE YALE WOMEN AWARDED A RHODES SCHOLARSHIP

Pioneers

Last year was a barrier-breaking one for young women. They not only opened the doors to the service academies at West Point, Annapolis and Colorado Springs for members of their sex, they also won Rhodes Scholarships for the first time.

When scholarships to Oxford University were established in 1902 under the provisions of the will of mining magnate Cecil Rhodes, women were ineligible.

Last year, of the 32 successful U.S. Rhodes applicants, 13 were women. Also chosen were two women from Australia, three from Canada, one each from New Zealand, South Africa and West Germany. The scholarships carry an annual stipend of about $5000 and are good for two years of study at Oxford.

Credit for the new policy must go to the Rhodes trustees who lobbied the British government under the Sex Discrimination Act to amend the provisions of the Rhodes will.

Mommy Loves me better now

Tiffany is right. And her mommy loves herself a lot more too since she stopped drinking. Tiffany's mom is one of more than 4½ million women in the United States who are alcoholic. Four and one-half million.

It makes you wonder how their children feel right now, doesn't it.

The Franklin Mint presents

The Craftsmen of America Spoon Collection

Eighteen individually crafted commemorative spoons, produced in fine pewter, honoring the early American craftsmen who contributed so much to the greatness of America.

To be issued in a single, strictly limited edition

Much of the greatness of America today is our inheritance from the early colonial craftsmen.

Despite the cruel hardships of a new land, these gifted American pioneers established traditions of skill, artistry and ingenuity that have been the basis and inspiration for America's proud record of achievement.

Now, as a tribute by American craftsmen to American craftsmen, The Franklin Mint takes pride in announcing The Craftsmen of America Spoon Collection. Eighteen finely sculptured commemorative spoons honoring the great crafts of early America, and the skilled men and women who mastered them.

Works of true craftsmanship

Each one of these beautiful spoons will be individually crafted with painstaking attention to historical accuracy and detail—to standards that early American craftsmen themselves would have admired. The handle will bear a sculptured design that symbolizes the craft it honors by portraying the special tools of that craft. The bowl will bear an original sculpture portraying the early Americans who brought the craft to its full expression . . .

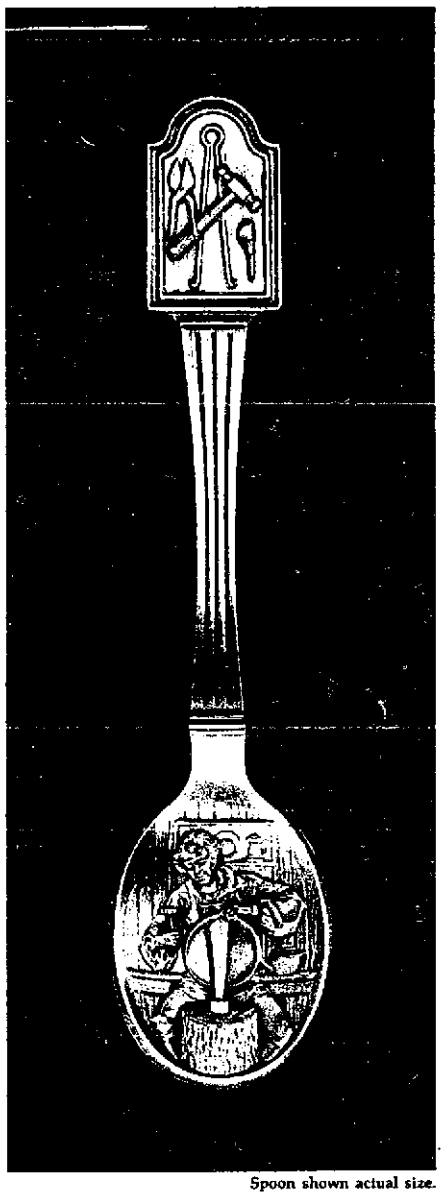

The Silversmith at his planishing anvil. The Cabinetmaker at his bench. The Glassblower with his blowpipe. The Quiltmaker with her thimble and thread. The Printer at his press. The Weaver at her loom. The Potter at his wheel . . . In all, eighteen superb works of artistry and craftsmanship produced in dramatic high relief.

Crafted in fine pewter

Each spoon will be crafted in pewter. And appropriately so, for pewter was the people's metal of early America, used extensively by our first craftsmen. All eighteen of these beautiful commemorative spoons, moreover, will be produced in fine pewter—a metal of enduring beauty that has been prized by Americans for more than two centuries.

A strictly limited edition

Only one edition of this historic collection will ever be created. And this strictly limited edition is available only by subscription. There is an absolute limit of one collection per subscriber, and the total edition will be forever limited to the number of valid subscriptions postmarked by March 15, 1977. This series will never again be issued in any form.

Spoon shown actual size.

The collection will be issued at the rate of one spoon each month, beginning in March 1977. The original issue price is just $19.50 for each fine pewter spoon. And, the complete collection can be acquired on a convenient and systematic monthly basis.

Subscription deadline: March 15, 1977

For the collector who seeks to own works of significance as well as artistry, for anyone fascinated by the rich variety of early American crafts, this series presents a rare opportunity—the only opportunity to acquire The Craftsmen of America Spoon Collection.

Please remember that your subscription application must be postmarked by March 15, 1977, to be accepted.

A handsome antique pine spoon rack, custom-designed in authentic early American style to house and display all 18 spoons, will be included as part of the collection.

Bicycling through Bora Bora: Author Richard Harrington surveys the landscape of the South Pacific island he first visited 20 years ago. Time is making changes in its people and traditions, but it still is a second home to him.

Progress Is Spoiling His South Seas Paradise

by Richard Harrington

BORA BORA, SOCIETY ISLANDS.

Over 20 years ago, I first stepped ashore on Bora Bora from a tiny yacht. I could easily agree with James Michener, an authority on the South Pacific, that it was "the most beautiful island in the world."

Islanders called from their coconut-thatched huts: "Haremai, tamaa" (come here and eat). I did, and sat on the floor for sumptuous meals, all from the sea and the island. Later, I was invited to have a siesta on a mat before continuing my walk.

I was the only poopah (foreigner) on the island aside from an elusive French gendarme.

On my second day, I met "my family" —powerful, shirtless Tuteau, his wife Mereta, their toddler Greta, his mother Mama Rua, and other relatives. I was invited to settle down with them, and I return every year for six to eight weeks.

But in 20 years "progress" has arrived with a vengeance and changed what I considered my own private hideaway. Once we all knew one another, calling out the greeting, "Iorana!" We fished, gathered produce from the mountain slopes, ate, slept, walked or bicycled and felt carefree. There was one store—ancient, dark, Chinese-run. No hotels. An unfinished trail 20 miles long ran around the island. There were gaps in it so that you had to walk through water carrying your bicycle overhead.

Regular mail

Change started insidiously. The wooden dock where we fished and sometimes slept under the stars became a concrete pier, while the twice-a-month supply boat stepped up to weekly and recently to two boats a week. Next we got a post office, with a postmaster. Previously, mail addressed to "Harrington" rarely reached me, for everyone called me "Deek." Now we have house-to-house delivery.

Every time I return, I suffer culture shock. The school was enlarged several times to make room for an expanding population, now 2500, as opposed to 1800 20 years ago. A nursing station was enlarged, the road widened and finished. Cars arrived. We even had an accident. A drunken driver ran over another drunk who had gone to sleep in the road.

Hotels spring up

The local gendarmerie was enlarged. Three hotels sprang up. Semi-weekly air service began and grew to three or four flights a day. A village hall was built for island officials, as well as fancy huts where tourists on shore excursions from luxury liners could take shelter from rainshowers. Local artisans took to making gaudy souvenirs for sale.

The French atomic testing facilities lured away young men on three- to six-month labor contracts. When they returned they built Western-type houses of imported plywood, glass and corrugated iron sheeting.

The Chinese store became self-service and stocked corned beef from Madagascar, tinned butter from New Zealand, sardines from Portugal, salmon from Canada, frozen chicken from the United States, even shrimps from Greenland—all expensive. Bora Borans each year ate less native food and more of the imports. Some began to suffer from malnutrition.

The hotels employed men and women for menial labor, and their earnings went straight to the stores.

Missionaries from several minor sects brought unrest and dissent to families when they attempted to lure converts away from the predominantly native-run Methodist congregation.

Fights, drunkenness, family breakups

Outside the author's island home, a friend prepares a dish of coconut cream to be eaten with raw fish. Native food is wholesome, though exotic by Western standards.

Q. Bob Hope is in his 70's. Yet, in all his years, I have never seen him wear a pair of eyeglasses. Surely he must need some help in reading the lines on the teleprompter.—G. H., Riverside, Cal.

A. Hope wears contact lenses. The type on the teleprompter is oversized.

A BESPECTACLED BOB HOPE: HE WEARS LENSES ONSTAGE

Q. Is it true that Jimmy Hoffa was murdered by the Mafia because, if he became head of the Teamsters Union again, he was determined to stop the flow of pension money into Nevada?—H.G., Las Vegas, Nev.

A. No one knows yet why James Hoffa was murdered. The Teamsters Central States Pension Fund has at least $269 million invested in Nevada, mostly in Las Vegas in such hotel casinos as the Stardust, Fremont, Circus Circus, Caesars Palace and Dunes.

Q. Barbara McNair, whose husband was found shot to death in Las Vegas—was she ever picked up on a heroin charge?—H. G., Los Angeles.

BARBARA McNAIR

A. Singer Barbara McNair and Rick Manzie, her late husband and manager, were arrested on charges of possessing heroin at the Playboy Club in McAfee, N.J., in 1972. Authorities claimed she had accepted delivery of a package containing half an ounce of heroin shipped from Las Vegas. Barbara McNair was cleared of the drug charge. Manzie, however, was indicted on a charge of attempting to possess heroin. He pleaded guilty, was fined $1000 and placed on a year's probation.

Q. Why is it that Jimmy Carter's Cabinet is known in Washington, D.C., as "Robert McNamara's revenge"?—H.G., McLean, Va.

A. Three members of Carter's Cabinet—Cyrus Vance, Secretary of State; Harold Brown, Secretary of Defense; and Joe Califano Jr., Secretary of HEW—all worked for McNamara in the Pentagon when he was Secretary of Defense in the Kennedy-Johnson Vietnam era. And, like McNamara, they were proved wrong about Vietnam. Undoubtedly, each has learned from his errors—as has Jimmy Carter, who also was a hawk in the early days of the Vietnam war.

Q. How many children did Eleanor Roosevelt and her husband, Franklin D. Roosevelt, have—five or six?—Judy Hillman, New York City.

A. Six: Anna, born May 3, 1906, died Dec. 1, 1975; James, born Dec. 23, 1907; Franklin Jr., born March 18, 1909, died Nov. 8, 1909; Elliott, born Sept. 23, 1910; Franklin Jr. (the first had died), born Aug. 17, 1914; and John, born March 13, 1916.

Q. Can you tell me why CBS-TV is retiring Eric Sevareid, surely one of radio and TV's most worthy commentators? Where is he from, and where may I read about him?—Francis Rafferty, Oakland, Cal.

ERIC SEVAREID

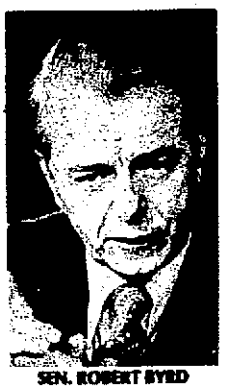

A. CBS has a mandatory retirement age of 65 for all employees except William Paley, who runs the network. Sevareid was reared in Velva, N.D. In 1946 he wrote his memoirs as a World War II correspondent, entitled "Not So Wild a Dream." Last year Atheneum republished the book.

Q. Several English publications have identified Ed Proctor as the CIA's new station chief in London. Why do they reveal the identities of our intelligence agents?—M.P., Washington, D.C.

A. Some British journalists resent the fact that American intelligence agents are stationed in England. They regard that as an infringement on their sovereignty. Others cannot understand why American intelligence agents should gather information on an ally. Still others object to CIA covert operations in Britain, strongly resent the allegation that British intelligence and security are not as good as American.

Q. A few questions about Robert Byrd, the new Senate Majority Leader: What is his real name? Was he ever leader of the Ku Klux Klan? Is it true that he has held more legislative elective offices in West Virginia than any other single person?—V.L., Charleston, W.Va.

A. Sen. Robert Byrd (D., W.Va.) was born in North Wilkesboro, N.C., on Nov. 20, 1917. He was christened Cornelius Calvin Sale Jr. His mother died during his infancy, he was abandoned by his father and adopted by a coal miner named Byrd. He joined the KKK as a young man in what he describes as "a youthful indiscretion" and briefly held the rank of kleagle. He was elected to the West Virginia House of Delegates in 1946, subsequently went on to win more legislative elective offices in West Virginia than any other person.

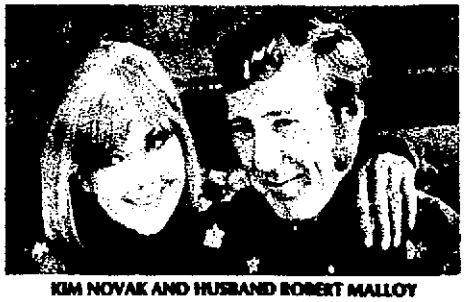

SEN. ROBERT BYRD

Q. I have been told that Gov. Jerry Brown of California plans to appoint himself a U.S. Senator. How can he possibly do this?—Lane Kantor, Los Angeles.

A. Should either of California's two Senators—Alan Cranston, who is 62, and Sam Hayakawa, who is 70—die in office, Brown has the option of appointing himself and turning over the governorship to Lieut. Gov. Mervyn Dymally.

Q. Is Kim Novak married? If so, to whom?—Cherree Kane, Boston.

A. Actress Kim Novak is married to veterinarian Robert Malloy, lives in Big Sur, Cal.

became more frequent. Tahitians had lived in close-knit, "extended families": babies were born, old folks died; the few idiots, cripples and homosexuals were tolerated; everyone had enough to eat at all times; marriage vows were unimportant, and children were always beloved. (In fact, there is no illegitimate child. I have seen grandmothers almost fight to adopt and raise grandchildren.)

Friends often ask me, "What do you do all day on an island like that?"

The answer is, "Nothing, really." With my friend Tuteau, I can sit under a casuarina pine for a couple of hours without saying a word. I used to poke him occasionally and ask, "What are you thinking about?" "Nothing," he would reply. That is often my own state of mind, and it feels very soothing.

From the moment I arrive until I depart, I go shirtless, wearing only the shortest shorts and thongs. That is all that is needed day or night. It has become the costume for all males, although we used to wear pareus, a single length of printed cotton which also served for nightwear. Many youths have gone into long pants, aping the foreigners in spite of the humid heat.

Unusual diet

Although visitors who stay for a day or two claim to admire Tahitian life, few could ever share it. On two occasions, I rashly invited visiting American couples to come and eat with us at home. Both turned out disastrously. Raw fish and breadfruit baked in the open fire and eaten with the fingers are not what they want or expect. Usually they exclaim, "How nice!"—and depart quickly. Actually, my family eats the healthiest, least-contaminated food available, totally lacking in additives, chemicals, sprays, preservatives—and certainly fresh.

Youngsters fly along our road on fancy motorcycles with all the gadgets attached. But in a few months the bikes will be found rusting to bits due to some breakdown of a small part not replaceable on Bora Bora. However, that doesn't bother anyone but me. The manufacturer will happily sell another.

But despite the march of "progress," certain things never change. The days and nights seem to flow by, the life a gentle monotone. The most beautiful time comes after 4-5 p.m., when it begins to cool gently and we take our last shower of cool, fresh water. An atmosphere of peace pervades everything. The smell of wood fires and cooking is in the air, the pulse seems to slow, people sit about chatting and enjoying the coolness of their skins.

Tuteau prepares a few special tidbits, a bit of juicy fried fish with garlic, some octopus in Tahitian curry, even an omelet if enough eggs have been found by the children. We eat leisurely in silence or, when the spirit moves us, trade ribald jokes. The rest of the relatives come and go. Mama Rua has dropped off into sleep, a girl is off to a dance, the youngest baby howls and is quickly given the breast.

Myrna, long ago adopted by Tuteau's mother and highly erratic, seems to produce babies without being too sure of the father; but that matters little. We all cuddle the latest addition, and it is happy with all our attention.

I feel close to my family and know a great deal about Polynesia; but even after 20 years of intimate association, I cannot bridge our different cultures and there is much that mystifies me. Their concept of time is strange to us who count every minute and live by a watch. "Aita pea pea?" (What does it matter?) is the appropriate remark on any distressing occasion.

Birth and death come, an unending chain. An aunt of the family died last time I was on the island. She died in the morning and was buried in the afternoon in the backyard (where all the deceased of the family lie). A coffin was made from crates obtained at the Chinese store, the local preacher spoke eloquently, we all wept a bit.

Observations™

Costly substitute. The nation is facing a natural gas shortage, as everybody probably knows. For years, we've been warning that the shortage is being caused by artificially low wellhead prices, the result of federal controls that stifle the incentive to explore for new supplies. Now, Clyde LaMotte's Washington Energy Memo points out the ultimate irony: one gas company plans to import gas from Algeria at a total cost of $4.57 per thousand cubic feet. But domestic producers can't charge more than a base rate of $1.42, and usually the ceiling is a lot less than that. What's gas really worth?

Hot rods. One out of every 100 cars in the country will be stolen this year—a haul worth about $1 billion. But the real cost is much higher. A stolen auto is 200 times more likely to be in an accident than the average car, and each year accidents involving stolen cars kill about 600 people and injure about 20,000. What can you do about it? Keep your car locked and in a secure place. That may sound simple, but remember: it isn't only the thieves who die when stolen cars crack up.

"HARRY! WAKE UP, WE'VE GOT BURGLARS!"

Symphony on wheels. Can you guess how many radio stations around the nation play classical music? The answer: more than 750. Knowing where they are on your radio dial can make life easier on long auto trips, and now there's a guide to tell you. Called Musica, the booklet covers stations in the 48 continental states. It's available for $3.00, plus 50 cents for postage and handling, from Musica Publishing Company, Box 1266IB, Edison, New Jersey 08817. A device to tune the inside of your car, so to speak.

999 days and 7,000 miles. Those numbers tell something of Henry Morton Stanley's incredible journey. Starting in 1874, he traveled the length of the Congo River to fill in many blank spaces on the map of Africa. His story is the seventh episode of Ten Who Dared, the "Mobil Showcase" series on great explorers. Check your local TV listings for the time and station. Stanley's exploits (and many others) are also described in a beautiful 336-page book based on the series. You can obtain it by sending a check or money order for $14.95, plus applicable state and local taxes, to: Ten Who Dared, P.O. Box 1934, Kansas City, Missouri 64140.

Dr. Larrian Gillespie, one of the few women urologists in U.S., with husband, Dr. Edward Cherney.

Women in urology, she says, are resented by many male doctors who see this field as only for men.

Women Doctors Are Entering All Specialties

by Lloyd Shearer

A resident at UCLA Hospital, Dr. Gillespie is supervised by Dr. Joseph J. Kaufman, urology department chairman, who terms her work "outstanding." Not embarrassed examining men, she says most accept her easily.

LOS ANGELES.

Of the 408,000 medical doctors in the United States, approximately 34,000 are women.

About 35.6 percent of these female M.D.'s are specialists, in everything from psychiatry to pediatrics.

Urology—the branch of medicine that deals with the urine, urinary tract (urethra, bladder, ureters and kidneys) and reproductive organs—is the specialty, or subspecialty, with the fewest number of distaff physicians.

Of the 6500 accredited urologists in this country, you can count the number of women on the fingers of one hand.

There is Dr. Occo Elaine Goodwin of San Francisco, whose urological patients are all female.

And then there are two young women in Iowa, Dr. Mary Gannon of Spencer and Dr. Mary Christine Webster of Iowa City. Both are graduates of the University of Iowa Medical School. Both were protégées of the late Dr. Rubin Flocks, chairman of the university's urology department, and both are general urologists whose practices consist largely of males.

Drs. Gannon and Webster are ace surgeons who perform prostatectomies (the surgical removal of the prostate gland), transurethral prostatectomy resections, kidney stone removals—the whole armory of urological surgery.

One of the latest young female physicians to specialize in urology is Dr. Larrian Gillespie, 27, a petite (5 feet 1, 100 pounds), blue-eyed, auburn-haired dynamo from Los Angeles.

Dr. Gillespie is a graduate of the UCLA Medical School and a second-year resident in urology at UCLA Hospital, where she works under the guidance of Dr. Joseph J. Kaufman, chairman of the department, and Dr. Willard Goodwin, former chairman.

'Most talented'

Both men, recognized as among the top urologists in the nation, describe Larrian as "something special."

"She is," says Dr. Kaufman, "one of the most talented, industrious, ambitious young urologists we have had on our staff in years."

"Larrian is the first woman urologist at UCLA," explains Dr. Goodwin, "and she is setting an outstanding record for those who follow her, male or female."

Dr. Gillespie—who is frequently mistaken for a nurse, a receptionist, or an actress (her sister Darlene was a Disney Mouseketeer for five years)—says, "The question I'm most frequently asked concerns my embarrassment when I examine male genital organs. The answer is that I'm not embarrassed at all. I worked for two years at Wadsworth Veterans Hospital. Practically all of my patients were men; and at the start they were more embarrassed than I.

"In fact, I've never been embarrassed. A man's reproductive organs are just parts of the human anatomy like any other parts, and when they break down or become incapacitated, then the job of the physician is to help repair and restore and cure.

Storming a male bastion

"As a matter of fact," Dr. Gillespie points out, "a girl who sets out to specialize in urology finds she gets more trouble from other doctors than from the patients. They seem to treat us as if we were storming some male bastion, and they resent it. They've always regarded urology as a field exclusively for men. That's not true at UCLA Hospital, of course, which is why I'm taking my residency here. But I know it certainly applies elsewhere."

Dr. Mary Gannon, who did her undergraduate work at Drake University in Des Moines, her graduate work at the University of Iowa, and her residency

PARADISE CONTINUED

At night, I bought some wine, and we recounted episodes of the aunt's life. We became mellow and recalled funny incidents. The young people, not burdened too much with grief, started to play again. We all felt it had been an eventful day.

Tahitian life deep down is really very complex. Sometimes hippies come with only their backpacks, hoping to live off the land and the people. They do not realize that every inch of land is privately owned, as is every coconut or banana tree.

The Bora Borans quickly begin to observe that these people pilfer, do not wash, look unkempt, sometimes ask for food. Then the islanders become indignant and complain to the chief or gendarme. He generally acts with uncommon speed, and the beachcomber must leave the island at once.

Harrington with string of fish that will be fried or eaten raw with lemon juice.

Final blow: TV

Of all the sad things that have happened to Bora Bora, the saddest is the arrival of television. It comes in via two intervening islands from Papeete. Now, for four or five hours every day, native eyes are glued to the pale screen to watch politicians haggling in French, news reports of faraway unrest, and American cowboys and policemen shooting everything in sight and shouting at each other in stilted, dubbed-in French.

Next we will be getting electricity from a generating plant. The road is being paved. From year to year, a simple, healthy economy is being replaced by a complex money economy.

The young people totter to church on platform soles and dance to noisy imported bands. The elderly miss their culture, the lovely, haunting folksongs, the closeness of family and village.

I feel nostalgic about the early years when these jolts had not yet occurred; before missionary youths—dressed in black pants, shirts and ties—began to befuddle my friends; before hundreds of tourists surged ashore from every cruiser to snap random pictures of everything, rather than use their eyes and senses to feel the island.

Each year I am sure I can no longer stand new shocks. But each year I am also captivated anew by the warmth of my family and many friends.

"Would you like to live there always?" I am sometimes asked. Well, after six weeks or so, I begin to wonder what goes on in the rest of the world. My island friends couldn't care less, but I become restless. Parting is always painful: my family sulks, suppresses tears. I, too, am upset, but I always reassure them—and myself—that I will come back again next year, no matter what progress may hold in store.

Read this and cry.

Froilan lives in the highlands of Guatemala in a one-room hut with dirt floors and no sanitary facilities. Labor there is so cheap that, for men like Froilan's father, hard work and long hours still mean a life of poverty. But now life is changing for Froilan.

Her name? We don't know. We found her wandering the streets of a large city in South America. Her mother is a beggar. What will become of this little girl? No one knows. In her country, she's just one of thousands doomed to poverty.

The world is full of children like these who desperately need someone to care, like the family who sponsors Froilan.

It costs them $15 a month, and it gives Froilan so very much. Now he eats regularly. He gets medical care. He goes to school. Froilan writes to his sponsors and they write to him. They share something very special.

Since 1938 the Christian Children's Fund has helped hundreds of thousands of children. But so many more need your help. Become a sponsor. You needn't send any money now—you can "meet" the child assigned to your care first. Just fill out and mail the coupon. You'll receive the child's photograph, background information, and detailed instructions on how to write to the child. If you wish to sponsor the child, simply send in your first monthly check or money order for $15 within 10 days. If not, return the photo and other materials so we may ask someone else to help.

Take this opportunity to "meet" a child who needs your help. Somewhere in the world, there's a suffering child who will share something very special with you. Love.

For the love of a hungry child.

at the University of Wisconsin, agrees with Dr. Gillespie: "It's not the patients who give you a bad time, it's the other doctors who want to become urologists, too. They think there's something weird about a young woman who wants to specialize in urology. The truth is we're just about as weird as the guys who want to specialize in ob-gyn [obstetrics and gynecology]."

For years a conspiracy of silence has enveloped the middle-aged American male and his urological problems. Most of these zero in on his prostate, one of the male sex glands located around the outlet of the bladder and the beginning of the urinary canal (urethra), which conveys the urine from the bladder.

The first symptom of the man in his late 50's or 60's who suffers from prostate trouble is frequency of urination. Usually this occurs in the middle of the night, and the victim finds himself making three or four sleepy trips to the bathroom. Urination and sexual activity are frequently followed by a burning sensation.

Prostate problems strike almost 50 percent of all elderly men. Sometimes the gland is inflamed as a result of infection, sometimes it is enlarged for no discernible reason so as to obstruct normal urination. The skeins of the prostate have yet to be completely unraveled. Its hormones and enzymes and lubricating fluids do more than just facilitate the passage of sperm cells throughout the urinary canal.

When the prostate swells up, the sufferer may be afflicted with what is called BPH (Benign Prostatic Hypertrophy). When not benign, it can be cancerous. Cancer of the prostate is the second-highest death-causing cancer among men. Lung cancer is first.

The removal of the entire prostate gland, including its capsule, is called a radical prostatectomy and generally infers the presence of cancer.

But for the patient who merely suffers from a benign overgrowth of the prostate, there are marvelously sophisticated surgical techniques that restore good health. One of these which eliminates all external incisions is the TUR (Trans-Urethral Resection), in which a surgeon like Larrian Gillespie uses a fiber-optics instrument called a resectoscope and an electrically operated loop (a wire of sorts), goes right through the urethra and removes the damaged portion of the gland.

Four or five days after surgery, the patient is on his feet, urinating normally and painlessly.

Potency maintained

Dr. Gillespie says many men are fearful that a prostate operation automatically means impotence, but only in the most radical of prostatectomies is that so. In most prostate operations, a man's sexual function is maintained.

Dr. Larrian Gillespie, who was born in Los Angeles, the daughter of a pair of Canadian vaudevillians, says she wanted to become a doctor since the age of 5. She's not sure exactly why, "except that my father, who was a second cousin of Thomas Alva Edison and never went to school beyond the 4th Grade, is one of the most brilliant scientists I've ever known. He taught himself everything. He was the inspector for Lindbergh's plane, he helped design the DC-9 and -10, the anti-skid mechanism for McDonnell-Douglas. He's a phenomenally brilliant man, and I think I inherited my scientific bent from him.

Dr. Mary Christine Webster, a urologist at Mercy Hospital in Iowa City, holds a resectoscope. The instrument is used to operate on the prostate.

"When I reached my fifth birthday," she recalls, "my parents asked me what I wanted for a gift, and I said I wanted my own microscope. I guess that's what led me into medicine."

No easy acceptance

As a student, Larrian was no prodigy. "I applied to 15 medical schools," she admits, "and the only one to accept me was UCLA, where I'd done my undergraduate work. And I think the only reason they accepted me was that they sort of brushed me off in the first interview and I stormed down to the dean's office and demanded a second interview. Then I explained that I was about to marry a young medical student at UCLA (Dr. Edward Cheney, an ophthalmologist) and it wouldn't be fair to separate us. Somehow, when a spot became available, they accepted me for the class of 1970. That's how I got in."

Medical school is terribly competitive and, in many instances, male chauvinism is rampant. Dr. Gillespie recalls with considerable bitterness "the way the men treated me during my surgery rotation. If a woman could do something as well as they, the general surgery residents would get upset. They treated me so negatively that I was about to give up surgery and specialize in anesthesia, which apparently meets with male approval for women physicians.

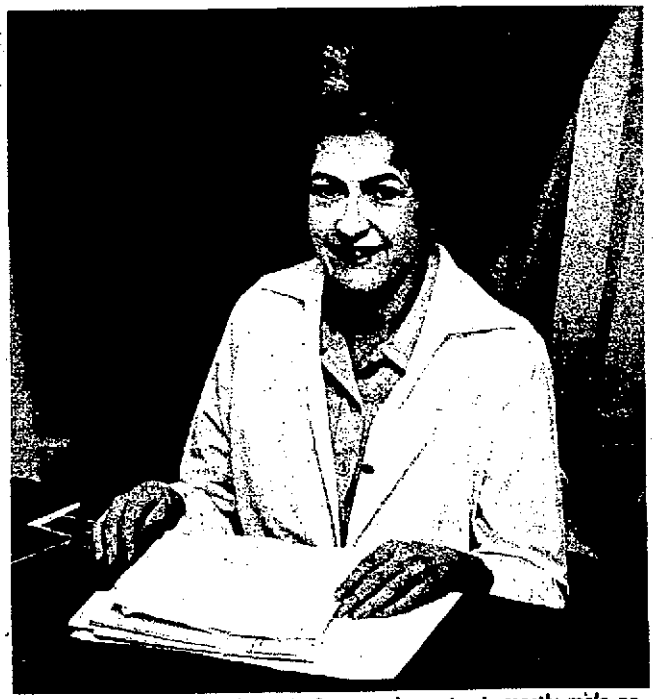

Stayed with surgery

"But then my husband said, 'You know surgery is what you really want to do. You're never going to be happy doing anesthesia.' So I went over to Wadsworth Veterans Hospital and, when I rotated on urology there, I found it very enjoyable. The residents treated me as an equal, and I decided after two years of general surgery at Wadsworth that I would specialize in urology.

"I knew UCLA had one of the best urology departments in the country, and I wanted to see what urology was like in the outside world, away from the Veterans Administration. So I applied, was accepted, and that's where I am."

Most of Dr. Gillespie's patients—about 90 percent—are men. In her medical experience thus far, only two males, both Mexican-Americans, have refused to let her examine them.

"Otherwise, there's been no trouble. Of course," she adds, "it's a little more tricky with young men in their 20's. The prospect of having a young lady examine their reproductive organs sometimes unsettles them. But I assure them that I'm a physician, that urology is my field. I adopt a no-nonsense, strictly business attitude, and they accept me quite easily."

Dr. Mary Gannon, a urologist in Spencer, Iowa, treats mostly male patients. Of doctors who think women urologists "weird," she says, "We're about as weird as the guys who specialize in obstetrics and gynecology."

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Drug Stabilization

Some weeks ago, the National Institute on Drug Abuse announced the results of three nationwide surveys suggesting that drug use in the U.S. may have stabilized at a rather wide plateau.

After cigarettes and alcohol, Americans use more marijuana than any other psychoactive substance. Among many young people, marijuana use has become a way of life:

- 53 percent of those aged 18-25 have used marijuana, and 25 percent are current users;
- 22 percent of those aged 12-17 have used marijuana, and 15 percent consider themselves regular or occasional users;
- 53 percent of the high school seniors surveyed have tried marijuana, and 32 percent are current users.

Cocaine, better known as "coke," continues to circulate widely among the young:

- 3 percent of those aged 12-17 have experimented with it;
- 13 percent of those 18-25 have used it at least once, 2 percent using it in the past month.

Drug use, the studies conclude, is related to both sex and education—with men using drugs more than women, and college students and graduates showing the highest experiment rate.

Geographically, the West, Northeast and North Central states have the most regular drug users and the South has the fewest.

Regarding tobacco and alcohol use, about a fourth of all those aged 12-17 and four out of 10 adults remain smokers. Roughly a third of the youths and six out of 10 adults remain drinkers.

SUE HALPERN IS ONE OF THREE YALE WOMEN AWARDED A RHODES SCHOLARSHIP

Pioneers

Last year was a barrier-breaking one for young women. They not only opened the doors to the service academies at West Point, Annapolis and Colorado Springs for members of their sex, they also won Rhodes Scholarships for the first time.

When scholarships to Oxford University were established in 1902 under the provisions of the will of mining magnate Cecil Rhodes, women were ineligible.

Last year, of the 32 successful U.S. Rhodes applicants, 13 were women. Also chosen were two women from Australia, three from Canada, one each from New Zealand, South Africa and West Germany. The scholarships carry an annual stipend of about $5000 and are good for two years of study at Oxford.

Credit for the new policy must go to the Rhodes trustees who lobbied the British government under the Sex Discrimination Act to amend the provisions of the Rhodes will.

FROM LONDON WITH LOVE

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Our British cousins have discovered the joys of hot dogs and hamburgers. American tourists have returned from London with equal enthusiasm for fish and chips. We think a kitchen party featuring this fare would be a hit with everyone.

To make the "cornets," as the English call the newspaper comucopias in which they serve the fish and chips, we found it amusing to use comic strip pages. Line them with aluminum foil, roll into cones and secure with transparent tape or staples. With a little practice you'll discover the right size for individual portions. Stuff a little paper toweling into the bottom of each before putting in the hot fish and chips.

Serve hot malt vinegar from a sprinkle bottle, salt and—to please American palates—catchup. Beer for adults, root beer for the younger crowd, fun for everyone.

fish AND chips

2 packages (about 12 ounces each) frozen fish fillets
or
1½ pounds fresh fish fillets*
2 eggs, separated
½ cup beer
¼ cup milk
1 cup all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon seasoned salt
¼ teaspoon seasoned pepper
1 bag (2 pounds) frozen french fried potatoes

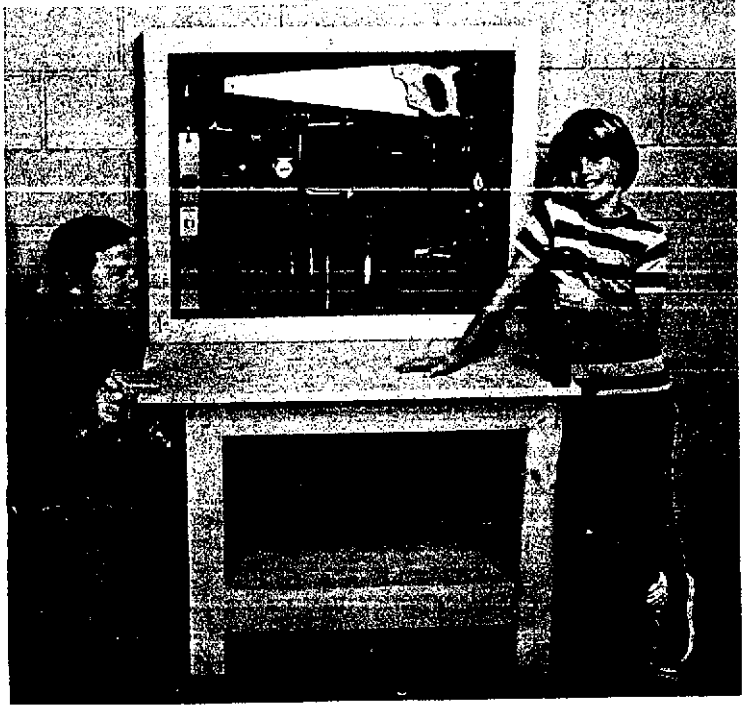

*Any firm white fish, such as sole, flounder, haddock, cod, whiting, etc.

Partially defrost fillets so they can be separated. Cut into pieces about 3" x 1½". Place on paper towels to dry. Beat egg yolks until thick and light. Blend in beer, milk, flour and seasonings. Mix until smooth. Beat egg whites stiff but not dry; fold in. Pat fillets dry. Dip into batter, a few pieces at a time; lift out and drain slightly with fork or slotted spoon.

Fry in deep fat heated to 375 degrees for two to three minutes, or until golden brown and puffed. Drain on absorbent paper. Meanwhile heat french fried potatoes as directed on package. Serve fish and french fries together in "cornets," as described above. Makes six servings.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Leona Toppel started her career writing for Phyllis Diller. Soon she was turning out jokes for Bob Hope, Rich Little, George Kirby, Marty Allen, Kaye Ballard and other top comics. Nowadays, she does a lot of after-dinner speaking and is a frequent guest on TV shows in Chicago.

Asked what makes someone go into comedy, she says: "I think you're born with a knack for comedy—maybe it's defective genes." Leona recalls that once, when she gave a talk on comedy, "a lady who had been sitting in the front row—very somber—came up to me and said, 'Leona, your talk was so funny that I almost laughed.'"

Here are some of Leona Toppel's jokes:

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

The Franklin Mint presents

The Craftsmen of America Spoon Collection

Eighteen individually crafted commemorative spoons, produced in fine pewter, honoring the early American craftsmen who contributed so much to the greatness of America.

To be issued in a single, strictly limited edition

Much of the greatness of America today is our inheritance from the early colonial craftsmen.

Despite the cruel hardships of a new land, these gifted American pioneers established traditions of skill, artistry and ingenuity that have been the basis and inspiration for America's proud record of achievement.

Now, as a tribute by American craftsmen to American craftsmen, The Franklin Mint takes pride in announcing The Craftsmen of America Spoon Collection. Eighteen finely sculptured commemorative spoons honoring the great crafts of early America, and the skilled men and women who mastered them.

Works of true craftsmanship

Each one of these beautiful spoons will be individually crafted with painstaking attention to historical accuracy and detail—to standards that early American craftsmen themselves would have admired. The handle will bear a sculptured design that symbolizes the craft it honors by portraying the special tools of that craft. The bowl will bear an original sculpture portraying the early Americans who brought the craft to its full expression . . .

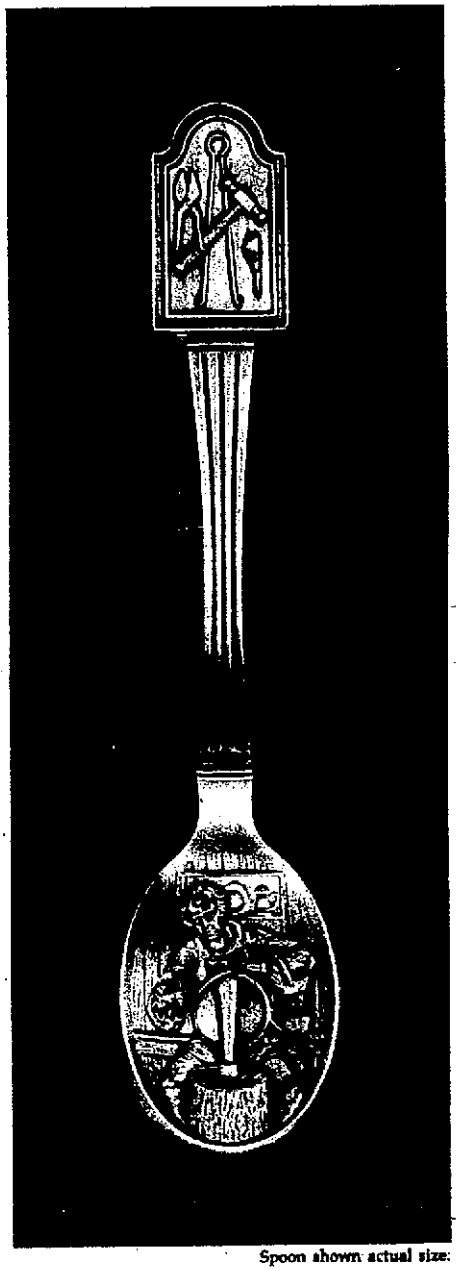

The Silversmith at his planishing anvil. The Cabinetmaker at his bench. The Glassblower with his blowpipe. The Quiltmaker with her thimble and thread. The Printer at his press. The Weaver at her loom. The Potter at his wheel . . . In all, eighteen superb works of artistry and craftsmanship produced in dramatic high relief.

Crafted in fine pewter

Each spoon will be crafted in pewter. And appropriately so, for pewter was the people's metal of early America, used extensively by our first craftsmen. All eighteen of these beautiful commemorative spoons, moreover, will be produced in fine pewter—a metal of enduring beauty that has been prized by Americans for more than two centuries.

A strictly limited edition

Only one edition of this historic collection will ever be created. And this strictly limited edition is available only by subscription. There is an absolute limit of one collection per subscriber, and the total edition will be forever limited to the number of valid subscriptions postmarked by March 15, 1977. This series will never again be issued in any form.

Spoon shown actual size.

The collection will be issued at the rate of one spoon each month, beginning in March 1977. The original issue price is just $19.50 for each fine pewter spoon. And, the complete collection can be acquired on a convenient and systematic monthly basis.

Subscription deadline: March 15, 1977

For the collector who seeks to own works of significance as well as artistry, for anyone fascinated by the rich variety of early American crafts, this series presents a rare opportunity—the only opportunity to acquire The Craftsmen of America Spoon Collection.

Please remember that your subscription application must be postmarked by March 15, 1977, to be accepted.

A handsome antique pine spoon rack, custom-designed in authentic early American style to house and display all 18 spoons, will be included as part of the collection.

Bicycling through Bora Bora: Author Richard Harrington surveys the landscape of the South Pacific island he first visited 20 years ago. Time is making changes in its people and traditions, but it still is a second home to him.

Progress Is Spoiling His South Seas Paradise

by Richard Harrington

BORA BORA, SOCIETY ISLANDS.

Over 20 years ago, I first stepped ashore on Bora Bora from a tiny yacht. I could easily agree with James Michener, an authority on the South Pacific, that it was "the most beautiful island in the world."

Islanders called from their coconut-thatched huts: "Haremai, tamaa" (come here and eat). I did, and sat on the floor for sumptuous meals, all from the sea and the island. Later, I was invited to have a siesta on a mat before continuing my walk.

I was the only poopah (foreigner) on the island aside from an elusive French gendarme.

On my second day, I met "my family" —powerful, shirtless Tuteau, his wife Mereta, their toddler Greta, his mother Mama Rua, and other relatives. I was invited to settle down with them, and I return every year for six to eight weeks.

But in 20 years "progress" has arrived with a vengeance and changed what I considered my own private hideaway. Once we all knew one another, calling out the greeting, "Iorana!" We fished, gathered produce from the mountain slopes, ate, slept, walked or bicycled and felt carefree. There was one store—ancient, dark, Chinese-run. No hotels. An unfinished trail 20 miles long ran around the island. There were gaps in it so that you had to walk through water carrying your bicycle overhead.

Regular mail

Change started insidiously. The wooden dock where we fished and sometimes slept under the stars became a concrete pier, while the twice-a-month supply boat stepped up to weekly and recently to two boats a week. Next we got a post office, with a postmaster. Previously, mail addressed to "Harrington" rarely reached me, for everyone called me "Deek." Now we have house-to-house delivery.

Every time I return, I suffer culture shock. The school was enlarged several times to make room for an expanding population, now 2500, as opposed to 1800 20 years ago. A nursing station was enlarged, the road widened and finished. Cars arrived. We even had an accident. A drunken driver ran over another drunk who had gone to sleep in the road.

Hotels spring up

The local gendarmerie was enlarged. Three hotels sprang up. Semi-weekly air service began and grew to three or four flights a day. A village hall was built for island officials, as well as fancy huts where tourists on shore excursions from luxury liners could take shelter from rainshowers. Local artisans took to making gaudy souvenirs for sale.

The French atomic testing facilities lured away young men on three- to six-month labor contracts. When they returned they built Western-type houses of imported plywood, glass and corrugated iron sheeting.

The Chinese store became self-service and stocked corned beef from Madagascar, tinned butter from New Zealand, sardines from Portugal, salmon from Canada, frozen chicken from the United States, even shrimps from Greenland—all expensive. Bora Borans each year ate less native food and more of the imports. Some began to suffer from malnutrition.

The hotels employed men and women for menial labor, and their earnings went straight to the stores.

Missionaries from several minor sects brought unrest and dissent to families when they attempted to lure converts away from the predominantly native-run Methodist congregation.

Fights, drunkenness, family breakups

Outside the author's island home, a friend prepares a dish of coconut cream to be eaten with raw fish. Native food is wholesome, though exotic by Western standards.

It's true that as you get older, your body does slow down and regularity can become a problem. But it doesn't have to be.

You don't have to suffer from constipation...not when there's Serutan to help you.

PARADE'S SPECIAL

by LLOYD SHEARER

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

FREEDOM LOST The state of freedom throughout the world is in poor shape.

Only 19.6% of the people now live in free countries, according to Freedom House, a New York-based institution.

Some of the countries that have changed from "free" to "partly free" or "non-free" include El Salvador (partly free) and Argentina, Kuwait, Madagascar, Paraguay, Thailand and Uruguay (all non-free).

One of freedom's few bright spots, according to the survey, is Western Europe, where Portugal has been upgraded from partly free to free, with Spain about to join the same classification.

CRACKDOWN ON PORNOGRAPHY The Netherlands has long been regarded as one of the most permissive countries in Europe. Prostitution, perversion, pornography, drugs--almost anything goes.

This year, however, the story may be different. The Dutch government says it is tightening its moral reins.

Sex movies can no longer be shown in theaters with more than 50 seats, which means they can only be shown in private clubs. "Deep Throat," "French Blues" and other porno flicks have been driven out of the regular movie trade. An inquiry has also been made as to the possibility of limiting the number of sex boutiques and porno shops which have sprouted all over the country.

The largest political party in The Netherlands, the Socialist PVDA, claims that the anti-sex drive is illegal. But five attorneys general who are leading the Dutch cleanup campaign say they are determined to enforce the hitherto hardly used public decency laws.

JOHNNY MATHIS

TOM JONES

PERMISSION GRANTED Last month the South African government granted special permission to black singer Johnny Mathis to perform before racially mixed audiences in that country. Welsh singer Tom Jones was granted similar special permission when he toured.

Recently people of all races were allowed to swim together at South Africa's first multiracial beach, at Port Elizabeth on the Indian Ocean.

The local council at Port Elizabeth decided to remove the signs which designated separate beaches for whites, coloreds (mixed race), Indians, Chinese, Malays--and which banned blacks.

"The apartheid signs will stay down," says N.W. Anderson, council secretary, "unless the city planning department orders us to put them up again."

THE ATOMIC CLUB Argentina now has the capability to make an atomic bomb. So claims Capt. Carlos Castro Madero, chairman of Argentina's National Atomic Energy Commission.

"We have attained sufficient capacity to manufacture nuclear weapons," Castro Madero reports. "But if we built one, it would mean sacrificing our power-generating program. Besides, we could not keep it secret. Also, if we started to build a nuclear device, the industrialized countries would immediately suspend the needed supply of nuclear elements to our country."

continued

became more frequent. Tahitians had lived in close-knit, "extended families": babies were born, old folks died; the few idiots, cripples and homosexuals were tolerated; everyone had enough to eat at all times; marriage vows were unimportant, and children were always beloved. (In fact, there is no illegitimate child. I have seen grandmothers almost fight to adopt and raise grandchildren.)

Friends often ask me, "What do you do all day on an island like that?"

The answer is, "Nothing, really." With my friend Tuteau, I can sit under a casuarina pine for a couple of hours without saying a word. I used to poke him occasionally and ask, "What are you thinking about?" "Nothing," he would reply. That is often my own state of mind, and it feels very soothing.

From the moment I arrive until I depart, I go shirtless, wearing only the shortest shorts and thongs. That is all that is needed day or night. It has become the costume for all males, although we used to wear pareus, a single length of printed cotton which also served for nightwear. Many youths have gone into long pants, aping the foreigners in spite of the humid heat.

Unusual diet

Although visitors who stay for a day or two claim to admire Tahitian life, few could ever share it. On two occasions, I rashly invited visiting American couples to come and eat with us at home. Both turned out disastrously. Raw fish and breadfruit baked in the open fire and eaten with the fingers are not what they want or expect. Usually they exclaim, "How nice!"—and depart quickly. Actually, my family eats the healthiest, least-contaminated food available, totally lacking in additives, chemicals, sprays, preservatives—and certainly fresh.

Youngsters fly along our road on fancy motorcycles with all the gadgets attached. But in a few months the bikes will be found rusting to bits due to some breakdown of a small part not replaceable on Bora Bora. However, that doesn't bother anyone but me. The manufacturer will happily sell another.

But despite the march of "progress," certain things never change. The days and nights seem to flow by, the life a gentle monotone. The most beautiful time comes after 4-5 p.m., when it begins to cool gently and we take our last shower of cool, fresh water. An atmosphere of peace pervades everything. The smell of wood fires and cooking is in the air, the pulse seems to slow, people sit about chatting and enjoying the coolness of their skins.

Tuteau prepares a few special tidbits, a bit of juicy fried fish with garlic, some octopus in Tahitian curry, even an omelet if enough eggs have been found by the children. We eat leisurely in silence or, when the spirit moves us, trade ribald jokes. The rest of the relatives come and go. Mama Rua has dropped off into sleep, a girl is off to a dance, the youngest baby howls and is quickly given the breast.

Myrna, long ago adopted by Tuteau's mother and highly erratic, seems to produce babies without being too sure of the father; but that matters little. We all cuddle the latest addition, and it is happy with all our attention.

I feel close to my family and know a great deal about Polynesia; but even after 20 years of intimate association, I cannot bridge our different cultures and there is much that mystifies me. Their concept of time is strange to us who count every minute and live by a watch. "Aita pea pea?" (What does it matter?) is the appropriate remark on any distressing occasion.

Birth and death come, an unending chain. An aunt of the family died last time I was on the island. She died in the morning and was buried in the afternoon in the backyard (where all the deceased of the family lie). A coffin was made from crates obtained at the Chinese store, the local preacher spoke eloquently, we all wept a bit.

continued

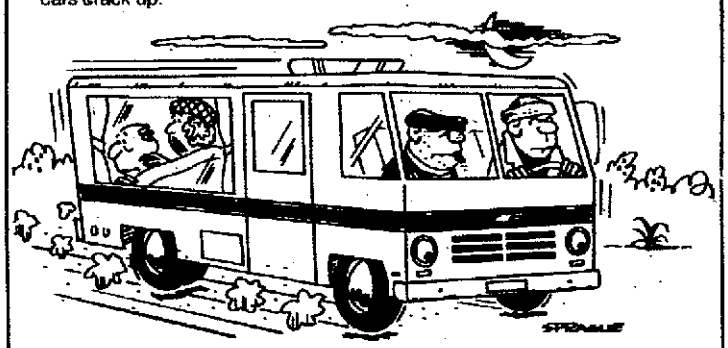

Meals are eaten with fingers and include such delicacies as cooked bananas, pineapple and Tahitian coffee. Islanders like wine, import it from France.

Observations™

Costly substitute. The nation is facing a natural gas shortage, as everybody probably knows. For years, we've been warning that the shortage is being caused by artificially low wellhead prices, the result of federal controls that stifle the incentive to explore for new supplies. Now, Clyde LaMotte's Washington Energy Memo points out the ultimate irony: one gas company plans to import gas from Algeria at a total cost of $4.57 per thousand cubic feet. But domestic producers can't charge more than a base rate of $1.42, and usually the ceiling is a lot less than that. What's gas really worth?

Hot rods. One out of every 100 cars in the country will be stolen this year—a haul worth about $1 billion. But the real cost is much higher. A stolen auto is 200 times more likely to be in an accident than the average car, and each year accidents involving stolen cars kill about 600 people and injure about 20,000. What can you do about it? Keep your car locked and in a secure place. That may sound simple, but remember: it isn't only the thieves who die when stolen cars crack up.

"HARRY! WAKE UP, WE'VE GOT BURGLARS!"

Symphony on wheels. Can you guess how many radio stations around the nation play classical music? The answer: more than 750. Knowing where they are on your radio dial can make life easier on long auto trips, and now there's a guide to tell you. Called Musica, the booklet covers stations in the 48 continental states. It's available for $3.00, plus 50 cents for postage and handling, from Musica Publishing Company, Box 1266IB, Edison, New Jersey 08817. A device to tune the inside of your car, so to speak.

990 days and 7,000 miles. Those numbers tell something of Henry Morton Stanley's incredible journey. Starting in 1874, he traveled the length of the Congo River to fill in many blank spaces on the map of Africa. His story is the seventh episode of Ten Who Dared, the "Mobil Showcase" series on great explorers. Check your local TV listings for the time and station. Stanley's exploits (and many others) are also described in a beautiful 336-page book based on the series. You can obtain it by sending a check or money order for $14.95, plus applicable state and local taxes, to: Ten Who Dared, P.O. Box 1934, Kansas City, Missouri 64140.

Finally, Vantage Longs.

The first long cigarette to bring good taste to low-tar smoking.

Like a lot of smokers you may like the idea of a longer cigarette. You may also want low tar.

But longer cigarettes usually have more tar.

Well, Vantage just wouldn't go along with that.

So we worked. Until we could perfect a longer cigarette with the famous Vantage combination of full flavor and low tar.

Not the lowest long cigarette you can find. But very possibly the lowest that you will enjoy.

New Vantage Longs. A blend of flavor-rich tobaccos with tar levels held down to the point where good taste still comes through.

That's the Vantage point. And that's the point of Vantage Longs. Never before has there been a long cigarette quite like it.

Try a pack today and see if you go along with us.

PARADISE CONTINUED

At night, I bought some wine, and we recounted episodes of the aunt's life. We became mellow and recalled funny incidents. The young people, not burdened too much with grief, started to play again. We all felt it had been an eventful day.

Tahitian life deep down is really very complex. Sometimes hippies come with only their backpacks, hoping to live off the land and the people. They do not realize that every inch of land is privately owned, as is every coconut or banana tree.

The Bora Borans quickly begin to observe that these people pilfer, do not wash, look unkempt, sometimes ask for food. Then the islanders become indignant and complain to the chief or gendarme. He generally acts with uncommon speed, and the beachcomber must leave the island at once.

Harrington with string of fish that will be fried or eaten raw with lemon juice.

Final blow: TV

Of all the sad things that have happened to Bora Bora, the saddest is the arrival of television. It comes in via two intervening islands from Papeete. Now, for four or five hours every day, native eyes are glued to the pale screen to watch politicians haggling in French, news reports of faraway unrest, and American cowboys and policemen shooting everything in sight and shouting at each other in stilted, dubbed-in French.

Next we will be getting electricity from a generating plant. The road is being paved. From year to year, a simple, healthy economy is being replaced by a complex money economy.

The young people totter to church on platform soles and dance to noisy imported bands. The elderly miss their culture, the lovely, haunting folksongs, the closeness of family and village.

I feel nostalgic about the early years when these jolts had not yet occurred; before missionary youths—dressed in black pants, shirts and ties—began to befuddle my friends; before hundreds of tourists surged ashore from every cruiser to snap random pictures of everything, rather than use their eyes and senses to feel the island.

Each year I am sure I can no longer stand new shocks. But each year I am also captivated anew by the warmth of my family and many friends.

"Would you like to live there always?" I am sometimes asked. Well, after six weeks or so, I begin to wonder what goes on in the rest of the world. My island friends couldn't care less, but I become restless. Parting is always painful: my family sulks, suppresses tears. I, too, am upset, but I always reassure them—and myself—that I will come back again next year, no matter what progress may hold in store.

Family portrait: Four generations outside Bora Bora home, ranging from 84-year-old Mama Rua to 4-month-old Christian. Author's friend Tuteau wears white shirt.

Read this and cry.

Froilan lives in the highlands of Guatemala in a one-room hut with dirt floors and no sanitary facilities. Labor there is so cheap that, for men like Froilan's father, hard work and long hours still mean a life of poverty. But now life is changing for Froilan.

Her name? We don't know. We found her wandering the streets of a large city in South America. Her mother is a beggar. What will become of this little girl? No one knows. In her country, she's just one of thousands doomed to poverty.

The world is full of children like these who desperately need someone to care, like the family who sponsors Froilan.

It costs them $15 a month, and it gives Froilan so very much. Now he eats regularly. He gets medical care. He goes to school. Froilan writes to his sponsors and they write to him. They share something very special.

Since 1938 the Christian Children's Fund has helped hundreds of thousands of children. But so many more need your help. Become a sponsor. You needn't send any money now—you can "meet" the child assigned to your care first. Just fill out and mail the coupon. You'll receive the child's photograph, background information, and detailed instructions on how to write to the child. If you wish to sponsor the child, simply send in your first monthly check or money order for $15 within 10 days. If not, return the photo and other materials so we may ask someone else to help.

Take this opportunity to "meet" a child who needs your help. Somewhere in the world, there's a suffering child who will share something very special with you. Love.

For the love of a hungry child.

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

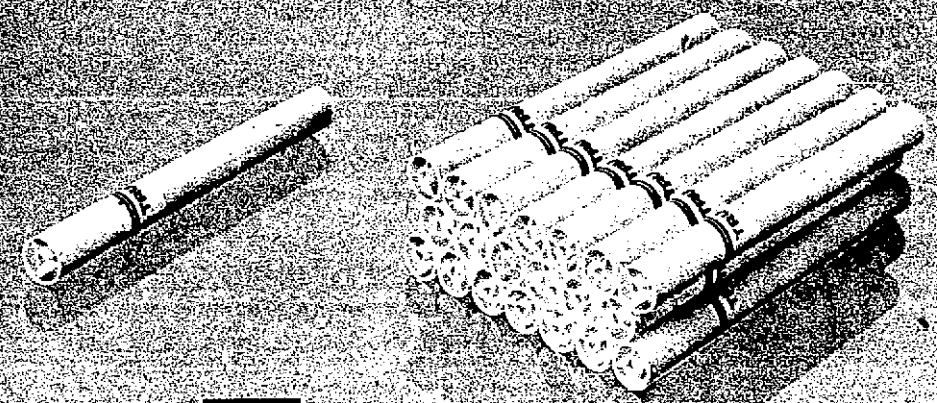

FLIP YOUR PHOTOS: You can display 24 photos, two at a time, in this new unit that advances them endlessly as you flip one panel after another into place. It's available in standard snapshot sizes—3½" x 3½" and 3½" x 5"—and can be used for other purposes, such as holding recipes. $15 ppd. *Adverama, Dept. PP, 18911 W. 7 Mile Rd., Detroit, Mich. 48219. 60-SECOND BUTTON REPLACEMENT: You can now replace a button in less than a minute (claims the maker), with no sewing required. This system consists of a special tool and strong, thread-like, pliable plastic fasteners. The fasteners come in black, pearl and brown—in a long size for heavy garments, a shorter version for lightweight. Useful, too, for fastening buttons on homemade clothes. Suggested retail price: $1.75. Sewing Notion Division, Risdon Mfg., Dept. PP, 2100 S. Main St., Waterbury, Conn. 06706.

BATHROOM READING RACK: Designed to keep reading materials—magazines, newspapers, books—within handy reach and the bathroom uncluttered, this 10⅛" x 11½" chrome steel rack has hooks positioned so you can simply hang it over a toilet tissue holder (recessed or standard) or any towel bar. $2.29 in stores. *Grayline Housewares Inc., Dept. It fits into existing 2⅛" bore and 2¾" backset, is rated eight times stronger than a key and knob set, and only a screwdriver is needed for installation. Because it cannot be opened without a key even if glass is broken, it is ideal for a door with glass panes. It fits right- or left-hand doors, in- or out-swinging. Of steel with black finish, it measures 31½"W x 41½"H x 15"D and can be set up without screws or tools. $149.50. Cramer Products Corp., Dept. PP, 171 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10016.

IVORY HUNTERS HAVE HALVED KENYA'S ELEPHANT POPULATION IN THE LAST TWO YEARS

EXTINCTION EN ROUTE The last great wildlife herds of this world are facing rapid extinction.

The herds of elephant, zebra and rhinoceros that once roamed the East African plains are being decimated, experts say, as a result of man's greed, continuing drought and other conditions.

In the last eight months in Kenya's Tsavo Park, more than 1040 elephants, 235 rhinos and 20 leopards were reported killed. In two years the elephant population has declined from around 40,000 to half that number.

In Nairobi National Park, the number of zebra has decreased in two years from 15,000 to 1500.

Poachers with machine guns, poison darts, wire snares and other weapons have combined with corrupt authorities, it is said, to bring about this wholesale slaughter.

More than 600 tons of Kenyan ivory has been imported into Hong Kong and Japan in recent years. About 36,000 elephants would have to be shot to obtain 600 tons of ivory.

Figures are not available from Tanzania, Uganda and Ethiopia, but the herds there are also en route to extinction.

In recent years, thousands of elephants have been slaughtered in Tanzania, the ivory shipped to Communist China to help pay for the railroad which the Chinese constructed from Dar es Salaam to the copper fields of Zambia.

Idi Amin, president for life of Uganda, reportedly engages in the "sport"--a favorite of his--of gunning down large numbers of elephants with a high-powered machine gun.

On Kenya's Lake Nakuru, where a million pink flamingos used to gather, almost half have died or left because of industrial pollution.

The World Wildlife Fund, which contributed $25 million to Kenya since 1961, announced some months ago that it no longer would send Kenya any financial aid.

WOMEN TRAFFIC COPS Long a male bastion, Moscow's traffic police have been infiltrated by women. The first female graduates of a special school run by GAI, the State Automobile Inspectorate, were recently assigned duty in Moscow.

From London with love

by Beth Merriman

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Our British cousins have discovered the joys of hot dogs and hamburgers. American tourists have returned from London with equal enthusiasm for fish and chips. We think a kitchen party featuring this fare would be a hit with everyone.

To make the "cornets," as the English call the newspaper cornucopias in which they serve the fish and chips, we found it amusing to use comic strip pages. Line them with aluminum foil, roll into cones and secure with transparent tape or staples. With a little practice you'll discover the right size for individual portions. Stuff a little paper toweling into the bottom of each before putting in the hot fish and chips.

Serve hot malt vinegar from a sprinkle bottle, salt and—to please American palates—catchup. Beer for adults, root beer for the younger crowd, fun for everyone.

fish and chips

2 packages (about 12 ounces each) frozen fish fillets
or
1½ pounds fresh fish fillets*
2 eggs, separated
½ cup beer
¼ cup milk
1 cup all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon seasoned salt
¼ teaspoon seasoned pepper
1 bag (2 pounds) frozen french fried potatoes

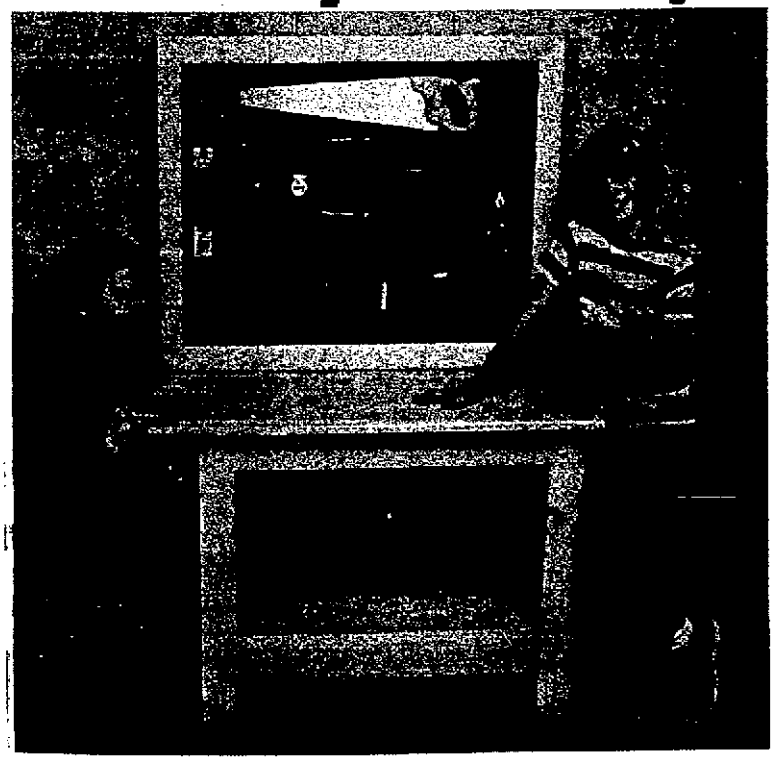

*Any firm white fish, such as sole, flounder, haddock, cod, whiting, etc.

Partially defrost fillets so they can be separated. Cut into pieces about 3" x 1½". Place on paper towels to dry. Beat egg yolks until thick and light. Blend in beer, milk, flour and seasonings. Mix until smooth. Beat egg whites stiff but not dry; fold in. Pat fillets dry. Dip into batter, a few pieces at a time; lift out and drain slightly with fork or slotted spoon.

Fry in deep fat heated to 375 degrees for two to three minutes, or until golden brown and puffed. Drain on absorbent paper. Meanwhile heat french fried potatoes as directed on package. Serve fish and french fries together in "cornets," as described above. Makes six servings.

My favorite jokes

by Leona Toppel

EDITOR'S NOTE: Leona Toppel started her career writing for Phyllis Diller. Soon she was turning out jokes for Bob Hope, Rich Little, George Kirby, Marty Allen, Kaye Ballard and other top comics. Nowadays, she does a lot of after-dinner speaking and is a frequent guest on TV shows in Chicago.

Asked what makes someone go into comedy, she says: "I think you're born with a knack for comedy—maybe it's defective genes." Leona recalls that once, when she gave a talk on comedy, "a lady who had been sitting in the front row—very somber—came up to me and said, 'Leona, your talk was so funny that I almost laughed.'"

Here are some of Leona Toppel's jokes:

I think it's great that we're having sexual equality in all areas. I was discussing that very point with my Avon man this morning.

IF YOU HAVE IRON POOR BLOOD ALL THE VITAMINS IN THE WORLD WON'T HELP

Iron poor blood is the most widespread nutritional ailment in America today. And taking vitamins can't help, because vitamins don't contain iron.

What you need is Geritol, every day. Geritol is so rich in iron, just one tablet contains more iron than even a pound of calf's liver. Plus vitamins important to your health.

Geritol's iron can actually build your blood day by day. That's what makes it different from vitamin pills—and so important to you.

FREEDOM LOST The state of freedom throughout the world is in poor shape.

Only 19.6% of the people now live in free countries, according to Freedom House, a New York-based institution.

Some of the countries that have changed from "free" to "partly free" or "non-free" include El Salvador (partly free) and Argentina, Kuwait, Madagascar, Paraguay, Thailand and Uruguay (all non-free).

One of freedom's few bright spots, according to the survey, is Western Europe, where Portugal has been upgraded from partly free to free, with Spain about to join the same classification.

CRACKDOWN ON PORNOGRAPHY The Netherlands has long been regarded as one of the most permissive countries in Europe. Prostitution, perversion, pornography, drugs--almost anything goes.

This year, however, the story may be different. The Dutch government says it is tightening its moral reins.

Sex movies can no longer be shown in theaters with more than 50 seats, which means they can only be shown in private clubs. "Deep Throat," "French Blues" and other porno flicks have been driven out of the regular movie trade. An inquiry has also been made as to the possibility of limiting the number of sex boutiques and porno shops which have sprouted all over the country.

The largest political party in The Netherlands, the Socialist PVDA, claims that the anti-sex drive is illegal. But five attorneys general who are leading the Dutch cleanup campaign say they are determined to enforce the hitherto hardly used public decency laws.

PERMISSION GRANTED Last month the South African government granted special permission to black singer Johnny Mathis to perform before racially mixed audiences in that country. Welsh singer Tom Jones was granted similar special permission when he toured.

Recently people of all races were allowed to swim together at South Africa's first multiracial beach, at Port Elizabeth on the Indian Ocean.

The local council at Port Elizabeth decided to remove the signs which designated separate beaches for whites, coloreds (mixed race), Indians, Chinese, Malays--and which banned blacks.

"The apartheid signs will stay down," says N.W. Anderson, council secretary, "unless the city planning department orders us to put them up again."

THE ATOMIC CLUB Argentina now has the capability to make an atomic bomb. So claims Capt. Carlos Castro Madero, chairman of Argentina's National Atomic Energy Commission.

"We have attained sufficient capacity to manufacture nuclear weapons," Castro Madero reports. "But if we built one, it would mean sacrificing our power-generating program. Besides, we could not keep it secret. Also, if we started to build a nuclear device, the industrialized countries would immediately suspend the needed supply of nuclear elements to our country."

Liquid Natural Gas Tankers Rouse Fears of Catastrophe

by Alexander Cockburn & James Ridgeway

In the summer of 1883, a gigantic explosion echoed across the world. The island of Krakatoa, off the coast of Indonesia, simply disappeared into the sea. Its remains were blown 17 miles into the sky and dust particles filtered around the globe, causing extraordinary sunsets remembered by all who had seen them for years afterward. Tidal waves were observed as far away as the English Channel. The noise of the explosion was heard 3000 miles away. Thirty-six thousand people in the near vicinity were killed.

The cause of this catastrophe was a mighty volcanic eruption. Scientists now speculate that the unparalleled intensity of the blast was caused by the sudden mixture of lava with seawater, leading to the creation and release of vast amounts of energy. This theory carries a startling message for modern times. For scientists now worry that the modern industrial age may have unwittingly developed the conditions under which the "Krakatoa effect" could be repeated on a smaller scale hundreds of times around the globe.

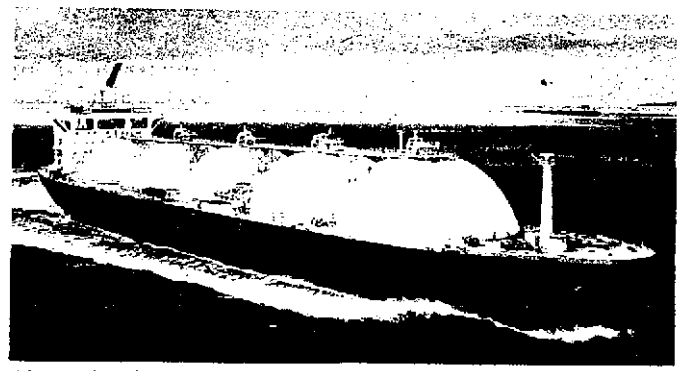

What frightens these scientists is not the specter of nuclear explosions with which mankind has lived since World War II, but an entirely new menace: liquefied natural gas. Natural gas, often found in the search for oil, is one of our most valuable fuels. It provides about one-third of all energy consumed in the United States. It is clean and, until recently, cheap. Now U.S. companies that produce and sell natural gas from the Southwest claim the resource is fast being exhausted and, in order to meet demands, they must look further and further afield.

Solution: import gas

While gas is a precious fuel in the U.S., in other parts of the world—the Middle East, Africa and Asia—it is regarded as of little use and burned off at the wellhead, its usefulness lost to mankind. One solution now being adopted by the oil and gas industries is to ship this foreign gas to the U.S.

Gas, of course, is an impractical cargo in its natural form. The solution has been to freeze it down into a liquid form at a temperature of about -260 degrees Fahrenheit. In this state, the gas is 1/600th of its original volume and becomes a practical shipping proposition.

Within the next few years, specially built tankers will begin transporting the liquefied gas from North Africa to ports up and down the Eastern Seaboard of the U.S. There are schemes to ship the gas from Asia and even Alaska to the West Coast by these tankers. Other countries are making similar plans. The small trade from North Africa to Europe is expected to increase, and a $3 billion project is well under way to ship liquid gas from Indonesia to Japan. The U.S. government, in fact, is issuing $730 million in loan guarantees to General Dynamics Corporation — the largest guarantee ever made to a single company—for the building of tankers to carry the gas from Indonesia. The U.S. also is negotiating with the Soviet Union to bring in gas from Siberia.

Mammoth tankers carrying liquefied natural gas may soon visit American ports. Artist's concept of the 936-foot-long ship shows five spherical tanks which together can hold some 33 million gallons of the potentially explosive fuel.

If all goes according to plan, within a decade or so, scores of these odd-looking ships will be crisscrossing the ocean and routinely sailing in and out of busy American ports with their cargoes of desperately needed fuel. As much as 15 percent of the nation's gas may soon be imported in this manner.

Both in government and industry, experts hail this development as an innovative answer to the energy crisis. But these same experts now are meeting with growing opposition to their plans. At the center of debate is the question of safety and the stark fact that the explosion of just one of these gas tankers in a U.S. port could kill upwards of 100,000 people.

Little real testing has been done on the safety of the new tankers that will carry the liquid gas in huge cylinders embedded in their hulls. In 1970 the U.S. Bureau of Mines mounted a brief experiment. A small quantity of liquid natural gas was dropped into an aquarium, which promptly blew up. Later the liquid gas was dropped into a pond, with equally explosive results. The bureau concluded in a report that no assurances can be offered "that these explosions could not scale up to damaging proportions in a massive spill." The scientists engaged in these experiments all recalled one of the few cases in which the effects of an accident involving liquid natural gas could actually be observed.

On Oct. 20, 1944, in Cleveland, Ohio, 2 million gallons of liquid natural gas burst from two storage tanks belonging to the East Ohio Gas Co. and created a firestorm. Liquid gas flowed down the streets and into the sewers. The slightest spark exploded it. Manhole covers sailed into the air and fell like bombs on the fleeing crowds. So intense was the heat that birds above the city burned alive as they flew. The streets became rivers of flame. Houses exploded. In the end, 29 acres of homes and stores were gutted and 131 people lost their lives. And the liquid gas tanks in Cleveland held only a small fraction of the amount carried by a modern tanker, which ranges from about 33 to 42 million gallons.

In Cleveland, rescue workers dig through ruins after giant 1944 firestorm—caused by 2 million gallons of escaped liquid gas—gutted 29 acres, killed 131. Experts say the explosion of a liquid-gas tanker would do far worse.

Safety studies urged

In recent months anxiety over the dangers of liquid natural gas has spread. No less a figure than Dr. Edward Teller, the nuclear physicist often viewed as the father of the H-bomb, is concerned: "The gas shortage is apt to become very serious and therefore the importation of liquid natural gas may become really necessary. . . . Time and money spent on the safety of liquid natural gas is less than one percent of what has been spent on the safety of nuclear reactors. I am suggesting that, in view of our need for liquid natural gas, very greatly increased attention be paid to safety studies."

The Coast Guard is so concerned that it has established special procedures protecting gas tankers. In Boston, where small shipments of the liquid gas are already being off-loaded, the shipping lanes are cleared of other traffic long in advance. Fire departments are placed on standby alert. Tankers may only enter the harbor if visibility exceeds two miles. At the first sign of a thunderstorm, all unloading ceases.

Congress concerned

Citizens' groups around likely liquid natural gas terminals (such as Staten Island, N.Y., and Los Angeles) are opposing the building of such facilities. In the Congress, in the Federal Power Commission and in the Department of Transportation, politicians and officials are nervously considering improved safety precautions. Committees in the House may begin public inquiries shortly and could well involve testimony on the likelihood of the "Krakatoa effect" occurring in the event of an accident.

Over the last few months, this concern has been redoubled. Oil tanker disasters, including the explosion of one tanker in Los Angeles harbor and the wreck of another off Nantucket, have brought home in brutal fashion the result of lax safety measures on fuel shipments to the U.S. These calamities would pale in comparison with any accident to a liquid natural gas tanker. It is a race against time in more ways than one: the race to head off another energy crisis; the race of the tanker men to get their new fleets under way; the race of government regulators to catch up on safety precautions and head off what could be a terrifying catastrophe.

Finally, Vantage Longs.

The first long cigarette to bring good taste to low-tar smoking.

Like a lot of smokers you may like the idea of a longer cigarette. You may also want low tar.

But longer cigarettes usually have more tar.

Well, Vantage just wouldn't go along with that.

So we worked. Until we could perfect a longer cigarette with the famous Vantage combination of full flavor and low tar.

Not the lowest long cigarette you can find. But very possibly the lowest that you will enjoy.

New Vantage Longs. A blend of flavor-rich tobaccos with tar levels held down to the point where good taste still comes through.

That's the Vantage point. And that's the point of Vantage Longs. Never before has there been a long cigarette quite like it.

Try a pack today and see if you go along with us.

IVORY HUNTERS HAVE HALVED KENYA'S ELEPHANT POPULATION IN THE LAST TWO YEARS

EXTINCTION EN ROUTE The last great wildlife herds of this world are facing rapid extinction.

The herds of elephant, zebra and rhinoceros that once roamed the East African plains are being decimated, experts say, as a result of man's greed, continuing drought and other conditions.

In the last eight months in Kenya's Tsavo Park, more than 1040 elephants, 235 rhinos and 20 leopards were reported killed. In two years the elephant population has declined from around 40,000 to half that number.

In Nairobi National Park, the number of zebra has decreased in two years from 15,000 to 1500.

Poachers with machine guns, poison darts, wire snares and other weapons have combined with corrupt authorities, it is said, to bring about this wholesale slaughter.

More than 600 tons of Kenyan ivory has been imported into Hong Kong and Japan in recent years. About 36,000 elephants would have to be shot to obtain 600 tons of ivory.

Figures are not available from Tanzania, Uganda and Ethiopia, but the herds there are also en route to extinction.

In recent years, thousands of elephants have been slaughtered in Tanzania, the ivory shipped to Communist China to help pay for the railroad which the Chinese constructed from Dar es Salaam to the copper fields of Zambia.

Idi Amin, president for life of Uganda, reportedly engages in the "sport"--a favorite of his--of gunning down large numbers of elephants with a high-powered machine gun.

On Kenya's Lake Nakuru, where a million pink flamingos used to gather, almost half have died or left because of industrial pollution.

The World Wildlife Fund, which contributed $25 million to Kenya since 1961, announced some months ago that it no longer would send Kenya any financial aid.

WOMEN TRAFFIC COPS Long a male bastion, Moscow's traffic police have been infiltrated by women. The first female graduates of a special school run by GAI, the State Automobile Inspectorate, were recently assigned duty in Moscow.

Tidal waves were observed as far away as the English Channel. The noise of the explosion was heard 3000 miles away. Thirty-six thousand people in the near vicinity were killed.

The cause of this catastrophe was a mighty volcanic eruption. Scientists now speculate that the unparalleled intensity of the blast was caused by the sudden mixture of lava with seawater, leading to the creation and release of vast amounts of energy. This theory carries a startling message for modern times. For scientists now worry that the modern industrial age may have unwittingly developed the conditions under which the "Krakatoa effect" could be repeated on a smaller scale hundreds of times around the globe.

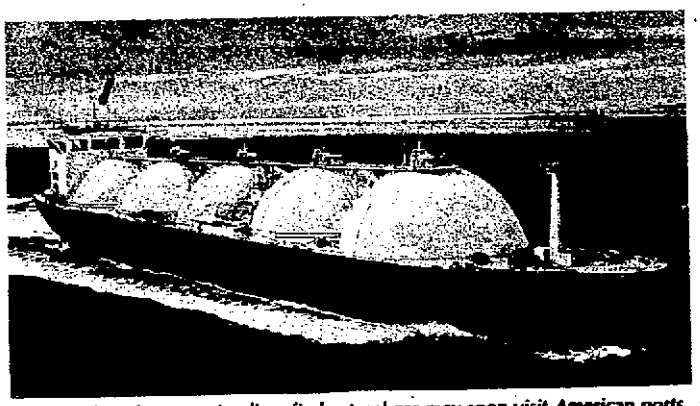

What frightens these scientists is not the specter of nuclear explosions with which mankind has lived since World War II, but an entirely new menace: liquefied natural gas. Natural gas, often found in the search for oil, is one of our most valuable fuels. It provides about one-third of all energy consumed in the United States. It is clean and, until recently, cheap. Now U.S. companies that produce and sell natural gas from the Southwest claim the resource is fast being exhausted and, in order to meet demands, they must look further and further afield.

Solution: import gas

While gas is a precious fuel in the U.S., in other parts of the world—the Middle East, Africa and Asia—it is regarded as of little use and burned off at the wellhead, its usefulness lost to mankind. One solution now being adopted by the oil and gas industries is to ship this foreign gas to the U.S.

Gas, of course, is an impractical cargo in its natural form. The solution has been to freeze it down into a liquid form at a temperature of about -260 degrees Fahrenheit. In this state, the gas is 1/600th of its original volume and becomes a practical shipping proposition.

Within the next few years, specially built tankers will begin transporting the liquefied gas from North Africa to ports up and down the Eastern Seaboard of the U.S. There are schemes to ship the gas from Asia and even Alaska to the West Coast by these tankers. Other countries are making similar plans. The small trade from North Africa to Europe is expected to increase, and a $3 billion project is well under way to ship liquid gas from Indonesia to Japan. The U.S. government, in fact, is issuing $730 million in loan guarantees to General Dynamics Corporation — the largest guarantee ever made to a single company—for the building of tankers to carry the gas from Indonesia. The U.S. also is negotiating with the Soviet Union to bring in gas from Siberia.

Mammoth tankers carrying liquefied natural gas may soon visit American ports. Artist's concept of the 936-foot-long ship shows five spherical tanks which together can hold some 33 million gallons of the potentially explosive fuel.

If all goes according to plan, within a decade or so, scores of these odd-looking ships will be crisscrossing the ocean and routinely sailing in and out of busy American ports with their cargoes of desperately needed fuel. As much as 15 percent of the nation's gas may soon be imported in this manner.

Both in government and industry, experts hail this development as an innovative answer to the energy crisis. But these same experts now are meeting with growing opposition to their plans. At the center of debate is the question of safety and the stark fact that the explosion of just one of these gas tankers in a U.S. port could kill upwards of 100,000 people.

Little real testing has been done on the safety of the new tankers that will carry the liquid gas in huge cylinders embedded in their hulls. In 1970 the U.S. Bureau of Mines mounted a brief experiment. A small quantity of liquid natural gas was dropped into an aquarium, which promptly blew up. Later the liquid gas was dropped into a pond, with equally explosive results. The bureau concluded in a report that no assurances can be offered "that these explosions could not scale up to damaging proportions in a massive spill." The scientists engaged in these experiments all recalled one of the few cases in which the effects of an accident involving liquid natural gas could actually be observed.

On Oct. 20, 1944, in Cleveland, Ohio, 2 million gallons of liquid natural gas burst from two storage tanks belonging to the East Ohio Gas Co. and created a firestorm. Liquid gas flowed down the streets and into the sewers. The slightest spark exploded it. Manhole covers sailed into the air and fell like bombs on the fleeing crowds. So intense was the heat that birds above the city burned alive as they flew. The streets became rivers of flame. Houses exploded. In the end, 29 acres of homes and stores were gutted and 131 people lost their lives. And the liquid gas tanks in Cleveland held only a small fraction of the amount carried by a modern tanker, which ranges from about 33 to 42 million gallons.

In Cleveland, rescue workers dig through ruins after giant 1944 firestorm—caused by 2 million gallons of escaped liquid gas—gutted 29 acres, killed 131. Experts say the explosion of a liquid-gas tanker would do far worse.

Safety studies urged

In recent months anxiety over the dangers of liquid natural gas has spread. No less a figure than Dr. Edward Teller, the nuclear physicist often viewed as the father of the H-bomb, is concerned: "The gas shortage is apt to become very serious and therefore the importation of liquid natural gas may become really necessary. . . . Time and money spent on the safety of liquid natural gas is less than one percent of what has been spent on the safety of nuclear reactors. I am suggesting that, in view of our need for liquid natural gas, very greatly increased attention be paid to safety studies."

The Coast Guard is so concerned that it has established special procedures protecting gas tankers. In Boston, where small shipments of the liquid gas are already being off-loaded, the shipping lanes are cleared of other traffic long in advance. Fire departments are placed on standby alert. Tankers may only enter the harbor if visibility exceeds two miles. At the first sign of a thunderstorm, all unloading ceases.

Congress concerned

Citizens' groups around likely liquid natural gas terminals (such as Staten Island, N.Y., and Los Angeles) are opposing the building of such facilities. In the Congress, in the Federal Power Commission and in the Department of Transportation, politicians and officials are nervously considering improved safety precautions. Committees in the House may begin public inquiries shortly and could well involve testimony on the likelihood of the "Krakatoa effect" occurring in the event of an accident.

Over the last few months, this concern has been redoubled. Oil tanker disasters, including the explosion of one tanker in Los Angeles harbor and the wreck of another off Nantucket, have brought home in brutal fashion the result of lax safety measures on fuel shipments to the U.S. These calamities would pale in comparison with any accident to a liquid natural gas tanker. It is a race against time in more ways than one: the race to head off another energy crisis; the race of the tanker men to get their new fleets under way; the race of government regulators to catch up on safety precautions and head off what could be a terrifying catastrophe.
